Our Government have been recently considering the unadjusted subjects in dispute between this country and Spain, and particularly the Eldorado affair, with a view to again strongly press their prompt settlement. Our Minister to the Court of Madrid has, by instruction of his Government, been endeavoring to effect a new treaty with Spain to supersede that of 1795, with provisions rendering intercourse between Americans and subjects of Spain free from complicity, but he has been mortified with Spanish governmental procrastination.

Georgia Legislature.

MILLEDGEVILLE Nov. 7, 1855.

The Legislature of this State met on Monday. Mr. Bailey was elected speaker of the Senate and Mr. Styles speaker of the House—both Democrats.

The governor sent in his message on Tuesday. It is a very voluminous document, and is of course mainly devoted to State matters. He recommends the Legislature to provide for calling a State convention in case Congress refuses to admit Kansas into the Union on account of her being a slaveholding State; in which case he advises a disruption of the Union, but hopes the patriotism of the North will avert such a calamity.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8, 1855.

THE result in Maryland has utterly confounded the Administration, but they were prepared for the overthrow in Massachusetts and New York.

Reverdy Johnson and Senator Pratt took strong ground against Know-Nothingism, but their efforts signally failed.

Prince John will have to fork over about five hundred dollars to a distinguished southerner in a bet on the New York election.

Gambling on the Maryland election has been practised to a large extent, and the Democrats have suffered some.

Departure of Shipping at Boston.

BOSTON, Nov. 8, 1855.

AFTER a long spell of easterly wind, it came round to the west this forenoon, and a large fleet of over 300 sail of square rigged vessels and coasters went to sea.

One of the curiosities of Paris is the enormous vine which ornaments the Court of a house in the Rue des Marais, St. Germaine. It is said to have been planted by Racine, and supposing that he did it in the last year of his life, the vine must be now about 159 years of age, as that celebrated writer died in 1699. It is this year in a flourishing condition, and covered with fruit.

A man hath joy by the answer of his mouth; and a kind word spoken in due season, how good it is!

Latest News from Europe.

Arrival of the Asia at Halifax.

BY THE HOUSE PRINTING TELEGRAPH.

HALIFAX, Wednesday, Nov. 7, 1855.

THE Royal Mail steamship Asia, Capt. Lott, from Liverpool, at half-past 10 A. M. on the 27th October, arrived here about 10 o'clock last night.

At noon on the 1st inst., in lat. 49 39, lon. 63 24, the Asia passed the ship Perthshire steering east.

The Asia sailed at 1 o'clock this morning for Boston, where she will be due about 10 o'clock A. M. on Thursday.

The steamship North Star arrived out at Southampton at 4 P. M. on the 26th ult.

THE WAR.

The announcement that the Russians had blown up Fort Nicholas and their other works at Otchakoff is confirmed.

The principal portion of the news from Sebastopol consists of obscure accounts of the maneuvers of the two armies in the field, the substance of which appears to be that the Allies are moving forward systematically in strong force, and that the Russians are retiring in good order back upon their fortified positions.

The French and Sardinians had advanced from the Tchernaya and Baidar line, and correspondence of the 13th, says the French posts were within nine miles of Bakshi-Seral; also close to the Russian position at Albat and Airgal, where, if at all, the Russians must make a stand.

The Russians have thirteen infantry divisions opposite the Allies lines, namely; One division of guards at the fortifications on the north plateau, two at Inkerman, two on McKenzie's ridge, and the remaining eight guard the series of plateaus from Bakshi-Seral down to Aitodor, and the river courses of the Belbec, Katicha and Alma.

English correspondence to October 12 supposes that the Russians from the north side of Sebastopol were falling back by detachments on Perekop; there was, however, no diminution of the fire from the forts and batteries on the north side of the harbor. Their fire during the last four days had been very active, and was chiefly directed against the Malakoff and the French quarters in the western part of the south side.

The British and French were engaged in clearing away the ruins of the city.

A Russian dispatch of the 22d via Berlin says: "The Allies, 40,000 strong, had marched from Eupatoria toward Toulat; but on the 23d, perceiving our lancers on their left flank, they returned behind Aktatschi."

Nothing has occurred between Kinburn and Nicholaieff.

English letters say that the gunboats reconnoitered to near Nicholateff.

The latest dispatch from St. Petersburg, dated October 26, says: "The whole of the militia has been ordered on the march to reenforce the army of the South under Gen. Luders. Two liners, sixteen frigates and some gunboats have entered the Dneiper."

The Emperor Alexander had left Nicholaieff for Elizabsgood, 130 miles northward. The usual story is revived that his reason is affected.

There is nothing more definite as to the resignation or recall of Gen. Simpson than was brought out by the Arago.

The London Post says that a new Commander is appointed, but does not give his name. Rumor mentions Sir De Lacy Evans, Cordington Markham, Colin Campbell, and others.

Major Delafield, Major Murdock, Jr., and Captain McLellan, American officers, had arrived in the camp. A British general order provides them with rations during their stay in the Crimea.

Osman Pacha, who was taken at Sinope, had been exchanged.

Miss Nightingale had returned to Sebastopol.

General Wyndham, the hero of the Redan, has the command of the fourth British Division.

The Moniteur publishes a list of the stores found in Sebastopol, comprising a million shot and cartridges, and half a million pounds of gunpowder.

The land strength of the Allies in the Crimea, including the sick, is officially reported at 210,000 men.

A St. Petersburg letter of the 15th says, the Allied successes had caused despondency, yet everything indicates the intention of Russia to continue the war. Preparations were making for a fourteenth levy and enrolment of the local militia. Prayers were offered for the Emperor's safe return from the Crimea.

The attitude of Sweden was regarded in St. Petersburg with increasing suspicion.

THE BALTIC.

The weather was bad, and the English fleet near Nargen, was preparing to leave. The gunboats at Elsinore had been ordered to England.

The coasting trade was again springing up, since the removal of the fleet.

ASIA.

When the Russians in Asia heard of the fall of Sebastopol, they, on the 29th of September made their attack upon Kars. The Turkish details of the affair are received. The Russian loss is reported at 2,000.

Two Turkish redoubts were lost and retaken four times. The Hungarian General, Kemmty, commanded the Turks, in the absence of the English General, Williams.

The Russian General, Mouravieff, with 80 guns, cannot continue the siege.

The Russians have fortified all the passes leading to Tiflis.

Omar Pasha was at Souchem Kale.

GREAT BRITAIN.

A new coalition of Lord John Russell, Bright Gladstone and D'Israeli, was still talked of.

Lord Palmerston wishes the Earl of Shaftsbury to accept the vacancy in the Colonial Secretaryship, owing to Sir Wm. Molesworth's death, but his colleagues oppose. The name of Lord John Russell is also mentioned for the office.

The London Times has a noticeable article (editorial) respecting American expansion, and says the English Government is omitting no opportunity of re-enforcing the West India squadron, and thus interposing a powerful barrier between Britain and the North American continent. At this moment says The Times, North America is in profound peace with the whole world, yet it is not the less true that in her ports are fitting out at this moment piratical fillibustering expeditions destined to carry war and bloodshed into the dominions of an unoffending neighbor. We cannot believe that those who are now engaged in enrolling unhappy men for these desperate and criminal enterprises fully contemplate the success of a descent upon Ireland, for instance, as probable or even possible. If we can prevent the expedition from sailing, or intercept them in mid ocean, we shall have done much toward averting the dangers which must arise should they be carried out to their natural developments."

An important discussion had been held in the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce on the present British monetary crisis. Resolutions were adopted that, although there is no cause for immediate alarm the Government should anticipate and prevent any breakdown of public confidence by suspending the operation of the Bank act of 1844, as during the crisis of 1847. The London Times opposes this expedient.

The City of London had presented an address to the Queen upon the glorious successes of the allied army, to which the Queen made a suitable reply, promising a vigorous continuance of the war.

The London papers comment strongly on Admiral Stirlings dilatory movements in the Pacific, by which, on the 20th of May, he permitted the Russian fleet to escape.

Lord Wharncliffe, and Mr. C. Lucas, Members of Parliament, are dead.

The New York clipper ship Carrier Pigeon, abandoned at sea, was towed by a steamer into Cork harbor. The captain and crew afterward arrived there in a boat.

The ship America went ashore at Gibraltar, and became a total wreck.

Sir Charles Napier was canvassing Southwark (London) for Parliament, vice Molesworth, with good chances of success.

FRANCE.

The Bank of France has arranged to obtain some millions of francs in silver from the Bank of Amsterdam, and it was rumored that it also intended to issue twenty-five and fifty franc bills.

The Paris papers say that splendid gold mines have been discovered in Cayenne.

BELGIUM.

The Chambers are to meet on the 14th of November.

The King of Belgium actively offers his mediation in the war.

SPAIN.

Cholera continued to prevail badly at Madrid, and about 100 cases were reported daily.

Gen. Tacon, formerly Governor of Cuba, had died of cholera at the age of 80.

ITALY.

Distress from cholera, scarcity, and crime was on the increase in Tuscany.

Russia has come to an amicable understanding with the Pope, respecting the nomination of Catholic Bishops in Poland.

Rumors were current that the Government of Naples had committed a gross outrage against some American citizens, but the particulars are not to hand.

DENMARK.

The Ministry is reconstituted. M. Balg is Minister of the Interior and President of the Council.

The name of Congress, says a letter from Berlin, has been erroneously given to the meeting called by Denmark for the settlement of the Sound dues. Denmark has simply invited the States of the Baltic, namely, Prussia, Russia, Sweden, Mecklenburg, and Lubec, to a conference, in order to come to an understanding with them as to the possibility of purchasing the dues.

As no invitation of the kind has been addressed either to England, France, or the United States, the meeting cannot in any way be termed a European Congress.

GREECE.

The Ministry has been changed again. M. Condostonato is Minister of Finance; Christopould, Public Instruction; Bolte, the Interior; Tricoussi, Foreign Affairs.

EGYPT.

The Pasha of Egypt has prohibited the export of grain after the 6th of January next, owing to a shortcoming in the rise of the Nile.

THE LAST MAN OF THEM ALL.—Mr. Benjamin Pickard, formerly of Niagara Township, paid a visit to his old neighbors here, a few weeks ago, hale and hearty as a man of ninety-two can be. Mr. Pickard is the last survivor of the celebrated corps of Butler's Rangers, composed of American loyalists, which distinguished itself so much in the Revolutionary War in the States. This regiment, seven hundred strong, was raised chiefly in the valley of the Mohawk, N. Y., and was commanded by Col. J. Butler. Shortly after the peace of 1783, it was disbanded at Niagara, the men and officers all receiving liberal grants of land in this and the adjoining townships. Mr. Pickard served through the war as a drummer in this famous regiment. He now resides in Blenheim.—[Niagara Mail.

THE Scientific American says the past year we have known the spinal marrow of an ox or cow applied by three different persons, with the most satisfactory results, in relieving the pain and securing speedy cures of their felons. This, we are confident, will be very useful information to many persons. The spinal marrow should be applied fresh every four hours for two days.

MISS CASTLE, grand-daughter of Admiral De Grasse, of revolutionary memory, and Miss Shubrick, daughter of Commodore Shubrick, of our Navy, both took the veil as Sisters of Mercy, at Louisville, on the 9th of October.

"The State of Protestantism in Europe."

THIS was the title of a discourse delivered last evening by the Rev. William Rey, in the Church of the Puritans, Union square. The reverend speaker is a native of the city of Geneva, and one of the prominent members of the Evangelical socity of that city, established in 1831. His discourse was delivered extempore and was received with marked attention by a crowded audience. He took a cursory view of the present state of Europe, looked upon the present war as a means designed by God for the spread of the gospel among the nations of the East and dwelt for some time on the immense exertions to be put forth for bringing all the nations of Europe under the sway of Evangelical Christianity. Geneva he described as possessing the utmost freedom of speech and of conscience—a focus, from which is continually radiating the light of the gospel, and standing in this connection in admirable contrast with many other parts of Europe, "for," said the reverend speaker, "even in some of the most Protestant parts of Europe, should St. Paul again appear and preach therein the same doctrine that he preached during his apostolic career, he would be arrested and placed in jail as a disturber of public order." To the Evangelical Society of Geneva he gave the credit of doing the most effectual work of colportage to be found in Europe—extending into France, Sardinia, and other nations, and even into Africa. He closed his discourse with a few remarks of a general nature—specifying the obstacles in the way of the evangelization of Europe, and expressed the hope that, while laboring for that end, he and his co-workers would be remembered by their fellow-Christians of the United States.—[Tribune.

A Beautiful Incident.

A Naval officer being at sea in a dreadful storm, his wife was sitting in the cabin near him, and filled with alarm for the safety of the vessel, was so surprised at his serenity and composure, that she cried out:

"My dear, are you not afraid? How is it possible you can be so calm in such a dreadful storm?"

He rose from his chair, dashed it to the deck, drew his sword, and pointing it at the breast of his wife, exclaimed:

"Are you afraid?"

She immediately answered, "No!"

"Why?" said the officer.

"Because," rejoined the wife, "I know this sword is in the hands of my husband, and he loves me too well to hurt me.

"Then," said he, "I know in whom I believe; and that He who holds the wind in his fist, and the waters in the hollow of his hand, is my Father.

A FARMER in Bond county, Mo., has an orchard of 2,600 trees, from which he receives an income of $2,000. The estimated value of fruits in the whole county is $50,000. The surplus is mostly sold in St. Louis.

Letter Notice.

WE are constantly receiving letters from Europe, addressed to our care, with the postage unpaid. Now, we are willing to accommodate men, but we can't pay their postage, as one out of ten perhaps is not called for. This is to inform all such persons that no such letters will be taken out of the office, by us, in future.

Mormon Publications.

THE DESERET NEWS is a weekly paper, the official organ of the Church in Utah, and is published in Salt Lake City; it is ably edited by Albert Carrington. It is circulated extensively in Utah Territory; how much abroad we are not prepared to say.

Price of subscription, $5 in advance.

THE ST. LOUIS LUMINARY.—A weekly paper lately started at St. Louis. It is a very neat paper, full of useful information, and especially interesting to the Saints, to whom we recommend it. It is ably edited by Elder Erastus Snow, one of the Twelve Apostles, and President of the Stake of St. Louis. We recommend it to all lovers of truth.

Price of subscription, $2 in advance.

Subscriptions can either be sent to THE MORMON office, or to the editor of the Luminary, St. Louis, Mo.

THE MILLENNIEL STAR.—A weekly publication of 16 pages, adapted for binding; of which there are 16 volumes now bound. It is printed on good paper, clear type, and is devoted principally to the progress of the work in Europe. It is very ably edited by F. D. Richards, one of the Twelve Apostles, and President of the European Church.

Price in England, one penny, or two cents. The law of postage between England and the United States is, that two cents on each paper shall be prepaid in each country, and two cents after the arrival.

Price of subscription, including foreign postage, $2.25, in advance, sent to the address of subscribers. Elder Richards has requested us to act as agent, but has not given us the terms. The above is the nearest approximate that we can arrive at without instructions.

The subscriptions can be sent to us, and we will immediately forward the names and address.

Published at 36 Islington, Liverpool, and 35 Jewin street, City, London.

Besides the above, there is a paper published in Australia, another in Bombay, one in Switzerland, one commencing on the Sandwich Islands, one in California, and one in Cincinnati; besides a host of minor publications.

PROSPECTUS.

THE MORMON

IS the name of a Weekly Journal which will be published in the city of New York, by JOHN TAYLOR, one of the Twelve Apostles of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; formerly editor of the "Times and Seasons" and the "Nauvoo Neighbor," in the city of Nauvoo; subsequently of the "Etoile du Déseret," in the city of Paris, France; and "Zion's Panier," in the city of Hamburg, Germany.

THE MORMON will be devoted to the cause and interests of the "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," and will be the advocate of its claims; social, moral, political, and religious: and will also treat upon all subjects which the Editor may deem interesting, instructive, or edifying to his readers; among which will be science, literature, and the general news of the day. Further than this, he has no pretensions, nor does he purpose to be bound to any particular party or interest.

To the Latter Day Saints he would say, as he is known to them, and deputed by the Presidency, the above will be sufficient. To others: that while he esteems all honorable men, and would, by all proper means, court their respect and patronage, he has no promises to make; but leaves himself at liberty to examine any principle, whether moral, social, scientific, political, religious, spiritual, temporal, past, present, or to come; and pursue such a course as to him may seem best.

The Editor would state that from his numerous correspondents in Europe, East Indies, Australia, Pacific Islands, California, Utah, and other parts of the world, he hopes to make THE MORMON interesting as a newspaper, not only to the Saints but also to his patrons in the United States, England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, the Isles of Man and Jersey, as well as in France and Germany.

The Editor would further state, that as our emigration will come, in future, by the way of the East instead of the South, and as THE MORMON will be extensively circulated among the emigrating Saints in Europe and the citizens of Utah Territory, it will be an excellent medium of advertising for Merchants, Storekeepers, Wagon Makers, Horse and Cattle Dealers, and Carriers in the West and on the route; as well as the Wholesale and Commission Merchants in the East.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION—$2, IN ADVANCE.

To all our Presiding Elders throughout the World:

DEAR BRETHREN—You will perceive by the above Prospectus that Mormonism is assuming another phase, and that we are now going to be the representatives of our own opinions, instead of having others to represent them for us. And as I am particularly desirous to make the paper interesting, I should feel much obliged if you would write communications to "THE MORMON" on any matter of interest; social, moral, scientific, or religious: the local and political position of the country where you reside, its inhabitants, customs, manners; its arts, sciences, productions, curiosities, and religion; or any other thing that you may deem interesting: not forgetting the state of our own Church.

As a Deseretian I am desirous to gather honey from every flower, and make "THE MORMON" a welcome visitor at the fire-side of every Latter Day Saint; to be sought after by men of intelligence and be the true representative of Mormonism in the World. J. T.

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

WE believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the trangression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will be condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The fourth is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the 'laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Bien-aimés frères, je désire, en commençant cette publication, vous adresser quelques paroles. Le Seigneur, dans sa bonté et sa miséricorde, a jugé convenable de restaurer au monde l'Evangile primitif, dans toute la simplicité, la beauté et la pureté qu'il avait autrefois, parmi les chrétiens des premiers temps, aux jours de Jésus et de ses Apôtres.

La lumière de la vérité a éclaté au milieu des ténèbres et de la corruption des hommes, en ce temps où le monde est déchiré par mille opinions contradictoires.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Si nous suivons attentivement l'action de Dieu sur le genre humain, nous trouverons que tous ces maux proviennent de ce que les nations et les peuples se sont éloignés de Dieu; et rien moins qu'un retour à lui ne peut arrêter la terrible tempête, calmer la mer furieuse, tranquilliser les passions capricieuses des hommes, et rendre au monde moral, religieux et politique, cet ordre qui règne dans la création physique de Dieu.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui règle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

C'est la religion que vous croyez et que vous enseignez, qui est destinée à restaurer l'homme et la terre; c'est elle qui ramènera les peuples à Dieu, qui les retirera du chaos moral, religieux et politique du monde, et les rassemblera en un peuple qui sera conduit et reconnu de Dieu; qui sera honoré devant les hommes et les nations; et qui aidera à établir et à développer le royaume de Dieu dans ces derniers jours.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaitraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? Ou devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours?

Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconque demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Evangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés?" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit?" Nous le faisons aussi. Crurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains, par la foi en Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "l'espoir en la résurrection?" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.?" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.?" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions à son Eglise actuelle.

Nous demanderons ce qu'il y a d'inconséquent en tout cela? Lequel est le plus inconséquent, de croire et de pratiquer les Ecritures, ou de dire, nous les croyons et puis de les nier à notre organisation, à nos doctrines, à nos œuvres.

Mais des visions, des prophéties, des révélations n'ont-elles pas une tendance à conduire à l'enthousiasme et au fanatisme? Oui, les visions humaines et les délusions de Satan l'ont. Mais si le Seigneur eût pensé que ses visions et ses révélations fussent préjudiciables aux hommes, pourquoi les aurait-il données dans les anciens temps? Si elles doivent être préjudiciables de nos jours, certainement elles l'eussent été autrefois. L'enthousiasme, la folie et le fanatisme des hommes est une chose; autre chose est Dieu révélant sa volonté aux peuples pour leur organisation, leur stabilité, leur consolation, leur union, leur savoir, leur édification, et pour l'établissement de son royaume.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaitre Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Les philosophes ont scruté l'homme, la terre, les œuvres de la création pour trouver un vrai système, Ils ont tous eu leur jour. Ils ont introduit beaucoup de bons principes, mais quant à l'amélioration du monde, là, ils ont fait défaut. Leurs systèmes, quelque bons que soient plusieurs d'entre eux, sont bien loin d'embrasser l'objet désiré: "Ils ont été pesés dans la balance, et trouvés trop légers."

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaitre que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence, ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les excès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lasciveté, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votre lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

JOHN TAYLOR.

To the Emigration and Our Readers Generally.

WE shall endeavor to be always prepared to impart the latest information relative to the best course to be pursued by Emigrants on their arrival in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

Our emigration have heretofore, almost exclusively, gone by the way of New Orleans, but will hereafter land in the Eastern cities, and one of the principal objects of establishing "THE MORMON" is for their information, as well as all other emigration arriving in this country.

We shall take special interest in seeking out the cheapest, best and most convenient mode of conveyance from this and other points, as well as to observe the course pursued by agents in the accommodation for travelers on the routes, and make of "THE MORMON" a directory, to which all Emigrants and Travelers may refer with some degree of safety.

A Card to the Saints.

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "THE MORMON." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish, you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

United States Mail—Utah.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT, December 5, 1854.

PROPOSALS for carrying the mails of the United States from the 1st day of September, 1855, to the 30th day of June, 1858, (inclusive,) in UTAH TERRITORY, will be received at the Contract Office of the Post Office Department, in the city of Washington, until 9 A. M. of the 15th day of June, 1855, to be decided by the next day, on the routes, and in the time herein specified, viz:

12806 From Salt Lake City, by Neff's Mill, Mill Creek, Holladay's Settlement, Little Cottonwood, and Drapersville, to Mountainville, 25 miles and back, once a week.
Leave Salt Lake City every Thursday at 7 a. m;
Arrive at Mountainville same day by 7 p. m;
Leave Mountainville every Friday at 7 a. m;
Arrive at Salt Lake City same day by 7 p. m.

12807 From Salt Lake City, by Taylorsville, West Jordan, Gardner's Mills, Bingham, and Kanyon, to Cedar Valley, 45 miles and back, once a week.

NOTES.

No pay will be made for trips not performed, and for each of such omissions not satisfactorily explained, three times the pay of the trip may be deducted. For arrivals so far behind time as to break connection with depending mails, and not sufficiently excused, one-fourth of the compensation for the trip is subject to forfeiture. For further particulars as to conditions to be incorporated in the contracts, see advertisement for California, Oregon, Utah, &c., dated 13th October, 1853.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY,
UTAH TERRITORY.
HOOPER & WILLIAMS,
ARE transporting to Utah, this season, one of the largest and best assorted stock of GOODS ever taken to that region.
The purchases being made from the best Houses in New York, Baltimore, and St. Louis, and the long experience they have had in the trade, enables them to offer inducements in prices, style and kind, which will insure satisfaction.
Emigrants passing over the plains to California, will find it to their advantage to refit at Great Salt Lake, as produce can always be had for less than transportation from the States.
Persons wishing to remit or intend taking money with them, can avoid risk and save money, by depositing with Messrs. ROBERTSON, HUDSON & PULLIAM, No. 29 Murray street, New York, or WATERMAN & RYAN, St. Louis; who are authorized to draw on us. Interest will be allowed at the rate of 7 per cent from date of draft till payment.

ROUTE FROM LIVERPOOL
TO THE
GREAT SALT LAKE VALLEY:
ILLUSTRATED,
By a Series of splendid STEEL ENGRAVINGS and WOOD CUTS, from Sketches made on the spo from Life, in 1853, expressly for this work, by
FREDERICK PIERCY,
AND CONTAINING A MAP OF THE OVERLAND PORTION OF THE JOURNEY.
EDITED BY JAMES LINFORTH.
This highly and interesting Work will form a narrative of the Journey from Liverpool to Great Salt Lake Valley, and will give Historical, Descriptive, and Statistical Information respecting the places, and the Indian Tribes on the route, and in Utah Territory.
The mode in which the Latter Day Saints' emigration is conducted; a review of it from the commencement; and incidental instructions to emigrants, will constitute an early part of the Work.
The Statistical information will be drawn from the most authentic sources, and consequently may be relied upon. That portion of it which relates to the Latter Day Saints, will be particularly valuable, owing to the difficulty hitherto experienced by all classes in obtaining anything accurate, from the conflicting statements which have appeared from time to time, in a great portion of the public press.

Poetry.

Song of the Saint.

FAREWELL, my native land, farewell,
Thou hast no charms for me—
I go with Zion's sons to dwell—
'Mongst noble men and free.

CHORUS.

Across the mighty deep we roll,
With spirits bold and free:
Blow gentle gale, fill every sail,
And speed us o'er the sea.

Adieu to priestcraft, pomp and pride,
Oppression and distress;
I go the laws of God t'abide,
With those the Lord will bless.

No earthly tie or sympathy
Shall cause my heart to grieve;
I leave them all, most joyfully,
With saints of God to live.

What is the joy the world affords?
What are its happiest hours,
Compared with those consoling words,
"Eternal lives are yours?"

I'll go to Zion's peaceful vale,
And learn celestial love;
And there prepare with God to dwell,
In realms of bliss above.

Oh God! preserve us on the way,
Our lives and health defend;
Let angels guard us night and day,
Unto our journey's end.
Across the mighty deep we roll, &c.

From the Deseret News. C. W.

From the Times and Seasons of April 15, 1842.

"Baptism for the Dead."

"THE great designs of God in relation to the salvation of the human family are very little understood by the professedly wise and intelligent generation in which we live: various and conflicting are the opinions of men concerning the plan of salvation, the requisitions of the Almighty, the necessary preparations for heaven, the state and condition of departed spirits, and the happiness or misery that is consequent upon the practice of righteousness and iniquity according to their several notions of virtue and vice.

The Mussulman condemns the heathen, the Jew and the Christian, and the whole world of mankind that reject his Koran, as infidels, and consigns the whole of them to perdition. The Jew believes that the whole world that rejects his faith and are not circumcised, are Gentile dogs, and will be damned. The Heathen are equally as tenacious about their principles, and the Christian consigns all to perdition who cannot bow to his creed, and submit to his ipse dixit.

But while one portion of the human race are judging and condemning the other without mercy, the great parent of the universe looks upon the whole of the human family with a fartherly care and paternal regard; he views them as his offspring, and without any of those contracted feelings that influence the children of men, causes "his sun to rise on the evil and the good, and sends his rain on the just and unjust." He holds the reigns of judgment in his hands; he is a wise lawgiver and will judge all men [not according to the narrow contracted notions of men, but] "according to the deeds done in the body whether they be good or evil," or whether these deeds were done in England, America, Spain, Turkey, or India: he will judge them, "not according to what they have not, but according to what they have," those who have lived without law, will be judged without law, and those who have a law, will be judged by that law; we need not doubt the wisdom and intelligence of the Great Jehovah, he will award judgment or mercy to all nations according to their several deserts, their means of obtaining intelligence, the laws by which they are governed, the facilities afforded them of obtaining correct information, and his inscrutable designs in relation to the human family; and when the designs of God shall be made manifest, and the curtain of futurity be withdrawn, we shall all of us eventually have to confess that the Judge of all the earth has done right.

The situation of the Christian nations after death, is a subject that has called forth all the wisdom and talent of the philosopher and the divine, and it is an opinion which is generally received, that the destiny of man is irretrievably fixed at his death, and that he is made either eternally happy, or eternally miserable; that if a man dies without a knowledge of God, he must be eternally damned, without any mitigation of his punishment, alleviation of his pain, or the most latent hope of a deliverance while endless ages shall roll along. However orthodox this principle may be, we shall find that it is at variance with the testimony of holy writ, for our Saviour says, "that all manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven men wherewith they shall blaspheme; but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven, neither in this world, nor in the world to come," evidently showing that there are sins which may be forgiven in the world to come, although the sin of blasphemy cannot be forgiven. Peter, also, in speaking concerning our Saviour, says, that "he went and preached unto the spirits in prison, which sometimes were disobedient, when once the long suffering of God waited in the days of Noah," 1 Peter 3 ch. 19 20 v. Here then we have an account of our Saviour preaching to the Spirits in Prison, to spirits that had been imprisoned from the days of Noah; and what did he preach to them? That they were to stay there! Certainly not! let his own declaration testify "he hath sent me to heal the broken hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised," Luke iv. ch. 18 v. Isaiah has it, "To bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness from the prison house," Is. xlii. ch. 7 v. It is very evident from this that he not only went to preach to them, but to deliver, or bring them out of the prison house. Isaiah in testifying concerning the calamities that will overtake the inhabitants of the earth, says, "The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard, and shall be removed like a cottage, and the transgressions thereof shall be heavy upon it, and it shall fall and not rise again. And it shall come to pass in that day that the Lord shall punish the hosts of the high ones that are on high and the Kings of the earth upon the earth. And they shall be gathered together as prisoners are gathered in the pit, and shall be shut up in prison, and after many days shall they be visited." Thus we find that God will deal with all the human family equally, and that as the antidiluvians had their day of visitation, so will those characters, referred to by Isaiah, have their time of visitation and deliverance; after having been many days in prison.

The great Jehovah contemplated the whole of the events connected with the earth, pertaining to the plan of salvation, before it rolled into existence, or ever "the morning stars sung together for joy," the past, the present and the future were, and are, with him, one eternal now; he knew of the fall of Adam, the inquities of the Antidiluvians, of the depth of iniquity that would be connected with the human family, their weakness and strength, their power and glory, apostacies, their crimes, their righteousness and iniquity, he comprehended the fall of man, and their redemption, he knew the plan of salvation and pointed it out, he was acquainted with the situation of all nations, and with their destiny, he ordered all things according to the council of his own will, he knows the situation of both the living and the dead, and has made ample provision for their redemption, according to their several circumstances, and the laws of the kingdom of God, whether in this world, or in the world to come.

The idea that some men form of the justice, judgment and mercy of God, is too foolish for an intelligent man to think of; for instance, it is common for any of our orthodox preachers to suppose that if a man is not what they call converted, if he dies in that state he must remain eternally in hell without any hope;

"Infinite years in torment must he spend,
And never, never, never, have an end;"

and yet this eternal misery is made frequently to rest upon the merest casualty. The breaking of a shoe string, the tearing of a coat of those officiating, or the peculiar location in which a person lives, may be the means, indirectly of his damnation, or the cause of his not being saved. I will suppose a case which is not extraordinary: Two men, who have been equally wicked, who have neglected religion, are both of them taken sick at the same time; one of them has the good fortune to be visited by a praying man, and he gets converted a few minutes before he dies; the other sends for three different praying men, a tailor, a shoemaker, and a tinman; the tinman has a handle to solder to a can, the tailor has a button hole to work on some coat that is needed in a hurry, and the shoemaker has a patch to put on somebody's boot; they none of them can go in time, the man dies, and goes to hell; one of these is exalted to Abraham's bosom, he sits down in the presence of God and enjoys eternal, uninterrupted happiness, while the other, who was equally as good as him, sinks to eternal damnation, irretrievable misery and hopeless despair, because a man had a boot to mend, the button hole of a coat to work, or a handle to solder on to a saucepan.

The plans of Jehovah are not so unjust, the statements of holy writ so visionary, nor the plan of salvation for the human family so incompatible with common sense; at such proceedings God would frown with indignation, angels would hide their heads in shame, and every virtuous, intelligent man would recoil.

If human laws award to each man his deserts, and punish all delinquents according to their several crimes, surely the Lord will not be more cruel than man, for he is a wise legislator, and his laws are more equitable, his enactments more just, and his decisions more perfect than those of man; and as man judges his fellow man by law, and punishes him according to the penalty of that law, so does the God of heaven judge "according to the deeds done in the body." To say that the heathens would be damned because they did not believe the gospel would be preposterous, and to say that the Jews would all be damned that do not believe in Jesus would be equally absurd, for "how can they believe on him of whom they have not heard, and how can they hear without a preacher, and how can he preach except he be sent;" consequently neither Jew nor heathen can be culpable for rejecting the conflicting opinions of sectarianism, nor for rejecting any testimony but that which is sent of God, for as the preacher cannot preach except he be sent, so the hearer cannot believe without he hear a sent preacher, and cannot be condemned for what he has not heard, and being without law, will have to be judged without law.

When speaking about the blessings pertaining to the gospel, and the consequences connected with disobedience to its requirements, we are frequently asked the question, what has become of our fathers? Will they all be damned for not obeying the gospel, when they never heard it? Certainly not. But they will possess the same privilege that we here enjoy, through the medium of the everlasting priesthood, which not only administers on earth, but in heaven, and the wise dispensations of the great Jehovah; hence those characters referred to by Isaiah will be visited by this priesthood, and come out of their prison upon the same principle as those who were disobedient in the days of Noah were visited by our Saviour [who possessed the everlasting Melchisedec Priesthood] and had the gospel preached to them, by him in prison; and in order that they might fulfill all the requisitions of God, their living friends were baptised for their dead friends, and thus fulfilled the requirements of God, which says "Except a man be born of water, and of the spirit, he can in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven," they were baptised of course, not for themselves, but for their dead.

Chrysostum says, that the Marchionites practised baptism for their dead. "After a catechumen was dead they had a living man under the bed of the deceased; then coming to the dead man they asked him whether he would receive baptism, and he making no answer, the other answered for him, and said that he would be baptized in his stead; and so they baptized the living for the dead." The Church of course at that time was degenerate, and the particular form might be incorrect, but the thing is sufficiently plain in the scriptures, hence Paul, in speaking of the doctrine, says "Else what shall they do, who are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? Why are they then baptized for the dead?" 1 Cor. xv. ch. 29 v. Hence it was that so great a responsibility rested upon the generation in which our Saviour lived, for says he "That upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel, unto the blood of Zacharias, son of Barachias, whom ye slew between the Temple and the Altar. Verily I say unto you all these things shall come upon this generation," Matthew xxiii. ch. 35 36 v. Hence as they possessed greater privileges than any other generation, not only pertaining to themselves, but to their dead, their sin was greater, as they not only neglected their own salvation but that of their progenitors, and hence their blood was required at their hands.

And now as the great purposes of God are hastening to their accomplishment, and the things spoken of in the prophets are fulfilling, as the kingdom of God is established on the earth, and the ancient order of things restored the Lord has manifested to us this duty and privilege and we are commanded to be baptized for our dead, thus fulfilling the words of Obadiah, when speaking of the glory of the Latter Day. "And Saviors shall come up upon Mount Zion to judge the remnant of Esau, and the kingdom shall be the Lord's." A view of these things reconciles the scriptures of truth, justifies the ways of God to man, places the human family upon an equal footing, and harmonizes with every principle of righteousness, justice and truth. We will conclude with the words of Peter: "For the time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the gentiles." "For, for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit."

Horticultural.

Meetings of "State Fruit Committee," and Organization of a Horticultural Society.

G. S. L. CITY, July 24, 1855.

AT a meeting of the "State Fruit Committee" for the Territory of Utah, Hon. Edward Hunter, Vice President, presiding.

Present, Messrs. Charles H. Oliphant, John Nebeker, and Jesse C. Little.

The Vice President remarked that he was in receipt of the printed proceedings of the 2d and 3d sessions of the American Pomological Society, held in the city of Philadelphia in the years '52 and '54 respectively; also a circular from Hon. Marshal P. Wilder, President; and he being appointed by the Pomological Society, Vice President for the Territory of Utah, had proceeded according to his instructions and agreeably to the Constitution of said society, and chosen a "State Fruit Committee" for this Territory, consisting of Messrs. Willford Woodruff, William C. Staines, and the gentlemen above named, present this evening.

Mr. Oliphant, at the request of the Vice President, had waited upon Governor Young, informing him of the design to organize, of which he was glad to hear, and wished the society to go ahead.

The proceedings of said society, at their 2d and 3d Sessions were perused by the committee, and various remarks made upon the utility, advantages and resources that were within the reach of the inhabitants of this Territory, if the cultivation of fruit was made a matter of primary importance.

On motion of J. C. Little, Esq.,

Mr. Robert L. Campbell was chosen Secretary for the Committee.

Mr. Charles H. Oliphant was appointed to draw up a report of the progress of fruit in this Territory to forward to President Wilder.

The organization of a Horticultural Society being urged, Thursday evening, Sept. 13th, next, at the Social Hall, was appointed for said organization, and the secretary was instructed to advertise the meeting in the Deseret News, and invite those interested in cultivating gardens and raising fruit, to attend.

SOCIAL HALL, Sept. 13—7 P. M.

Meeting called for organization of a Horticultural Society.

Dr. S. L. Sprague had fitted up the stand with tables, along which were arranged grapes, peaches, apples and plumbs, presented by Governor Brigham Young, Hon. Heber C. Kimball and Wilford Woodruff, Messrs. Joseph Young, John Nebeker, Samuel L. Sprague, Thomas Bullock and Mrs. John Taylor.

Boughs with the fruit hanging were suspended from the chandeliers, and at the sides of the platform.

Meeting called to order; prayer by Elder Willford Woodruff.

Vice President Hunter—You are aware that we are endeavoring to establish in these valleys all useful societies for the promotion of arts and science, the cultivation of the soil, fruit raising, &c. Many of the horticulturists here this evening, will be glad to learn of the existence and continuation of the American Pomological Society, who have appointed me Vice President for Utah.

Of the necessity and advantage of fruit raising here, there is but one opinion, not only in consequence of the impracticability of importing ripe fruit, or the exorbitant price of dried fruit, but because of the universal adaptability and excellence of the soil and climate for fruit culture.

I have perused the reports of the fruit committees from the States and Territories, as printed in the proceedings of the 2d and 3d Sessions, and consider that we can make reports to the American Pomological Society that will compare advantageously and speak highly in behalf of the fruit culturists among us. These specimens here to-night speak for themselves.

Mr. Staines has just come in with a letter from the Governor, which Mr. Bullock will please read.

"THURSDAY, Sept. 13, 1855.

President Edward Hunter—Dear Sir: Feeling a strong interest in the success of the efforts now making through the aid of the society over whom you have the honor to preside, for the promotion of Pomology and Horticulture generally, should have been much gratified to have attended your meeting had health permitted. Please accept a specimen of the so-called California grape raised in my garden. Should always be happy to contribute whatever may be in my power to create an interest in so useful a branch of industry.

Very respectfully, I have the honor to remain your friend and brother, BRIGHAM YOUNG."

We will also have read our first report, which we have forwarded through the politeness of our delegate, Hon. John M. Bernhisel.

"G. S. L. CITY, August 24, 1855.

Hon. Marshal P. Wilder:—I have hastily drawn up the following brief account of fruit in these valleys, as far as has come under my observation. We have great reason to be encouraged in regard to the cultivation of fruit, here in the valleys of the mountains. Although numerous efforts have been made to bring standard varieties from the States, still, owing to the great distance they have to come, and the poor facilities we have as yet had, for bringing them in proper season, we have only a few varieties of cultivated apples. They have not yet produced any fruit.

Efforts are now however, being made, which it is hoped will prove successful, to procure a choice and extensive variety of fruit, the coming season. We sincerely hope it will not be very long, ere Utah shall be a successful rival with any State or Territory in the Union, both for variety, quantity and excellence of her fruit.

Our soil is various; land lying near the base of the mountain, or what is called bench land, seems best adapted to the cultivation of fruit. The climate is warm, with but little rain from the first of April to the middle of Autumn. Our winters are not severe. This country, previous to its settlement by this people, (the Latter Day Saints) was not supposed to be capable of producing an ear of corn or a spear of wheat. So well satisfied were the mountaineers of the fact, that they offered a reward of one thousand dollars for the first ear of corn that should be raised. But owing to the indefatigable exertions of this people, water is made to leave its mountain channels in ditches, in many places cut along the sides of steep mountains, and is seen winding its way and branching off in various directions, giving each cultivator sufficient to render his land fertile and productive; and what was once thought to be a barren wilderness, now bids fair to blossom as the rose.

Of seedling apples, there are several choice kinds, that have borne for three years. Original names have been given.

1—Deseret Apple.
2—Beehive.
3—Red Ute.
4—Pride of the Valley.
5—Mountain Chief.

These are the only ones named. There are several others immatured, which promise well.

Of plums there are several varieties in bearing, but none worthy of notice.

Pears, none in bearing.

Apricots, there are some fine trees that have borne for two years; the fruit looks well, and it is thought, will be very productive.

Nectarines, there are none here.

Cherries, a good many trees, but no fruit worthy of notice.

Peaches seem to be particularly adapted to the soil and climate of these valleys; they are produced here in great quantities, and of superior quality and size. We have red, yellow, and white, also the blood cling; eighteen different varieties have been named and placed on catalogue. The names given are original, and as follows:

1—Brigham's Favorite, a white peach, ripens last of August.
2—Pride of Utah, a large red rareripe, fine flavor.
3—Carrington's Large White, one of which weighed seven ounces.
4—Willard's Extra, red rareripe.
5—Van Dyke, a beautiful and very fine peach.
6—Excelsior, a fine yellow peach, middle of September.
7—Sprague's rareripe.
8—Grant's Early Red, size medium, ripens middle of August.
9—Ne Plus Ultra.
10—Grant's Cling.
11—Woodruff's Mountain Sweet.
12—Cannon's Early Red.
13—Woodruff's Prolific.
14—Mammoth Golden, very excellent and large.
15—Decker's Yellow Rareripe.
16—Carrington's Superb, very fine, much like the yellow Malacatoon.
17—Carrington's Productive.
18—Heber's Mountaineer.

There are probably many others of good quality not yet discovered.

Grapes, we have several kinds, the best of which is the California grape, in appearance much like the Isabella; clusters large and fine; ripens here first of September.

Currents, we have three wild varieties, red white, and yellow, which grow to a large size, some being 3-4 inch in diameter. The white and red currents of the States have been brought here, but have been mostly destroyed by the grasshoppers.

Gooseberries, there are but few here and of these my knowledge is limited.

Strawberries, we have quite a variety, produced from seeds, some very good.

Melons, watermelons of fine quality, some weighing from fifty to sixty pounds.

Musk melons, a great variety, and very fine.

The above imperfect sheet is submitted to your consideration, and with every wish for the dissemination of correct principles for the cultivation and propagation of fruit, I subscribe myself yours truly,

EDWARD HUNTER."

The meeting being left open for remarks, Hon. Wilford Woodruff delivered an interesting address, showing his specimens of fruit, and reading the statistical reports of his own orchards, which was very encouraging. As the length of the remarks will not allow their insertion in this report, they will be furnished the editor for future publication.

Mr. Stalnes said: "I am happy to speak on so important a subject. If the inhabitants of Utah could have seen eight years ago what is now presented before your eyes, they would have been glad. Many wondered when we came here if fruit could be raised; I believed it could; I went to work accordingly. My name is not on the list, but I have raised the fruit trees and sold them to those who are now reaping the advantages of the efforts made here in the beginning.

This is the first show I ever attended where the fruit was all raised from the seed, except these grapes—the cuttings of them were brought from California in 1849. I have gathered 150 lbs of Grapes within the last 5 days from the Governor's vineyard, these bunches would have been much larger if they had been properly trimmed in season.

Last year one bunch weighed 4 lbs., and they can be raised advantageously on the higher lands—even on Ensign peak; the best fruit is raised on the benches, enough is shown here to-night to encourage all in cultivating fruit. Our soil is more charged with saccharine matter, the air is purer, hence we can have much better variety and flavor.

I expect to dry all the peaches I want and have some for my friends. I would have raised from 10 to 1200 lbs. of grapes, and had some choice varieties of currants and strawberries which would have yielded abundantly if grasshoppers had not been so destructive this season. We can make all the wine we need, and keep it just as good and as long as we please.

Some argue that it is too expensive to fence and raise fruit, but it is my business to decorate and beautify Zion, it is part of my religion as much as going to meeting, praying or singing.

There is a nectarine here, raised by Mr. Wagstaff from the seed which he brought from England. There are pears, quince, mulberry, and apricots that would have borne had it not been for the ravages of crickets and grasshoppers.

In 10 years we can have as good varieties, and a great deal better and finer flavored fruit than can be produced in the States, provided we are diligent in improving what is here, and getting other varieties forwarded, and by our Missionaries. Agents and friends throughout the world who feel interested in improving and beautifying this place.

Mr. J. C. Little, of the State Fruit Committee, made some pertinent remarks on Pomology, and stated the objects of the Committee in calling this meeting to organize a Horticultural Society that might report to meet and correspond with the American Pomological, was glad to see the enterprize and exertions made here by Fruit Culturists, and hoped that throughout the Territory the same interest might be manifested as at this city.

Mr. J. M. Grant delivered an appropriate address which will also be handed to the Editor for publication.

Mr. C. H. Oliphant moved that we proceed to organize a Horticultural Society in Utah, seconded by Mr. J. M. Grant, and carried.

The following officers were unanimously chosen:
WILFORD WOODRUFF, President.
WILLIAM C. STAINES, Vice President.
GEO. D. WATT, Corresponding Secretary.
THOMAS BULLOCK, Home Secretary.
SAMUEL W. RICHARDS, Treasurer.

Voted unanimously that there be a Committee to draft a Constitution and By-Laws:—that the President and Officers, with Messrs. Oliphant, Little, Nebeker and Sprague be that Committee.

Voted that the First Presidency and Quorum of the Twelve of the Church of Jesus Christ of L. D. S. be Honorary Members.

Vice President Hunter announced that Luther S. Hemingway has 4,000 Apple and Peach trees on hand.

Elder Joseph Young made a few remarks on the benefits of fruit raising; he cut up the fruit he had brought and gratuitously distributed the same; all present partaking. The Governor's grapes, President Kimball's plums and peaches, Mr. Nebeker's splendid apples, Dr. Sprague's mountain peach with the balance of the fruit was distributed in the same generous manner to the satisfaction and gratification of the whole assembly.

Voted unanimously that the proceedings be forwarded to the Editor of Deseret News for publication.

On motion of adjournment being put and carried. Meeting was dismissed by Benediction from Ezra T. Benson. ROB. L. CAMPBELL, Secretary.

A Mass of News from the Mormons,

Very Peculiar, Very Funny, Very Romantic, and Very Remarkable.

WE yesterday laid before our numerous readers among the Gentiles, a mass of that peculiar, racy, romantic, miraculous and very interesting intelligence of the movements, progress, drawbacks, sayings and doings of the Latter Day Saints, which can only be gathered from the files of their official organ, published at the City of the Great Salt Lake. To all outsiders, "from the rivers to the ends of the earth," and especially to those silly people among the old countries of Europe who are hankering for the primitive institutions of the Jewish patriarchs among the Saints of Utah, a careful reading of this mass of news, together with these explanatory observations, may prove to be instructive and seasonable.

At the first glance it would appear that the happiest people under the sun are these Latter Day Saints, at their City of Zion of the Great Salt Lake. Their festivals, anniversaries, celebrations and convivial frolics, are so numerous and hilarious as to convey the idea that they have already entered into the substantial enjoyments of the Mormon millenium. From day to day they "eat, drink and are merry," and from night to night their religious devotions of prayers, revelations, visions and politics, are enlivened by trumpets, drums, fiddles and dancing, or agreeably modified by amateur theatrical diversions. What was Rasselas in his Happy Valley? What were the ancient worshippers of Cyprus? And what are all the fascinations of life among the amiable natives of the Friendly Islands, in the matter of solid comfort, compared with the consecrated pleasures of the Saints at the Great Salt Lake? Nothing, absolutely nothing. And is there a prince, king, governor, sultan, pasha, rajah, or potentate of any kind, within the four continents or among all the islands of the sea, who has blended all the net profits of church and State, with greater advantage to himself, than the Mormon Prophet, High Priest, Head Patriarch, Captain-General and Governor of the United States Territory of Utah? Not one, by the mass, not one! He has ninety wives, as we are informed—American, English, Danish, Norwegian and Swiss—and, if all reports be true, some concubines here and there of the Simon Pure Digger Indian squaws. And, as when King David became old and chilly, the realm of Israel was searched for the fairest damsel to comfort him, so the Mormon Prophet, Brigham Young, (who from Western New York, went into this thing with the original Joseph Smith upon a speculation,) can order, as he would a barrel of flour, the fairest of the fair of Utah to the exalted privileges of his seraglio.

Turn we for a moment to the entertainment given by the Governor to Father Bernhisel, the Mormon delegate to Congress. It was in the Governor's new and splendid mansion, elegantly furnished, where the crowning glory of the feast was the exquisite dessert of "peaches and grapes from his Excellency's garden." And Miss Charlotte Cobb played to the company "upon the piano," the transportation of which, alone, from the frontiers of Missouri, a thousand miles across the uninhabited plains, and the weary and desolate defiles of the Rocky Mountains, must have cost several thousand dollars! What a splendid fellow must this be, who, a thousand miles from the borders of civilized society, can build a palace and funish it with the bijouterie of Paris, and stock it as with the houris of Stamboul!

All this, however, is but a superficial view of Mormondom. It is the distant prospect of a fine looking edifice, which, upon nearer inspection, proves to be a prison, a workhouse and a lunatic asylum combined. The real condition of the Mormons may be briefly summed up. The few green and artificially watered patches of land which they occupy in the vast arid desert Territory of Utah, are cut off by intervening deserts and mountains, as we have said, a thousand miles from the inhabited frontiers of the Mississippi Valley, and about the same distance from the settled coasts of Oregon and of California; while, to the southward, an unbroken desert stretches away into the very heart of Mexico. Such is the geographical situation of this Mormon Paradise. Like Crusoe on his desolate island, they are isolated from the world, and must depend upon their own resources. But the grasshoppers have been among them, wasting their fields like clouds of African locusts, and cramping their means of subsistence to the hazards of general famine with another such visitation. At the same time such Gentiles as have sojourned among them assure us that their patriarchal system of matrimony is productive of untold miseries, sufferings and sorrows to the wretched victims of this horrid imposture, that "the Perpetual Emigrating Fund" is a gull trap, of which Father Brigham is the absorbing beneficiary, and that the fatherly protection of the faithful by the Governor and the priesthood is that protection which a pack of wolves accord to a flock of silly sheep.

The accessions of late years to this wretched community are almost entirely from the ignorant and infatuated, or criminally disposed people of the overpopulated nations of Europe; and it is for their information that we say that a prilgrimage of an honest family to Mormondom, in order to live a life of abundance, happiness and holiness among the Saints, is a fool's errand, and will inevitably end in crime and irreparable disasters. The people of the United States thoroughly understand all this. Hence, the necessity of these Mormon missions to Europe, South America and Asia, for fresh recruits to their harems and their tithing offices.

Let it also be understood that, notwithstanding Utah is a Territory under the jurisdiction of the United States, the difficulty of reaching this crying evil of Mormonism, lies partly in a too liberal construction by the government at Washington of that clause of the constitution of the Union, which guarantees to every individual the liberty of choosing his own religion; and is partly chargeable to the criminal negligence of the President. The Mormons claim that their's is a purely religious system—that they do not interfere with anybody else of our people, living as they do in a distant territory by themselves, and surrounded by deserts and hostile Indians. They claim, in fact, that they are the people of the Territory, and are therefore the supreme law. And so this unseemly excrescence upon our body politic has continued to grow, until it has become a stigma upon our beneficent and wholesome institutions, civil, political and religious.

But we admonish all parties concerned, that this imperium in imperio of Mormonism cannot last. Another visitation or two of the grasshoppers will disperse the Saints from their chosen City of Zion, or famine, rebellion and the interposition of the strong arm of government will break them up. It will be seen from the extracts which we have given from one of their journals, that they have no very exalted opinion of the editor of the Herald, or New York society; yet we have sufficient regard for the Saints to warn them in season of the policy of a timely exodus to some other quarter of the earth. A law of Congress, making bigamy and adultery criminal offences in the Territories as they are in the States, and providing the ways and means for the summary punishment of all offenders in the premises, will reach the evil at once. Nor do we perceive how such a law would conflict with the doctrine that the will of the people is the supreme law, for are not the Territories the domain of all the people of the United States!

General Cass, who seems to have thoroughly studied the subjects of "squatter sovereignty" and religious liberty, is the man for this business. We hope he will give us his views, in the Senate, upon the suggestions we have thrown out, on the first convenient day after the meeting of Congress.—[N. Y. Herald, 15th.

THE MORMON.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, NOV. 17, 1855.

Higher Law vs. Constitutional.

IN the New York Tribune of the 9th inst. was an editorial reply to a communication published in the same issue on constitutional law, with reference to the duty or obligation of one State of the confederation, to give up a fugitive from justice on a requisition from the Governor of another, from which the fugitive had escaped. The incident that called it forth was the case of McCormick of Indiana, for whose arrest there had been a requisition from Gov. Powell of Kentucky to Goy. Wright of Indiana, alleging McCormick's transgression of the laws of Kentuckey in aiding and abetting in the escape of slaves.

The correspondent of the Tribune endeavors to show that it is not the constitutional prerogative of Gov. Wright to prejudge the case, and decide whether the fugitive is a transgressor or not—to hold or deliver up the alleged criminal according to his own decision; but that there is no alternative but to deliver him up, presuming that Kentuckey will execute justice according to her laws, to whom the transgressors of those laws are amenable. In illustrating the legality of, and obligation to deliver up as above, this Indiana correspondent says:

* * * * Again. Suppose the admission into the Union of the State of Utah, with its beautiful social institution of polygamy. Suppose a man guilty of bigamy in the State of New York to fly to the State of Utah, and to be duly demanded by the Governor of New York as a fugitive from the justice of that State. Think you the polygamist Governor of Utah would be justified in refusing to give up the bigamist on the ground that bigamy and polygamy were lawful domestic institutions in Utah? I think not. Yet such would be the legitimate consequence of your doctrine, that the surrender of a fugitive may be refused when the crime alleged is not recognized as a crime under the laws of the State to which he has fled from justice.

There is no doubt that either view of this question is, under many possible cases, attended with great difficulty, but I think the true doctrine is not the one assumed by you. That is the ultra doctrine of State Rights, and it can never be stringently enforced without collision.

For my own part I am disposed to leave the subject of Slavery where the Constitution left it. I believe that subject was as fully and carefully and calmly weighed and provided for by the framers of the Constitution as it ever has been or will be by us, and so long as the spirit of that instrument is carried out there is no danger of conflict between the North and South. The Free States have no business with Slavery in the States where it prevails, and the Slave States have no right to ask for its extension or recognition beyond their own limits, except to the extent that they may reclaim their fugitive slaves. That right the Constitution gives to them, and it should be recognized and enforced in accordance with the spirit of the Constitution, but all the machinery for its enforcement should be based upon the great principle that the law favors Freedom and not Slavery. If these views were to control individual and legislative and judicial action, we would hear no more in an invidious sense, so far as our federation is concerned, of the North or the South, and the Union would soon become what the Constition was designed to make it, "a more perfect Union." INDIANA.

Fort Wayne, Nov, 3, 1855.

To which the Tribune replies in vindication of the "higher law" theory, with which he has become identified, and to which he stands committed as follows:

SLAVERY IN FREE STATES.

We give place in another part of this paper to the letter of a citizen of Indiana, who endeavors at once to overthrow the views of the Tribune, and to defend Gov. Wright for his recent cowardly attempt to surrender the Rev. T. B. McCormick to take his trial in Kentucky, on an indictment which Mr. McCormick declares to have been fraudulently procured for the crime of inciting or aiding slaves to take possession of themselves and become freemen. Our correspondent somewhat weakens his argument, it is true, by admitting that he is not acquainted with the previous discussions of the points on which he proposes to instruct the public; but, as other intelligent men may be in the same unfortunate position, we will briefly state the argument covering the general question.

The constitutional provision under which Gov. Powell called upon Gov. Wright to surrender McCormick for trial, is found in the second section of the fourth article of the Federal Constitution; it is as follows:

"A person charged with treason, felony or other crime, who shall flee from justice and be found in another State shall, on demand of the executive of the State from which he fled, be delivered up to be removed to the State having jurisdiction of the crime."

It is assumed that, as the inciting or aiding of slaves to run away is a crime under the laws of Kentucky, the Governor of Indiana is bound to deliver up McCormick to take his trial for that crime. But this is to give a perverted and intolerable scope to the constitutional provision, of which it is impossible that either the intention or the letter should stretch so far. It cannot be understood to recognize as crimes those acts which are declared to be such by the arbitrary, or accidental, or unjust legislation of this or that State; but only those which are crimes essentially—evils in themselves—offences against the universal sense and conscience of civilized society. If, for instance, supposing that one State had enacted witchcraft to be a felony, a woman indicted as a witch should escape thence into another State, the Governor's requisition for her surrender ought to be disregarded, for the reason that witchcraft is not essentially a crime, and therefore cannot be included under the constitutional provision in question. Precisely the same is the case with the aiding of enslaved persons to obtain their freedom. That is a crime in Kentucky, indeed, but not in common sense or justice. In truth, it is not only not a criminal act, but in itself virtuous and laudable; and a requisition for a person accused of having committed it, should no more be regarded than one for a witch or conjuror.

Such, we submit, is the only constitutional ground in the premises; and if Gov. Wright had possessed a little clearness of judgment and a little manly independence of soul, he would have taken no other. The argument adduced by our correspondent from the polygamists of Utah does not affect it. If Utah is admitted into the Union, it can only be on the ground that polygamy is not essentially a crime; for assuredly a people of criminals could never be allowed to form a State in the national federation. We trust that ground will never be taken by Congress and the Executive; but should it be, no State ought ever afterward to expect the extradition of a bigamist; for the act of admission will be equivalent to the declaration that bigamy is not a crime in itself, but only such by mere local and accidental law.

Such, in our view, is the only tenable exposition of the clause of the Constitution which we have quoted; and those who desire to investigate the matter more in detail will do well to consult the correspondence of Gov. Seward with the Lieutenant-Governor of Virginia, as given in the second volume of that statesman's recently published works. * * * *

Notwithstanding the acknowledgment by some that Mr. Greeley is the prince of editors, and that he is original and smart, in the Yankee acceptation of that term, we do not remember to have seen a more inconsistent article than the above for a long time, if ever before, and our only surprise is, that a man with the professed and acknowledged calibre of Mr. G. would suffer his reputation as a man of "common sense" to be so jeopardized, as to place such sentiments before the public with his sanction. The Tribune quotes the clause of the Constitution with reference to fugitives, which is as plain as any construction of the English language will admit, that the State on which the requisition is made for a fugitive, has no jurisdiction in the case other than to deliver up to the State "having jurisdiction."

He then says, to do the very thing specified in the clause, "is to give a perverted and intolerable scope to the constitutional provision, of which it is impossible that either the intention or the letter should stretch so far."

Why does the plain, obvious meaning of the clause stretch too far, and become intolerable to Mr. G.? Is it not because it is antagonistic to the higher law espoused by him and others of the same school? Hear him: "It cannot be understood to recognize as crimes those made so by the legislation of this or that State, but only those which are crimes essentially—evils in themselves—offences against the universal sense or conscience of civilized society."

Here we have it; statutes must not define crime, but the universal sense and conscience of civilized society. Who does not know that the sense of society in this country is never universal, touching any subject.

To talk about universal sentiment in society where there is not a sufficient number of one sentiment to make a corporal's guard, is folly. It is said by some philosophers that extremes meet, and that which is every one's business is no one's business. We believe the Tribune doctrine, carried out, would be corroborative of this saying, and that a universal sense and conscience government would be a government of anarchy, which is no government at all.

The aiding enslaved persons to obtain their freedom is indeed a crime in Kentucky, says he, "but not in common sense or justice." The Tribune's saying or believing thus, does not make it so, any more than it does for a Kentuckian or a Virginian to say and believe the reverse. Mr. G. must be aware that all men do not see alike, even though they may be alike honest; then, on this ground of common sense or justice, to the exclusion of law that is not in accordance with that sense or justice, who are to be the judges? Why every man of course must become a law unto himself, and others have the same right to advance their common sense or justice that Mr. G. has, and would do it no doubt. The strongest man or faction, then, would carry the point; and society would be reduced to the position of the wandering tribes of Africa and America—a state of things so much deprecated in civilized society, "the right of might." We have always been inclined to look with a jealous eye upon those who disrespect the laws of their country; they engender a spirit of dissatisfaction towards the laws and powers that be, and their influence tends to bring about anarchy and confusion.

Mr. G. in pursuing his higher law (no law) course, says, "if Utah is admitted into the Union, it can only be on the ground that polygamy is not essentially a crime; for assuredly a people of criminals could never be allowed to form a State in the national federation." He then tacitly admits that they are a "people of criminals," by trusting that Congress and the executive will never allow their admission. Here Utah is arraigned, tried, condemned and executed by this "higher law" of Mr. G. in one short sentence. Being a citizen of that Territory, we should look about us if we were charged with breaking the laws of our common country; but when we find that it is only Mr. G.'s "common sense" law that we have broken, we think we shall not eat or sleep any the less on account of it.

"Common sense" we admit to be the best kind of sense, but what Mr. G. would call common sense we should probably call common nonsense; and we do not know why we have not as much right to be judge in the matter as Mr. G. when law is put out of the question. Why does our contemporary take his common sense law by which to try slavery and polygamy? We answer, because there are no others that reach them; for he first takes up the Bible, and examining the Abrahamic and Mosaic dispensations, finds both slavery and polygamy tolerated, and it so shocks his "common sense," that he, with the Rev. Theodore Parker and other "higher law advocates," throw the old book that our fathers have so long reverenced, overboard. He then takes up the Constitution of the United States, and scans that over in great hurry no doubt, being anxious to convert the world as soon as possible; but lo and behold! to his great chagrin, he finds that polygamy is not condemned and that slavery is actually tolerated. Being still sanguine to make his points, he throws the old compact, sacred and revered as it is by many, overboard with the old book—then standing upon nothing, exclaims, "Universal sense and justice!" Common sense and justice! Every man for himself, and the Lord or the devil for us all, as the case may be.

As to the subject of Slavery, Utah (notwithstanding the Rev. Theodore Parker said in his late speech in Boston that she was a slave territory) has yet had nothing to do with it, and probably will not have at present; that is a thing that will be determined by her "popular sovereignty." If a majority of her citizens are for free soil, such will of course be Utah; if opposed, then vice versa. The writer of this article, having been born and educated in the old Bay State, would prefer the former, but yet retains a sufficiency of republican spirit to be governed by the majority, notwithstanding his own predilections. We determined when quite young, and are still sanguine in the determination, that in whatever country we sojourn, to be subject to the "powers that be." We love law and order, and we intend to stick to it "to the death." We would like, with Mr. G., to have that law that would suit our peculiar notions of things, but we have "common sense" enough to know that we cannot all be suited; hence we exercise our influence in moulding the laws at first, where we have an opportunity, and then abide by them, as the aggregate preponderance of the popular will. When a law has been established we respect that law, as the grand safeguard to society, and we have little sympathy for those who would dare to do it violence.

Again, Mr. Tribune says, if Utah is admitted as a State into the Union, no State after that ought to expect the extradition of a bigamist. This is all of a piece with the untenable course taken in the onset; there is no reason for any such premising, unless the Governor of Utah becomes as reckless and regardless of constitutional law, as some of the higher law school. When that shall be the case with the Governor of Utah or the Governor of any other State or Territory, it may well be said that constitutional law cannot be maintained, and the fruits of Mr. G.'s efforts will be realized, in that our Government will have become "a house divided against itself, which cannot stand."

What, I ask, in the name of "common sense" (for which Mr. G. is so tenacious) has the laws of one State to do with those of another, farther than to see that they be kept within the purview of the federal compact? Suppose that Wisconsin abolishes the law of capital punishment, does that make "scape-gallowes" of all the murderers in New York State? Suppose New York passes, as she has done, the proscriptive Maine Liquor Law, will that make sober men of those backwoods Missourians, whose patriotism is weighed only by the size and contents of their pocket flask? If Mr. G.'s position is anything at all, it is good for this; and it is only necessary for one State to pass a law, and all the rest must follow, or that which is equivalent, share the responsibility. If one State is for "Slavery," all are by this reasoning. If one is free, all are. If one hangs, all hang. If one winks at and suffers mobs to get the better of law, all are lawless, &c. &c. But enough of this. We affirm that the State of New York has the right to-day to exercise her individual State sovereignty—declare the monogamic law null, and institute a law allowing the plurality of wives in its stead. In so doing, she would not transcend that prerogative that she and every other State have reserved to themselves, and one which Congress has never pretended to hold. If New York should pass such a law, New York would be alone responsible for it, as she already is for a number of laws that some of the other States are not, and vice versa. That law would not affect a man in Connecticut, and a bigamist from that to this State would not clear himself of that which was crime there, notwithstanding it would not be a crime here. A State can exercise its own prerogative, but not that ceded to the general Government; hence, the fugitive law comes in, in its place, and is not only primary, in one sense, but auxiliary in another, in helping each State to execute its own laws, without regard to what those of its neighboring States may be. If politicians would confine themselves less to policy and more to law, there would be much less confusion in politics than we now are forced to witness. The people of this generation have grown so wise, that their wisdom has become very much like the surplus manna gathered by the Israelites in the wilderness; it is very unpleasant to the olfactories of a man with only an ordinary share.

Mormon Romance;

OR, SALT LAKE IN SLICES.

WHAT are all the editors about? No dreadful tales of Mormon outrage or rebellion! No Mormon robbery! No Brigham Young and forty wives to frighten disobedient, unruly misses with! Not a word about Utah! What have we done to be so slighted? What can the matter be? Surely you are not going to leave poor little Utah "severely alone!"—she has become so used to being cuffed about, that we are really afraid if you persevere in neglecting your usual "petit amour" she will pine away, under her desertion, poor little thing; she was getting along bravely under the exercise, but we fear she will fall away if something is not done for her soon.

We presume, however, this inattention to be only temporary, while you are paying your devoirs in the higher and more aristocratic circles of political aspiration, and will return to your old domiciliary habits of scolding and cuffling, when you shall have more leisure from graver matters of State.

All have not deserted her, however; there are a few who have found space and time in the midst of all the bustle and paraphernalia of political electioneering—theological, scientific, philosophic, and political, digests, to mix in a little Mormonism, just to flavor the dish, a slice from Salt Lake—a little stale, it is true; but then it serves for variety, to answer the diversified tastes of the public; so we do not so much wonder that Mr. Putnam should strive for the honor of serving the public tables with eclat, and endeavor to cater to the several wants of his customers, like a good host, as he is. We presume were he in Tartary he would as strictly observe the customs of his countryman, and be equally attentive to the wants of his visitors. We must say, however, we have been quite fascinated with the racy, rich, refined, and elegant production—that delectable Mormon romance, by the Lady Secretary Mrs. F., from which the columns of Mr. Putnam's Magazine and the New York Courier are so richly endowed.

While reading those interesting pages, with their graphically drawn pictures of the Mrs. firsts, seconds, and thirds, with the several degrees of beatitude and misery, it has almost transported us back to Mormondom and Salt Lake, and while reading, often imagined ourself pulling the old hat or worn-out unmentionables from the broken panes of some of those low-roofed dobie hovels, and peering through the fracture upon her dignified and queen-like figure, as she, with that pure, inestimable benevolence for which she is so remarkable, set forth from Mrs. Farnham's "beautiful residence," on her errand of mercy to the lowly hut of some poor, disconsolate "number six," or to offer condolence and mingle tears of commiseration with a heart-broken, deserted "number one;" and, after an absence of some hours of angel visits, returning, richly laden with valuable gossip for the future reformation of a fallen world—to receive the smiles of approbation from her noble liege lord, the Hon. Secretary, who, being somewhat enfeebled from the arduous nature of his domestic and public duties, and not partaking of that cheerful loquacity, and benignant, matronly familiarity of his beloved spouse, very naturally confined himself to the hive, while the queen bee daily came home ladened with the honey that embellish and so richly supply the tables of some of our Eastern editors.

There, in "Mrs. Farnham's room," methinks we can see the loving couple looking into the depths of each other's soul—the Lady Secretary, with her broad, good-natured countenance flushed with recent exercise, and bosom burning with the high and noble purpose of erecting a beacon upon the deceptive shoals of Polygamy, as a warning to the heedless fair ones of posterity,; while the noble Secretary, with countenance beaming with love and admiration—somewhat attenuated, but no less intelligent—paled by inward conflict, with spectacles suffused by the moisture of overflowing eyes at the malancholy details so interestingly rehearsed; and see! his brow contracts as he grasps the recording pen with nervous hand to commit to posterity each gem as it falls from those ruby lips, and gushes from that loving, self-sacrificing heart that owned him lord.

It carries us back to scenes at Social Hall—at the Tabernacle—at the holiday gatherings of the Fourth, aye, at the Governor's, even—where we have seen her benign countenance lighted up with cheerful smiles to see an occasional ray of joy that sometimes penetrates that darkened region, throwing at least a momentary gleam of sunshine into the dark, oppressed, and down-trodden souls of those poor, enslaved fair ones of Utah. Alas! that there are not more of our fair countrywomen who would, with that self-sacrificing spirit of Christian charity, get their husbands to apply for a secretaryship, judgeship, or even State attorneyship in Utah, and thus leave behind them all these loved associations of home and civilization, and as angels of light to that distant and benighted people, with the refinement of the polite circles of our Eastern communities, and with the meekness and Christian charity of early reformers, go with their husbands to Utah, and strive to reclaim those poor deluded fair ones, and woo them to the paths of rectitude and virtue. What better mission could an angel desire? They might, also, be the blessed instrument of saving some of those innocent and uninitiated copper-colored ladies from that abyss in which they are so liable to fall, through some of the less scrupulous officials who go without their wives.

In looking over the intensely interesting narrative of Mrs. F.'s visit at Salt Lake, (it ought to have been entitled "Salt Lake in Slices,") we were surprised to find she had unaccountably omitted a pithy little anecdote, which we are sure would have embellished that fascinating work, as it is particularly connected with "domestic relations," which forms the principal part of the "plot" of that excellent production; undoubtedly it was forgotten during the preparation for their tedious journey to California. Though some may think the anecdote uninteresting, or perhaps trifling, yet it being so characteristic, we cannot forbear adding it to her admirable collection.

It is necessary to premise, that the "Lady Secretary's" figure might be termed "en bon point," and with the healthful, ruddy glow of youth, would make no mean representative of the comely matrons of old Yorkshire, while her legal, historic friend and connubial lord—the Territory's Secretary, and hers—(we remember him well as he tremulously stretch'd forth his hand for us to kiss the sheep skin)—his attenuated person, pale face, and acute nervous sensibilities, strongly contrasting with his better and much larger half. Now it must be understood that her ladyship, had not (however so much desired) any of those interesting little domestic ties, ycleep'd, babies. Upon an occasion of a social party, at a residence, where there were "several front doors" the lady and her etherial husband being of the party (they never omitted such opportunities for observation) she with her usual affability, passing numbers six—two's—sevens, twenties, forty's and sixty's, each with gracious smiles, and cordial shaking of hands, and interesting inquiries after the family, etc., finaly came up to one of the company, a cheerful, matronly-looking lady, with a fine robust, hearty, smiling babe in her arms, sitting somewhat aside from the rest, and after the usual courtesies of meeting, and the usual motherly admiration expressed for fine fat babies, and how happy she would be if it was hers, she suddenly assumed a tone and look of commiseration, and expressed her wonder (sotto voce) that such a lady, with such a splendid baby, could possibly submit to share with another, the affections of its papa,—when the mother, first with a look of astonishment, which immediately gave place to a merry twinkle of the eye, as she looked up and naively remarked: "it is better to have a half loaf, than no bread at all," at which Mrs. F. remarked upon the extreme heat of the room, and moved with exceeding grace to the door, through which as in duty bound, her less lively room mate soon followed.

"That bind fond hearts together,"

If Mrs. F. could possibly be induced to favor the Metropolis with her presence for a few months, there would be an opportunity for our citizens to express to her that warm admiration, so richly due to one of whose merits as an author, we fear the country at large, too little appreciate.

None could conceive the vast amount of good that would result from her visits to many of the elegant mansions (not the "low hovels," for enough has already been written of them,) that adorn this emporium of all that is virtuous, and with her graphic pen depict the domestic bliss and heavenly joy that lights up the countenances of their fair inmates, and give that high tone to the moral atmosphere of this great city—the supreme confidence and reliance of these fair ones, in the propriety and virtue of their bosom compsnions, of the ruder sex. It would give relief and strengthen the contrast, to the dark pictures of Utah, and complete that wreath of immortal laurels so nobly won by Mrs. F.

We presume none could doubt but what the world-wide celebrity attending "Uncle Tom's Cabin," would attach itself to Mrs. F.'s Mormon romance, only for that lady's extreme diffidence and delicate feminine objections to appear so openly before a criticising public, and we really hope that the liberality of the gentlemen who purchased the copy right, was equal to her veracity, purity and eminence as a writer.

We wish also to suggest to gentlemen of the various literary associations, of our country, by all means to secure this inestimable production, with certain other works, valuable for their morality, truthfulness and elegant diction, especially as waymarks denoting the advancement and enlightenment of the age! We would name in this connection, that invaluable production, "Female Life Among the Mormons," "Gen. J. C. Bennett's Expose," with files of several prominent New York papers—all of which are worthy of a place in the archieves of literary and historic fame.

The New York Herald

OF the 14th comes out right bravely on Mormonism; we couldn't have done better ourselves. It is out with the "Lights and Shadows," most artistically arranged, and brilliantly rays forth the principles of Mormonism to its "million readers," with that dazzling powes and efficacy known only to the New York Herald, and beyond our limited ability and powers of contemplation. We and the world certainly owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. B. for this disinterested display of qualities and quantities, and we think that quotation from scripture to be apropos: "He that sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not"—only the Herald, like the revolving beacon light, the next turn may show blue, red, or white—there is no knowing, nor does it matter, so it guides the mariner on the ocean of life; and one of its brightest phases, through the Herald, has thus shot forth upon the surrounding darkness. Success to the ——, but we'll wait till the next turn.

P. S.—We recommend the curious and inquiring to the New York Herald of the 14th for an exposition of Mormonism.

New York, Nov. 15.—(See article from Herald on the first page.)—How fortunate we didn't commit ourselves yesterday. Still something is due for a whole side of good Mormon preaching yesterday, and only a column and a half of anti to-day. Well now, that's doing pretty well, Mr. B., and we haven't a heart to complain; only you shouldn't have coupled the "Captain-General's" name with those "Simon Pure Digger Indian squaws," that is a slight mistake of yours—it was some of the officers that the United States sent out; so pray don't be so careless, Mr. B. About the "peaches," and the "grapes," and the "piano," they are expensive luxuries for a Governor, and General Cass ought to take the subject up "in the Senate on the first convenient night after the meeting of Congress," and add a clause to the Constitution, prohibiting all such "exquisite dessert and bijouterie of Paris"—a piano, to Territorial Governors from this time, henceforth and for ever; that wouldn't be ex post facto, would it, Mr. B.? The disinterested advice you vouchsafe to the Saints about the unbroken deserts and weary and desolate defiles, is excellent—just as a Mormon Elder would do himself; they always like the wheat well winnowed, besides, it helps to keep the dogs out. As to the Constitution's allowing too much liberty of choosing one's religion, and the "criminal neglect of the President" and the Government at Washington, it's you and them for it; but really we think you go a good way out of your way to thump Utah under the ribs, for the sake of rapping Mr. Pierce and the administration over the knuckles. However, that's excusable in these warm political times. "They claim, in fact, that they are the people of the Territory, and are therefore the supreme law." Yes, they claim in fact, "that they are the people of the Territory;" none can doubt it, and American citizens too—do you blame them for that, Mr. B.?—"and therefore the supreme law." Yes, just so far as the Constitution and the Organic Act" allows, which they have never yet overstepped. "And so this unseemly excrescence upon our body politic has continued to grow, until it has become a stigma upon our beneficent and wholesome institutions, civil, political and religious." Possibly you may think so, but others may not. In the "civil and political" they have hardly had time to develope a very large excrescence yet, (only eight years in Utah,) and for the religious, we are at a loss to know which "our beneficent wholesome religious institutions" are.

As for the opinion of the editor of the Herald and New York society, we only judge by their fruits, and we think the Herald to be a most excellent paper, and New York society just as good, and a little better, than any other society in the world—except Utah. We feel under extreme obligation to the Herald for the timely warning to be off—but where shall we go? We thought we were a "thousand miles of uninhabited plains" from anywhere, and "dependent upon our own resources," "the few green and artificially watered patches of land which they occupy in the vast arid desert Territory of Utah, and cut off by intervening deserts and mountains from inhabitants," all around. Where shall we go next? To what "quarter of the earth" would your liberality and "beneficent institutions" consign us? * * * * * *

"Nor do we perceive how such a law would conflict with the doctrine, that the will of the people is the supreme law, for are not the Territories the domain of all the people of the United States?" Yes, sir. Who are the Mormons—are they people, Mr. B.? However, "General Cass, who seems to have thoroughly studied the subject of "squatter sovereignty" and religious liberty, is the man for this business;" and we shall wait with anxiety to hear from him. That nap, however, is pretty well used up, and we are afraid she won't come in—in time.

News from Salt Lake.

THE seasonable arrival of the October mail across the plains from Utah, places us in receipt of the Deseret News up to the 26th, and letters to the 30th September.

The news is, as usual, replete with items showing the industry and progress of the inhabitants of those pleasant valleys.

It is now estimated that notwithstanding the fearful ravages of the grasshoppers in many sections of the Territory, the crops of grain will be sufficient, with careful management, to last until more can be produced.

We give elsewhere an account of the establishment of a Horticulural Society in Salt Lake City. We are much gratified to see such interest manifested in this branch of agriculture; we trust it will increase until Utah shall vie with, if not excel, the Eastern States in producing, according to her eminent qualifications by nature, everything in the vegetable kingdom calculated to attract the eye, gratify the taste, and gladden the heart of man.

We are very happy to learn that Iron county is going ahead in the manufacture of iron, having already produced several tons, and a good prospect of being able ere long to supply the Territory with the home manufacture of that useful article.

A number of Elders have recently arrived at Missouri River, from Utah, on missions to the States and Europe; one of them, Bro. William J. Smith, has arrived at this place, and will take passage to Liverpool in a few days.

Bro. Smith looks hale and hearty, and reports the rest the same. They had a prosperous trip across the plains, occupying some forty-two days.

The News of September 12th contains an interesting account of a treaty formed in Salt Lake City, between the Utes and Shoshones or Snakes. We have not room to publish it this week, but will give more next.

Later from Texas.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 10, 1855.

LATER dates from Texas has been received. A desperate fight had occurred near Fort Belknap between parties of Delaware and Camanche Indians, and seven of the latter were killed. The Indians continued their depredations on the frontier. A treaty had been made with the Camanches in New and Northern Mexico.

Distressing Occurrence—Two Men Killed.

ROME, N. Y., Nov. 12, 1855.

A MOST distressing occurrence took place to-day, at Newville, a small village about a mile and a half from this place, on the road toward Utica. The steam saw mill, situated on the hill of that place, blew up about nine o'clock in the morning, killing two persons instantly. One of the killed was Henry S. Roberts, son of Judge Roberts of this village. The other one killed was the fireman, whose name we have not been able to ascertain.

Railroad Accident.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 12, 1855.

A FREIGHT and cattle train on the Central Railroad going east last evening, when about four miles from this city, was thrown from the track while crossing a high bridge by the train separating and running together on a heavy grade. One person was killed, and a great number of cattle, also twenty cars were thrown off the track.

News from Texas.

NEW ORLEANS, No. 13, 1855.

WE are in reception of later dates from Texas.

Governor Pease had sent in his message to the Legislature, and in it he justifies the proceedings of Captain Callahan, but regrets the necessity of burning Predras Negras, and opposes further unauthorized expeditions into Mexico for the purpose of chastising the Indians.

Minutes

Of a General Conference of the Sandwich Islands Mission of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, held at the Gathering Place, Palawai, Island of Lanai, commencing on Tuesday, July 24, 1855.

CONFERENCE convened at 9 A. M.; President Philip B. Lewis presiding.

Present—18 Seventies, 6 Elders.

Conference called to order, and opened by singing the hymn, on the 67th page, "Praise ye the Lord," &c. Prayer by President Lewis. Sang hymn, on the 115th page, "On the mountain tops," &c.

Moved and carried that Elder John T. Caine act as Clerk of this Conference.

President Lewis made a few appropriate remarks, congratulating the Elders upon the privilege they now enjoy in thus meeting in a Conference capacity to transact business pertaining to the work of the Lord on these lands; said we should first attend to business, and then spend the remaining time in speaking as the Spirit might dictate.

Moved, seconded, and carried, that we sustain the First Presidency and General Authorities in the land of Zion, together with all the constituted authorities of the Church in all the world.

The President then called for the reports of the different Conferences, which were given as follows:

Names of Conferences, and by whom represented.	No. of Branches.	Missionaries from Utah.	Elders.	Priests.	Teachers.	Deacons.	Died.	Cut Off.	Baptized since last Conference.	Total No. Officers and Members.

As the brethren gave their reports, they stated the situation of the work in their fields; in some places the Saints were alive to the work, and were progressing in faith and knowledge, while in others they were lukewarm and careless.

Adjourned for one hour. Singing. Dismissed by Elder Silas Smith.

Conference convened at 2 P. M. Opened by singing. Prayer by Elder H. P. Richards.

Report of the operations at the Gathering Place on Lanai, subnitted by Elder F. A. Hammond, accepted.

Report shows the place to be in as good a situation as could reasonably be expected under the circumstances; although somewhat involved at present, the prospects are good for the future.

President Lewis reports that half of a small vessel has been purchased for the use of the mission for the sum of $800, about half of which amount has been raised, and the vessel will soon be ready for sea. Conference unanimously sustained this transaction.

Report on Native Hymn Book, submitted by Elder John S. Woodbury, accepted.

Report shows that several hymns, original and selected, had been compiled for that work.

Moved and carried that Elders P. B. Lewis, E. Greene, R. A. Allred, F. A. Hammond, J. S. Woodbury, and G. Linn be now honorably released from this mission, with liberty to return home as soon as they can make the necessary arrangements.

President Lewis then arose, and in a few affectionate and appropriate remarks tendered his resignation as President of this Mission. Accepted.

President Lewis then nominated as his successor Elder Silas Smith.

Moved and seconded that we accept the nomination, and that we sustain Elder Silas Smith as the future President of this Mission. Carried unanimously.

President Lewis then counselled the brethren to sustain their President with their faith and prayers, for on this depends the future prosperity of this Mission.

President Lewis then resigned the chair to President Smith.

President Smith thanked the brethren for this manifestation of their confidence; said it should ever be his aim to merit a continuance of the same; this call was unexpected to him, but by the assistance of the Lord he was willing to act in any capacity while sustained by the faith and prayers of his brethren.

President Smith then nominated Elder John T. Caine as his first counsellor, and Elder Silas S. Smith as his second counsellor. Nominations unanimously sustained.

Moved and carried that the Island of Hawaii be again divided into two Conferences, to be called the Hilo and Kohala Conferences.

Moved and carried that the Island of Lanai be detached from the Maui Conference, and be known as the Lanai Conference.

Moved and carried that the Island of Molokai be again a separate Conference, and be known as the Molokai Conference.

The Elders were then appointed to their respective fields of labor, as follows:

Lanai Conference—S. S. Smith, President; W. King and W. E. Pack, Assistants.

Maui Conference—Joseph Smith, President; S. E. Johnson and S. M. Molen, Assistants.

Hilo Conference—H. P. Richards, President; and J. R. Young, Assistant.

Kohala Conference—Edward Partridge, President; and W. B. Rogers, Assistant.

Oahu Conference—John T. Caine, President; O. K. Whitney, John A. West, and W. W. Cluff, Assistants.

Kauai Conference—George Spiers, President; and S. B. Thurston, Assistant.

Molokai Conference—Eli Bell, President.

Conference adjourned till 9 o'clock to-morrow. Singing. Dismissed by Elder Hammond.

WEDNESDAY, July 25th, 9 A. M.

Conference opened by singing. Prayer by Elder Caine. Singing.

Moved and carried that Charles S. Atkins be ordained an Elder, and take a mission to Hilo, Hawaii, to labor under the direction of President H. P. Richards.

Moved and carried that the business of securing the land for the Gathering Place on Lanai be left in the hands of the Presidency of the Mission.

Moved and carried that an English school be permanently established at the Gathering Place on Lanai, and that Elder Ward E. Pack take charge of the same, under the direction of the Presidency.

Moved and carried that the Presidency in Zion be respectfully requested to send more help to labor in this Mission.

Moved and carried that Elders Hoen and Kaohimauna take a mission to Kohala, Hawaii; Elders Kaleo and Namaiheehee to Hilo, Hawaii; Elders Makuakane and Kauihou to Kauai; and Elder Kuahauli to Molokai.

Adjourned for one hour. Singing. Dismissed by Elder Woodbury.

2 P. M.

Singing. Prayer by S. S. Smith. Singing.

Moved and carried that J. H. Napela, J. W. H. Kauwahi, George Raymond, and H. K. Kaleohano commence immediately to make arrangements to gather up to Zion, agreeable to the request of President Young.

Adjourned till 9 o'clock to-morrow. Singing. Dismissed by President Lewis.

THURSDAY, July 26th, 9 A. M.

Opened by singing. Prayer by President Smith. Singing.

This morning was occupied in transacting business of a local nature, mostly pertaining to the Gathering on Lanai.

Adjourned for one hour. Singing. Dismissed by Elder Green.

2 P. M.

Singing. Prayer by Elder Allred. Singing.

Moved and seconded that we are satisfied with, and approbate, the course pursued by Elder P. B. Lewis while President of this Mission, as also Elders E. Green, R. A. Allred, F. A. Hammond, and J. S. Woodbury; and that they now return home with our confidence and respect, and prayers for their future welfare.

Also, that we commend to the confidence and esteem of the Saints in Zion, Elder Gustaf Linn, who embraced the gospel on these lands, and has since labored diligently in the ministry. Carried unanimously.

Conference was then addressed by President Lewis, Elders Green, Allred, Woodbury, and Hammond.

Adjourned till to-morrow. Singing. Dismissed by Elder Pack.

FRIDAY, July 27th, 9 A. M.

Conference opened by singing. Prayer by Elder Hammond. Singing.

There was no business done this morning, the time being entirely occupied by the brethren in speaking.

Adjourned for one hour. Singing. Dismissed by Elder J. Smith.

2 P. M.

Singing. Prayer by Elder S. S. Smith. Singing.

The time was again occupied by the Elders in speaking.

Adjourned till to-morrow. Singing. Dismissed by President Smith.

SATURDAY, July 28th, 10 A. M.

Opened by singing. Prayer by Elder Caine. Singing.

Moved and carried that we use every exertion to build meeting-houses in the different Conferences, and to repair those already built.

President Smith then addressed the Conference at some length on the necessity of setting good examples before the natives; also exhorting all the Elders to be strict in keeping the word of wisdom; to all of which the Conference heartily responded.

Much good instruction was given during the Conference, and a general spirit of union prevailed among the Elders, with a determination to roll on the Kingdom of God.

Moved and carried that this Conference adjourn till the 6th of April next, to meet at such place as the Presidency may appoint.

Singing. Benediction by President Smith.

PHILIP B. LEWIS,
SILAS SMITH,
JOHN T. CAINE, Clerk. Presidents.

News from Utah.

We have received our correspondence and files from Great Salt Lake, Utah Territory. The news is to September 30, two weeks later.

Correspondence to the N. Y. Herald.

Description of the Route to the Salt Lake Valley—The Topography of Salt Lake City—The Grasshopper Plague—Emigration—Brigham Young a Millionaire—Costume of the Mormon Ladies, &c.

THE "Saint," who for the first time wends his way to the "Valley of the Mountains," must no doubt often compare himself with the hero of Bunyan's delightful allegory, the Pilrim's Progress; for of all rough entrances to a place, the last hundred miles of the route to this place certainly comes nearer to the learned tincker's description of "a hard, road to travel." The road winds through narrow ravines, within a few inches of the edges of high creek banks, along sidling hills, over miry spots and nasty holes, crossing creeks almost innumerable times, up and down two long steep and rough mountains; and lastly, through its numerous windings on the last few miles of the road, keeps the stranger in momentary expectation of emerging suddenly into the oasis of a half desert mid continent. As the stranger leaves the narrow confines of emigration, he sees before him a valley apparently not more than five or six miles in width, and northward, seemly the same distance, a Great Salt Lake, like a silver line gleaming across the valley, while he thinks a mile and a half's travel will bring him to the city which partly hid by a point of the East Mountains lays before him; five good miles of travel, however, only brings him to the edge of the city, and upon enquiring he learns that fifteen miles more of travelling in a straight line will only find him at the foot of the West Mountains, and twenty more upon the southeastern shores of the lake. This deception, on the part of nature, in regard to the landmarks of this valley, is to be ascribed to the purity of the atmosphere and the deep but gradual descent of the land from the mountains to the centre.

Great Salt Lake City is situated on the east side of the river Jordon, a small stream that flows northward into Great Salt Lake. The streets, which are eight rods wide, cross each other at right angles, running parallel to the four cardinal points of the compass. There are nineteen wards in the city, each containing nine squares, and each square contains six lots of one and a quarter acres each. These lots were originally given to actual settlers, but now vary in price from one hundred and fifty dollars in the outskirts to as many for a small piece in the centre of the city; they are being rapidly subdivided, and no doubt the city will, in time, be as compactly built as any Gentile city. The streets are still in a primitive condition, being neither graded nor paved they however, present a hard surface. But, in one of the high winds that somtimes sweep the streets, phew! all is obscurity, and it is only by an occasional lull in old Boreas tide that a person can discern his whereabouts. There is no shade along the walks except what is made by some diminutive specimens of future expectations. This is not to be wondered at however, when we consider that seven years ago nothing of the tree kind grew upon the land now occupied by the city. Two large streams, flowing from the East Mountains, have been diverted from their old channels, and are led by large ditches into the city, where, by means of smaller ditches along the edges of the sidewalks, the water is caused to ramify throughout the city and water every square. From these ditches each lot is entitled to use the water, for irrigation, a certain number of hours every week, according to the abundance or scarcity. The houses are either built of logs or adobes, or sun-dried bricks, though chiefly of the latter. These blue or cream-colored adobe houses give to the city a quiet Quaker-like appearance, in agreeable contrast to the glaring colors of the buildings in Eastern towns. On account of the high winds quite frequent in these regions, nine-tenths of the buildings are less than two stories in height. A few flower gardens claim the passing tribute of admiration; but, as a general thing, utility reigns throughout the city from the pole fences to the inward decorations, of the houses. Rich, indeed, must be the man who, in these far-off regions, can gather around him all the things of comfort and ornament that adorn the houses of Eastern mechanics. Each ward contains a schoolhouse, wherein, as a general thing, school is only taught during the few winter months.* A mud-wall, eight feet high by five feet thick at the base, surrounds the city as a protection against the Indians in case of trouble. The city is computed to contain fifteen thousand inhabitants.

The city government consists of a Mayor, Board of Alderman, and a Common Council. There are also, justices and constables; but, I imagine, they are offices of honor rather than profit, for the Mormons, generally, dislike going to law. Over each ward the church has a bishop, whose office, in conjunction with two counsellors, is to attend to the sick and needy, and settle all minor disputes or quarrels that may occur between persons residing within his jurisdiction. If a Saint is proved to have wronged or slandered a brother or sister, and refuses to make restitution, or ask forgiveness, he is disfellowshipped, or cut off from the church until he repents; such a person being on a par with a criminal among the Gentiles. I never had the good fortune to see a more quiet place than this city. Not a dram shop or a gaming saloon is suffered to open its pestilential jaws; and I have yet to see the first drunken person in Salt Lake Valley.

This summer the entire wheat crop in and south of this city was cut off by the grasshoppers; they came in millions, eating a field bare in a few minutes. They also extended their ravages to the other grains, vegetables and fruit. The drought lent its assistance to the grasshoppers, and between them both the crops will come out poorly; but, luckily enough, wheat has been raised North to supply the wants of the people until next harvest. The small species of grasshopper that has done so much damage to the crops bears no resemblance to the cricket of former years, which is a flesh colored, winglass insect, with black stripes around the abdomen, and a large head and mandibles, looking more like a great ugly spider than any species of cricket found in the States.

Hard times, the general visiter, when the earthly banks refuse to pay a reasonable per centage on all deposits, has visited every workshop and household, within the Territory, and a scarcity of labor and money is the result. Were not nearly every citizen in this valley a tiller of the soil, on a small or large scale, things would have been worse; but, as it is, there will be no suffering, although considerable deprivation this winter.

Flouer now sells at $6 a hundred, corn $1 75 and potatoes $1 per bushel, wholesale; before spring it is likely they will take a further rise in value.

The California emigration through this place has been smaller this year than any time since the discovery of the mines.

The overland route this summer has been more scant of water and grass than has been known within the memory of the oldest mountaineers.

This season's Mormon emigration across the plains will number about three thousand persons. Eight companies have been fitted out from Atchison, Kansas Territory, five of whom have arrived unmolested by the Indians. The emigrants mostly comprise English families, with a sprinkling of Americans, Danes, Scotch and Irish. Great efforts will be made next year for a larger emigration from the British Isles, by means of the Perpetual Emigrating Fund. To this fund Brigham Young has lately donated several thousand dollars worth of property. A few Sundays ago, at the Tabernacle, he declared his property to be worth two hundred thousand dollars, all of which he was willing to donate to the fund, if purchasers could be found with the hard cash; for the emigration would, in a few years, make him worth five times as much. The old gentlemen understands how to manage his own affairs, at least, and can safely be placed on future lists of American millionaires.

About the 10th of this month the Governor forwarded to Washington a bundle of official documents, tending to free the Mormons from the stain of having killed Captain Gunnison. It is said they will prove a perfect system of debauchery on the part of the United States officers, who were quartered here last winter, some of whom are charged with revamping the accusation of murder against the Mormons.

An endeavor will be made to retain all future mails from this Territory to the East, in the city until two days after the arrival of the inward bound mail. As things are now managed, the Eastern mail leaves on the first of every month, and the return comes in several days after, with many letters that require immediate answers. The damage to the business interests of the citizens of Utah, caused by the careless management of the mail is incalculable, to say nothing of the inconveniences resulting therefrom. Every mail brings the supreme head of the Mormon church, on an average, half a dozen letters from lawyers and physicians in the States, stating, after cataloguing their accomplishments, that they are delighted with the principles of Mormonism, and would like to come and dwell with such a happy people as the "Saints," if they could only establish a professional confidence, in which case they would gladly join the church. Of late these letters have been thrown aside unanswered; but formerly the invariable reply was that the only way for professional gentlemen of their stripe to establish a confidence here would be for them to do like some predecessors—go to work tilling the soil, carrying the hod, or hauling wood from the canyons. There is no record of these answers having brought the devout inquirers into the arms of Mormonism. No doubt the Mormon church has one principle these manufacturers of mischief and graves would have embraced with great gusto, namely the spiritual wife doctrine.

On the 21st, during a rain storm in the city, a shower of snow fell on the tops of the mountains, a few miles southeast. There has been but little snow visible on the mountains this summer—less than at any former period since the first settlement of this section of country—which accounts for the small supply of water in all the mountain streams.

The fourth company of Mormon emigrants comprising four hundred poor fund passengers, was escorted into the city, on the 25th, by the Nauvoo brass band, of which one of the returning missionaries in charge of the train was a member; several banners, with inscriptions, adorned the train. This company has had the misfortune, since starting, of losing three women by accidents—two were shot and one run over. When one of the accidents occurred, the company was camped at Fort Laramie, where two thousand Cheyennes were awaiting the payment of their annuities. In order to intimidate the Indians, who were careering rather saucily around the corral upon their ponies, the firearms were brought out to their view, when one of the guns was accidently discharged, shooting a woman belonging to the camp in the leg. The Indians immediately, as if by previous consent, formed into a straight line, prepared to attack the camp, thinking that one of their own number had been killed.

A portion of the Utah and Snake tribes, under their respective chiefs, Ar-ra-pine, and Tiba-tow-ats, met in this city on the 7th, and formed a treaty of peace with each other.

The ladies of Utah have adopted a new costume, which seems to be gradually increasing in favor. It consists of a loose fitting dress, resembling, in cut, a man's sack coat, being buttoned in front, and reaching a few inches below the knees, a pair of pantalets adorning the ankles, and a Leghorn hat set jauntly upon the head, being in fact a modification of the Bloomer costume. The ladies are thus relieved of a superabundant load of petticoats and their husbands are freed from paying for more than two-thirds the usual quantity of dry goods—a no small item of expense in this country. There is no doubt but that there is as much need of reform in the articles of man's dress as in that of woman's; for instance, what can be more absurd, cumbersome and useless thon that monkey-like appendage, a coattail. I decidedly prefer the common Utah costume of a flannel or cloth overshirt, as more becoming the male gender, than any other modification of the "long tailed blue."

About two hundred and fifty bushels of peaches have been raised within the Territory this season; a few apples were also raised, and sold for twenty-five cents each. The sugar works have ceased operations, in consequence of the failure of the beet crop. During the past summer the people of Provo have collected and manufactured several thousand pounds of what the Mormons, in their ecstasy, term "manna sugar." It consists of the secretions of honey dew on the surface of the cottonwood leaves, giving them the appearance of having been glazed with honey. In many of the leaves, secretions of sugar resembling the sugar of milk are formed. The hard sugar is generally shaken off, and the honey-coated leaves soaked in water, which is afterwards boiled down. In the trees I have examined, almost every leaf had received a share of the sweets.

The 6th of next month the semi-annual General Conference of the Mormon church will be held in this city. CACHE.

* The gentleman here makes a slight mistake; it may be so in some Wards, but as a general thing, Schools are kept the year around.—[ED.

Correspondence.

From Our Sandwich Island Correspondent.

HONOLULU, OAHU, Sept. 17, 1855.

ELDER JOHN TAYLOR—Dear Bro.: Knowing that you feel a deep interest in the affairs of the Church in all parts of the world, I forward a copy of the Minutes of our last General Conference, which I hope may prove acceptable to you.

The work of the Lord still continues to progress on these Islands; not with that rapidity which it did at first, but perhaps more sure.

Since the Conferenoe, Elders John S. Woodbury, E. Green, James Keeler, and R. A. Allred, have left to return home to Zion. Our former Prest. Elder Lewis, will sail for the coast in a few days, and Elders Hammond and Snider will follow as soon as they possibly can.

So you will see that the Mission has fallen into the hands of the young Elders, who left Utah in May, 1854. We are only 18 in number, and are pretty well distributed over this group of Islands. We are all in the enjoyment of excellent health and spirits, and have been ever since we came here, which is a great blessing to us. And although our mode of living is very different from anything that we were previously accustomed to, yet we enjoy ourselves first rate.

I presume you are aware that Elder George Q. Cannon and others are engaged in San Francisco in publishing the Hawaiian translation of the Book of Mormon. By the last mail we received a few copies of the first form.

The Native Saints, as far as we have been able to show it to them, seemed much pleased, and are anxious for more. I think this Book will be a great assistance to us in our labors. We have not as yet any book expressive of our faith and doctrine in the Hawaiian language, but I hope we soon shall have, now that our Press is started at the coast.

I have seen one No. of "The Mormon" and much admire its magnificent heading and graceful proportious, as well as its high tone and lofty sentiments; after I had feasted my eyes upon its mechanical embellishments, and my soul upon its literary beauties; I felt proud of it, and rejoiced that the cause of truth had so valiant a champion as "The Mormon" in the great American metropolis.

Enclosed I forward you $2.50 for which yon will please send me the "Mormon" for one year.

My time since I came here has been occupied in studying the Native language, in writing for the Mission, and since Conference in preaching to the foreign Saints in the city. Our branch is but small, yet an excellent spirit prevails, and they are making every exertion to gather up to Zion. We have not many strangers come to hear us, but I believe we could raise a congregation if a suitable Hall could be procured; this we have not as yet been able to obtain. We now meet in the same place as our native meeting is held, but as it is only a native grass house, our aristocratic foreign population can not condescend so low; yet I am determined before I leave this Conference to give the foreign residents of this city a chance to hear the truth; and then they may receive, or reject; I shall have done my duty, and the responsibility be on their own heads. I have been blessed in my ministrations thus far, the blessing you placed upon my head when you set me apart for this mission is indeed being realized; for when in my weakness I stand up to speak, the spirit of the Lord is with me, and I feel edified and blessed with my own words; I ask an interest in your prayers that my strength my be sufficient for my day.

I have not as yet acquired the native language but all my spare time is devoted to its study, my being in this place, so much among foreigners has been a detriment to my studies in that matter, but as it was necessary for some one to be stationed here, and the President saw fit to select me, I am perfectly satisfied, for whether I labor among foreigners, or natives so that I do what I can for the kingdom, I presume all will be well.

Bro. Taylor, I won't trouble you any farther, but draw this disconnected scrawl to a close by requesting to be remembered to the Utah Elders in your region, especially Elders Felt and Robbins.

With prayers for your health and prosperity, I remain as ever, your brother in the new and everlasting Covenant.

JOHN T. CAINE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 19, 1855.

DEAR UNCLE: As the mail closes at 12 midnight and it now only lacks but a few hours of it, I shall be brief.

The type I sent for I received, all right and accompanied by a few lines from George; the last mail also brought me a letter from him. The papers arrive as a general thing quite regularly. I have found subscribers for the twenty-four papers ordered by Bro. Parley, and have the price of the subscription on hand, subject to your order. I think if I had a few numbers more I could dispose of them. It is well liked by all, and all are loud in their praises of the ability displayed in the editoral department. Do you intend to publish it another year? I do not know how it pays, whether it supports itself or not, but I should think its influence must be sensibly felt throughout the East, and in fact, not only in the East but wherever it is circulated. I often wish we had one started and under as good headway here as "THE MORMON" is there. A paper in this country will, I am confident, be of incalculable benefit, and will help counteract a great amount of misrepresentation. What amount of support it will receive I am as yet unable to determine. If San Bernardino will feel interested in the affair, they can do considerable; the failure of their crops, however, and the hard times which are so prevalent from one end to the other of this country, will, no doubt, cripple them to some extent, and prevent them from doing as much as they otherwise would. If a press ever can be sustained and a paper published in this country, I think our circumstances are as favorable for its accomplishment as any ever will be; and I feel quite sanguine in trying it by issuing a weekly paper as quick as the book is out. The Lord has sustained us so far, and has supplied all our wants to an extent far beyond my expectations; and when I look back to the time we landed here from the Valley, and remember how small the prospect then was of doing much, I am surprised at what has been accomplished.

We are progressing with the Book as fast as material and the amount of help will admit of; the 304 page of the Hawaiian translation—which is the 327 of the English edition—went to press to-day; and I think, with the blessing of the Lord, that we will have the remainder, with the index, preface, &c., out by the middle or latter end of December.

I shall be glad to receive a letter, however short it may be, from you at any time.

I must conclude, and pray the Lord to bless and prosper you continually.

I remain, as ever,
Your affectionate nephew,
GEO. Q. CANNON.

From Our Utah Correspondent.

CEDAR CITY, Sept. 8, 1855.

DEAR BROTHER TAYLOR: We have received some numbers of your invaluable paper, and we rejoice in its appearance—its contents and every thing else connnected with it, being as it is to us the fullest and most complete paper that we can get, and our chief reliance for news and information from the old world; in short were it not for it, and some small smatterings from other sources, we should be apt to conclude the world was at peace: So small evidence have we here at home of the destruction and turmoil that pervades the earth. But if you could send us our papers by the southern instead of the eastern route, it would be a great accommodation to us, both as regards getting our papers, and settleing the postage.

Perhaps a few items of information concerning our doings and prospects will not be uninteresting to you. In the first place we have raised a good crop here, and it is the only good crop south of Salt Lake City this season, the grasshoppers having eaten the balance, or the most of it. Our city is making rapid progress, in buildings and all the ordinary improvements, and our Iron works are progressing first-rate; we have got a hot blast, which operates complete, and iron of our manufacture; also, a trip hammer, and in addition to these we have made several tons of castings of various descriptions, and have every prospect of going a head first-rate; our new furnace does good work and plenty of it, and soon we expect to have a steam engine completed to connect with it.

The Indians here are peaceable and are making rapid strides in improvement; sickness is a stranger in our midst, and all are rejoicing in the goodness of God to us in preserving our crops and our lives. Hoping that all things are going well with you, and also that we shall get our papers, I remain your Brother and fellow labor in the Kingdom of God.

Two Weeks Later from California.

Arrival of the Northern Light.

THE Accessory Transit Company's steamer Northern Light, E. L. Tinkelpaugh, commander, arrived on Sunday morning from San Juan del Norte via Key West. She brings the passengers of the Sierra Nevada who left San Francisco at 5 P. M. on the 20th of Oct. The passengers are all in good health, not a case of sickness having occurred during the whole voyage. Everything was quiet on the Isthmus and the passengers crossed in good time with perfect safety. Col. Walker leading the Democratic party in Nicaragua had concluded a treaty of peace with the Chamorro party.

The people of Nicaragua seemed much pleased with the change in affairs. Great satisfaction was expressed with the treaty of peace and all the appointments. Walker punished severely all offences among his own or native troops; no misconduct of any kind was allowed. The Sierra Nevada brought down a large force of volunteers to join the Democratic party under Gen. Walker. Col. E. J. C. Kowen, a distinguished lawyer of San Francisco, was among the number. Kinney still remains at Greytown with only ten or twelve men, a number of whom were suffering from sickness—Simeon Forrester of Salem, Mass., (one of his party) having died. Walker's men were anxious to be allowed to drive Kinney and his men out of the country. The news from California is unimportant; times were growing better. The mail steamer Golden Age left San Francisco three hours in advance of the Sierra Nevada, with about $2,000,000 in gold.

Seven clipper ships had arrived at San Francisco since previous advices, viz: the Highflyer and Radiant, from New York; Challenge, Competitor, Riking, and Fearless, from Boston; and the Snap Dragon, from Philadelphia; and their cargoes had been disposed of upon satisfactory terms. Business generally had considerably improved, and nearly all Eastern merchanise found buyers at a fair profit to importers.

SUMMARY OF CALIFORNIA NEWS UP TO 20TH OF OCTOBER.

The Indians on the Columbia and Rogue Rivers are at open war with the whites, and the struggle threatens to be serious in its consequences. An Indian agent named Bolon was murdered by the Yakumas in Washington Territory, about the 25th of September, and then a confederation was organized among various tribes for a general war upon the whites. Major Haller went out from the Dalles on the 3d of October, with one hundred United States troops to chastise the offenders, but he and his force were surrounded by about 500 Indians, and when last heard from had been besieged for two days, during which time they had no water. The Oregonians were hurrying to relieve the soldiers.

In Rogue River Valley the Indians murdered four or five miners and packers, about the 5th October. The miners in the valley raised a company of 150 volunteers, marched out against the redskins and defeated them in a battle, killing about forty. About thirty whites have been killed.

On the 7th of October a party of Chinamen, while asleep at night in their tents near St. Louis, Sierra County, were attacked by robbers and five of the Celestials were slain and several others severely wounded. The robbers took $1,100 in dust from the tents.

A sale of the State's interest in certain water lots within the limits of San Francisco took place on the 10th of October. The total amount of the sales was barely sufficient to cover the expenses incidental thereto—about $40,000.

The Collector of this port has taken up his quarters in the new Custom House, which is decidedly the finest building in the State. Other Government buildings are erecting near the Custom House; one for the Appraisers is rapidly approaching completion.

An ordinance to increase the police of San Francisco, compelling them to wear a uniform, &c., has been vetoed by the Mayor.

The Supervisors of this county have contracted with the Sisters of Mercy to take charge of the sick during the term of one year.

MOUNTAIN OF GLASS.—In the neighborhood of Clear Lake, says the State Journal, may be found hills composed almost wholly of glass, of the color and similitude of the glass with which porter bottles are made. Here is a chance for enterprising bottle manufacturers.

GAS SPRING.—The Placerville American gives the following account of a gas spring recently discovered in Hope Valley, on the line of the newly located wagon road to Carson Valley:

Its present appearance is that of a hollow cavity or basin in the earth, four or five feet in diameter and only about as many inches in depth. The bottom or substance through which the gas, in constant large bubbles, is emitted, has much the consistency and appearance of thick muddy or brown looking tar, and which to the touch is warm, though not hot; and though the gas burns with a brilliant though bluish flame on the application of a lighted match, this tar-like substance is not in the least degree inflammable, even when dried to hardness. The spring in itself is a curiosity, but owing to its locality can never be made available for any useful purpose.

Further from California.

PER STEAMER EMPIRE CITY.

Later from Rogue River—Battle Fought—Fifty Whites Killed by the Indians.

THE Yreka Union, of 13th October, contains the following startling intelligence, received by it from two gentlemen, Messrs. Patterson and Thompson, who had just arrived at Yreka from Rogue River:

On Tuesday morning, 9th October, a large party of Indians collected and started down Rogue River, killing every white man who happened to fall in their way. At Evans' Ferry they found two or three men whom they murdered, and then left the river for Waggoner's, on Louse Creek. Just before they reached W.'s, they were met by a party of packers with a large train, who saw from their appearance that there was something wrong with them. Presently the packers looked back and saw Waggoner's barn on fire, and heard the screams of women and children in the house; they then cut loose their packs and run for their lives. The Indians pursued them closely, killing one of their mules.

They counted in their flight the bodies of seventeen white men who had been murdered along the road. Many of these were teamsters, and their loads had been scattered in every direction by the Indians, searching for ammunition and liquor. From Waggoner's it appears that the Indians, now nearly all drunk, again started down Rogue River, burning and murdering as they went. On Wednesday they were overtaken by Maj. Fitzgerald with eighty men, and a battle fought, in which thirty Indians and ten soldiers are reported to have been killed.

Mrs. Waggoner and child were murdered, and five other families along the route pursued by the Indians are said to have shared the same fate. The whole number of whites who have already fallen, from the best accounts, is between thirty and forty.—[California Chronicle.

One Week Later from Europe.

THE United States mail steamship Pacific, from Liverpool arrived at 8 o'clock on the morning of the 15th.

Extraordinary excitement has prevailed in England, amounting almost to a panic, on the subject of a war with the United States.

The London Times, in a series of malicious editorials, started the subject, which, exaggerated by the provincial press, speedily attained such dimensions that extras were issued announcing that the American Minister had demanded his passports.

General astonishment and regret were excited by the announcement, and energetic protests were heard against the government forcing the nation into so dangerous a war.

There is nothing of importance from the seat of war except that the Allies were in expectation of an attack from the Russians. It is unlikely, however, that any further operations will take place this season, as both armies are making preparations for the coming winter.

Some trifling successes have been gained by the fleets, which have now sailed towards the Gulf of Perekop.

Lord Stanly, Earl Derby's son, has been offered the Colonial Secretaryship.

Gen. Codrington has received the appointment of Commander-in-Chief of the British army in the Crimea, in the place of Gen. Simpson.

According to Vienna letters, the Emperor of Russia was desirous of holding a personal interview at some place on the frontier, with the Emperor of Austria, King of Prussia and probably other potentates, with the view of coming to some understanding for the conclusion of peace.

Of the 1,910 British soldiers wounded in the assault on the Redan, 806 were shot or stabbed through the chest or upper part of the body.

Omar Pacha had his head quarters at Souchum-Kale, and was concentrating his troops preparatory to marching into Georgia. His army was but 8,000 strong at the above dates but reinforcements have since been sent from Constantinople and the Crimea.

Gen. Canrobert has gone on a special mission to Stockholm. As Admiral Dundas is also there it is surmised their mission is to obtain permission for the allied fleets to winter in Swedish ports.

It is said that Lord Hardinge is about to resign the command-in-chief of the British army and will be succeeded either by the Duke of Cambridge or Lord Seaton. Sir Hamilton Seymour will be appointed Minister to Vienna.

Telegraphic.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12, 1855.

THE authorities of Cuba more than a year ago required duties to be paid by citizens of the United States on certain descriptions of building materials, and provisions, which before that period had been admitted to the Island either free or in the payment of a mere nominal tax. The losses in consequence were considerable. Since that time the subject has been brought to the attention of the Spanish Government, by direction of the Secretary of State through our Minister at the Court of Madrid, and the result is, as I have been informed, that Government has signified to this, a proposition to refund or remit those duties improperly demanded by the Captain General—setting apart twelve months, during which the claimants are to present their several claims to the Spanish authorities, on the adjudication or verification of which these duties will be refunded.

The health of the Hon. Thomas H. Bayly, a member of Congress elect from Virginia, continues to improve, and the indications are that he will be enabled to be present in the House at an early period in the coming session. This gentleman, it will be recollected, has for months past been very severely afflicted with disease.

Telegraph Extension.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14, 1855.

THE Illinois Central Telegraph Line was extended to Cairo on Saturday last, and that office is now ready for business for Cairo and all points on the line of road from Chicago and Dubuque to the mouth of the Ohio River.

Loss of the Ship Samuel Badger.

BOSTON, Nov. 14, 1855.

THE ship Samuel Badger, Salter, from Trapani, with salt, for Boston, sprung aleak and sunk near Fayal recently. The crew were all saved and taken into Fayal, and the first and second mates arrived here to-day in the ship James Guthrie.

BOSTON, Nov. 14, 1855.

THE American State Council assembled at Worcester yesterday, Vice President James E. Farwell presiding. One hundred and eighty-five members were present.

The resignation of John W. Foster as President of the State Council was read and accepted by a unanimous vote. The resignation of Lieutenant Governor Brown was also accepted. The question of electing delegates to the American Convention to be holden at Cincinnati on the 30th inst. opened the subject of slavery and the ground to be taken by the Massachusetts delegates. Several members were opposed to sending delegates at all, arguing that the proposed Convention was another attempt to ehtrap the American party into a fusion movement. Governor Gardner made a brief speech in favor of sending delegates. The call, he said, was in accordance with the action of the Northern portion of the Philadelphia Convention, and was merely for consultation. Many other Northern States would be represented, and he thought Massachusetts should be.

The Hon. E. C. Baker, Mark Trafton, and many others, advocated sending delegates, and a motion to that effect was adopted.

Henry J. Gardner and Henry W. Benchley were chosen delegates at large; also one delegate from each Congressional District, with a substitute.

Henry W. Benchley was unanimously elected President of the State Council; A. C. Carey, of Ipswich, Vice President; and George W. Massenger, of Boston, Treasurer.

A motion was adopted declaring vacant the seats of all those holding office in the American Council who had gone over to fusion.

Extraordinary Swimming.

Two of the sailors belonging to the schooner J. T. Grice, while she was lying at her anchorage at Powder Horn, concluded to cross the bay on a hunting and fishing excursion. They went over to Sand Point in a small boat, left her on the beach to take a hunt, and while they were out the wind freshened up and their boat blew off. When they returned and saw the boat some distance out, one of them concluded to swim after it; he failed to overtake it, and finding the sea too high for him to attempt to get back, swam on, and actually made the shore at Stephen's bayou, a distance of ten miles from where he started, and on the opposite side of the bay.—[Indianola (Texas) Bulletin.

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the trangression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The fourth is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the 'laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and, that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Bien-aimés frères, je désire, en commencant cette publication, vous adresser quelques paroles. Le Seigneur, dans sa bonté et sa miséricorde, a jugé convenable de restaurer au monde l'Evangile primitif, dans toute la simplicité, la beauté et la pureté qu'il avait autrefois, parmi les chrétiens des premiers temps, aux jours de Jésus et de ses Apôtres.

La lumière de la vérité a éclaté au milieu des ténèbres et de la corruption des hommes, en ce temps où le monde est déchiré par mille opinions contradictoires.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Si nous suivons attentivement l'action de Dieu sur le genre humain, nous trouverons que tous ces maux proviennent de ce que les nations et les peuples se sont éloignés de Dieu; et rien moins qu'un retour à lui ne peut arrêter la terrible tempête, calmer la mer furieuse, tranquilliser les passions capricieuses des hommes, et rendre au monde moral, religieux et politique, cet ordre qui règne dans la création physique de Dieu.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui règle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

C'est la religion que vous croyez et que vous enseignez, qui est destinée à restaurer l'homme et la terre; c'est elle qui ramènera les peuples à Dieu, qui les retirera du chaos moral, religieux et politique du monde, et les rassemblera en un peuple qui sera conduit et reconnu de Dieu; qui sera honoré devant les hommes et les nations; et qui aidera à établir et à développer le royaume de Dieu dans ces derniers jours.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaîtraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? Ou devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours?

Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconque demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Evangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés?" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit?" Nous le faisons aussi. Crurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains, par la foi en Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "l'espoir en la résurrection?" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.?" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.?" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions à son Eglise actuelle.

Nous demanderons ce qu'il y a d'inconséquent en tout cela? Lequel est le plus inconséquent, de croire et de pratiquer les Ecritures, ou de dire, nous les croyons et puis de les nier à notre organisation, à nos doctrines, à nos œuvres.

Mais des visions, des prophèties, des révélations n'ont-elles pas une tendance à conduire à l'enthousiasme et au fanatisme? Oui, les visions humaines et les délusions de Satan l'ont. Mais si le Seigneur eût pensé que ses visions et ses révélations fussent préjudiciables aux hommes, pourquoi les aurait-il données dans les anciens temps? Si elles doivent être préjudiciables de nos jours, certainement elles l'eussent été autrefois. L'enthousiasme, la folie et le fanatisme des hommes est une chose; autre chose est Dieu révélant sa volonté aux peuples pour leur organisation, leur stabilité, leur consolation, leur union, leur savoir, leur édification, et pour l'établissement de son royaume.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaître Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Les philosophes ont scruté l'homme, la terre, les œuvres e la création pour trouver un vrai système, Ils ont tous eu leur jour. Ils ont introduit beaucoup de bons principes, mais quant à l'amélioration du monde, là, ils ont fait défaut. Leurs systèmes, quelque bons que soient plusieurs d'entre eux, sont bien loin d'embrasser l'objet désiré: "Ils ont été pesés dans la balance, et trouvés trop légers."

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaître que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence, ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les ecès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lasciveté, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votro lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

To the Emigration and Our Readers Generally.

We shall endeavor to be always prepared to impart the latest information relative to the best course to be pursued by Emigrants on their arrival in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

Our emigration have heretofore, almost exclusively, gone by the way of New Orleans, but will hereafter land in the Eastern cities, and one of the principal objects of establishing "THE MORMON" is for their information, as well as all other emigration arriving in this country.

We shall take special interest in seeking out the cheapest, best and most convenient mode of conveyance from this and other points, as well as to observe the course pursued by agents in the accommodation for travelers on the routes, and make of "THE MORMON" a directory, to which all Emigrants and Travelers may refer with some degree of safety.

A Card to the Saints.

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "THE MORMON." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish, you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

FREDERICK PIERCY,
AND CONTAINING A MAP OF THE OVERLAND PORTION OF THE JOURNEY.
EDITED BY JAMES LINFORTH.
This highly and interesting Work will form a narrative of the Journey from Liverpool to Great Salt Lake Valley, and will give Historical, Descriptive, and Statistical Information respecting the places, and the Indian Tribes on the route, and in Utah Territory.
The mode in which the Latter Day Saints' emigration is conducted; a review o it from the commencement; and incidental instructions to emigrants, will constitute an early part of the Work.
The Statistical information will be drawn from the most authentic sources, and consequently may be relied upon. That portion of it which relates to the Latter Day Saints, will be particularly valuable, owing to the difficulty hitherto experienced by all classes in obtaining anything accurate, from the conflicting statements which have appeared from time to time, in a great portion of the public press.

Poetry.

The Faithful Companion.

From the German of Anastasius Grun.

I had a comrade, faithful and true,
Wherever I was, he was, too;
He went not out, if I stayed at home,
And when I went out, he with me would roam.

He drank from the self-same glass with me,
He slept in the self-same bed with me,
Our clothes of the very same cut we wore,
And he left me not e'en at my sweetheart's door.

And when I went to the mountains of late,
And stood with my bundle and staff at the gate,
Up spoke my faithful comrade to me—
With leave, good friend, I'll go with thee!

Out through the gate-way we quietly stepped,
The trees with approving murmurs swept,
There came a warm greeting on the breeze,
My friend shook his head and was ill at ease.

A choir of larks were singing on high,
He stops his ear to the melody.
A thicket of roses scents the gale,
He begins to grow dizzy and deadly pale.

And when we climbed the mountain-height,
The poor man lost his breath outright,
I hurried upward, all aglow,
But left him wheezing far below.

And now I stood shouting all alone,
In the sunshine on the mountain throne;
Green pastures and fragrance everywhere,
And warbling larks and mountain-air.

And downward as I traveled back
There lay a corpse across my track;
Alas! 'tis he! And such was the end
Of him who once was my truest friend!

So I ordered a grave to be dug there deep,
And quietly lowered the body to sleep,
And placed above it a burial-stone,
And this inscription I graved thereon:

"Here lies my truest friend on his back,
Named Mr. Hypocondriack:
Lark, music, and the mountain's breath
And scent of roses were his death.

"I truly hope he may be blest
And take his everlasting rest,
But if ever he should rise again,
God grant I may not be there—Amen!"

Remarks

On the Redemption of Zion—Second Coming of Christ—Trials of the Saints, etc.—By Elder Orson Pratt, in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, Sunday morning, May 20, 1855.

REPORTED BY J. V. LONG.

I have been much interested in the remarks that have been made by Bro. Jackman, for they have been according to my feelings, they were right to the point, and many useful ideas have been thrown out before us, and his words have been full of meaning. Although he has considered himself bashful before the people, yet the Lord has put into his heart those things that are calculated to interest the Saints.

We see, from what has been portrayed before us, the trials and difficulties that we, some of us, have had to endure in this Church; we also see, from what he has explained, the patience of the people in passing through those difficulties, no murmuring, no complaining, no fault-finding, but all taking hold with one heart and one mind to do the will of God, under the most straightened circumstances.

We can contrast this feeling with what we see manifested by some of our new emigrants; some of them come in here feeling dissatisfied, having become so in crossing the plains; they will differ with each other, lose the good spirit, and allow themselves to be controlled by an evil influence; I say, we can see, from the discourse of Bro. Jackman, a great contrast between those that first came here, and these that now come. Now the question might arise in the minds of some, were the pioneers who came here so much better than those persons that now come? I think not.

Then why was there no murmuring, nor fault-finding, nor apostacy?

The reason is obvious; those who first came here had more experience in such matters than the new emigrants have, who come here almost without experience in those things which they naturally come in contact with, when crossing the plains.

In fact there are very few in the world that would do any better than the Mormon pioneers did, the first year they came here. It requires experience to enable people patiently to pass through the scenes of trial that were endured by the pioneers, and those who first came into these valleys. Take our late emigration that have crossed over the plains, and let them be driven a few times from their comfortable habitations, and let them wander for months in the cold winter, and then send them off on an expedition, such as the pioneers took to this country, and you would see them quite a different people: you would see them altered and improved by the course of experience they had passed through; they would be benefited by certain kinds of experience which others have passed through before them; and, if attentive, they would add many important items to their former stock of wisdom and knowledge.

Consequently, it requires experience, not only for the old members, but for the new; and should the new members be permitted to come from the old countries, and meet with no poverty, no affliction, it would not be known whether those persons would endure such trials; and hence the necessity of such trials to give people experience.

It is true, they have had some things to pass through in the old country of a trying nature, but they have not had a series of different trials to encounter; therefore, there would be no telling whether they would stand or not, if called to pass through similar scenes of trials to those passed through by the earlier settlers of this Territory.

Then, it is not surprising to me that the Lord takes certain measures to bring those persons into difficult circumstances; in fact, we have the Lord's own declaration for it, that he will try this people, not in some things, but in all things, to see if they will abide in the covenant, and he says, if they will not, then, they will not abide in me.

Here then, we perceive that each will have his share of trials either in the beginning or in the advanced state of the Church. We do not know what they will be, only so far as God has revealed in his word.

He has told us that we should be visited with famine and sword, with pestilence and distress; all these are predicted, and laid before this people in the Book of Doctrines and Covenants. The Lord says, unless his servants should hearken to the words and counsels that he gives unto them, famine, trouble, and distress, would overtake them.

Now what benefit or what glory is there to an individual who is placed in circumstances that he cannot help but do right? For instance, suppose there were no intoxicating drinks in the world, what glory and credit would it be to an individual, to say, that he had kept himself from those things?

If his father and his forefathers to the third or fourth generation of them, had died from drunkenness, he would have nothing to boast of; for he could not be a drunkard: therefore I say, if this temptation was set before us as the forbidden tree, was before mother Eve, and we withstood the temptation, then there would be some merit in it, far more than there is for a person to keep himself sober, because he is obliged to do so. So we may take other things in the same light.

Why did the Lord suffer the Hittites, and Perizites, and Hivites, and Jebuzites, and various others, to live among Israel? He had two purposes in view; one was to scourge Israel when they went astray from his commandments; and the other was to see whether they would overcome or not: he placed them where they would have temptations to test their fidelity, then if directly in the face of the Law of God, they would falter or yield and give way to the customs and vices of the heathen, they were not worthy of the glory of God, nor of being called his people.

But if the heathen had all been swept away and those temptations had not been presented where would have been the merit? It would have been very small indeed.

A commandment was given, forbidding the children of Israel to marry with the heathen; it was commanded that the sons of Israel should not take wives from among the heathen neither should they give their daughters to the heathen.

Now there was temptation, in those days, set before the children of Israel, and sometimes they would break through and go beyond the bounds, like old Solomon who transgressed, after God had appeared to him three times, and had given him many choice favors, and manifested himself to him in dreams, and also when he spread forth his hands to pray God to bless the temple which he had built, then the Lord manifested himself in the presence of all Israel to his servant.

He was lifted up in the midst of Israel, and a kingdom and government were given to him far surpassing all the kingdoms and governments upon the earth, and yet after all these things, and after the Lord had given him many wives, he took that which was forbidden; he took the daughters of the heathen nations; and he, being their head and their king, set this wicked—this evil example before all Israel, so that if they had followed his foolish and wicked ways, they would have been destroyed; but from the account we have, he was overcome by the temptations laid before him, and consequently the wives that he had taken led him away, so much so, that in his old age, he, in order to please those wives whom he had taken from among the gentiles, bowed down to their gods. Here then were two evils, first, in taking heathen wives, and the next, in tampering with, and bowing down to their gods; and the Lord will judge him for all those things, just as he will us—according to the works we perform while in this state of probation.

If Solomon, in all his glory, had been contented with all those blessings given him, and had not yielded to the temptations laid to ensnare him, he would have increased in his glory, and in his dominions; his glory would have increased in this world and in the future; but the Lord desired to try him.

This shows us though a man may be set upon a throne and be exalted high among men, yet he has his temptations, and blessed is he, if he endures them and is faithful to his trust; and if he be in distress, bears it all with patience; for he will always have his trials, and no person will escape: all men must be tried and proven.

These are reflections that occurred to my mind while Bro. Jackman addressed us, showing the contrast between those that first came here, and those who now come. I was led to inquire, why there was such a vast difference; and the thought occurred to me that it was because of experience, for those who have been here from the first have been pretty well buffeted, and before they came here, they had learned how to submit, when the Lord saw proper to put upon them a chastisement.

Should all this people, here in Utah, be called to pass through such scenes as some of us have been called upon to encounter, I believe there would be many who would say, let us endure these things with all submission and patience before God.

In order to do this, it is necessary for us, in our prosperity, to remember the Lord our God; for if man and woman will not remember the Lord, when the heavens smile upon them, and when health is in their habitations—if they will not acknowledge the hand of God then, and be thankful for the blessings that they receive, you may be sure, that they will not be so well prepared to endure trials, and to pass through adversities, as those who have, in the days of their prosperity, humbled themselves before the Lord, and acknowledged his hand in all things.

There are individuals in this Territory, of a careless disposition, and you may mark them, and those that have waxed fat, and their hearts are upon the things of this world, that when tribulations come, they will be the ones to quake and fear, while those who have taken a different course will be able to stand.

I heard Bro. Joseph, when speaking of those that were sick in Nauvoo, make remarks similar to those that I have now made. He said, that those who would not, when in good health, call upon the Lord, and acknowledge his hand in all things, and remember him, would not have faith when it was needed; he said that those individuals would have but very little faith in the days of their calamities and affliction.

Then seek to get faith and spirit sufficient to assist us in the days of our afflictions, that we may be prepared for all the vicissitudes of life. We ought to know that we are well off, at the present, but all do not realize this fact.

How often I have thought of the remark made by the Prophet; nothing can be more true than that remark; it carries its own evidence with it, that those individuals who have wealth and riches in abundance, but do not remember the Lord, when troubles come, they will be in the greatest distress, generally speaking.

I do not know what the Lord will hereafter do with this people; I have not myself a sufficiency of the spirit of prophecy to understand all the events of the future; and I doubt very much, whether there is an individual in this Church that does know; but we do know, as far as the things of the future are revealed; and we may know many things by dreams and visions, but when it comes to principles, and to what the Lord will do with this people, I doubt very much whether there is an individual in the world that knows the changes and variety of scenes through which this people will be called to pass.

There are many revelations, not only in modern but in ancient prophecy, predictions, touching the scenes of the last days, and the trials of the saints; and we ought to be prepared for whatever is to come, troubles, distress, famine, war, or anything else.

The Lord has said that great prosperity awaits us, far beyond what we now have, but I doubt very much, whether this prosperity will come before we have passed through some further tribulations.

There are revelations in relation to the nations of the earth and this people, that seem to indicate that we will have to pass through some things that we never have had to encounter, and it seems to me that we will have to stand forth and defend ourselves against our enemies. And we have got to be tried as Israel was, and to see whether our sons will marry gentiles, or our daughters gentile husbands.

Now if there were no gentiles among us, we could not see whether there was any integrity among the people. Do you suppose that this people will be kept away from the gentiles?

No verily, the Lord does not intend that we should dwell separate from the world altogether. From this time forth, it is our duty, to warn our sons and daughters, day by day, and night by night, and week by week, as has been told us from this stand; to warn our sons and daughters, as God did our first parents, concerning the forbidden fruits. When he set the forbidden fruit before them he said, if you eat, it will make you mortal, whereas you are now immortal, but you may choose for yourselves.

Now, how do we know but when the gates of Zion shall be open to the nations, that the gentiles will come flocking in, like a flowing stream? A flowing stream is one that runs continually; and the gentiles will, in that day, come to us as a flowing stream, and we shall have to set our gates open continually; they will come as clouds and as doves in large flocks. Do you suppose that the gentiles are going to be ignorant of what is taking place?

Now this will not be the case, they will perfectly understand what is taking place. The people will see that the hand of God is over this people; they will see that he is in our midst, and that he is our watchtower; that he is our shield and our defence; and therefore, they will say, let us go up and put our riches in Zion, for there is no safety in our own nations.

Those nations are trembling and tottering, and will eventually crumble to ruin, and those men of wealth will come here not to be baptized, but many of them will come that have never heard the servants of God; but they will hear that peace and health dwell among us, and that our officers are all peace officers, and our tax-gatherers men of righteousness.

They will come, not to be baptized, but they will come with their old traditions and customs, and they will flee to Zion with their riches, but they will come in favor of their old customs, and of their old gentile notions of religion; and if God is merciful unto them, so as to cause them to leave their native land, that we may take them up, and teach them, and nourish them, and bring them up to the standard of truth, all will be right; but if they neglect to observe and obey the instructions given, and to follow the good examples set before them, so much the greater their curse and condemnation.

If our sons and daughters will marry among them, they are much worse than the gentiles are; for we have been instructed, and ought to know better.

But notwithstanding all that I have said, there may be a time come, I do not know how long it will be, but the time will come when righteousness will be laid to the line and justice to the plummet.

There will be a certain degree of freedom used, with those persons who may come unto Zion, but not so far as to partake of their deeds; but on the contrary you are strictly prohibited from joining in their evil practices.

But if the saints act wisely they may set an example before them that will do them good, and if there is any good or righteousness in them, an upright, holy example will bring it out. All this will take place, and there are many here that will live to see those things, and I rejoice that there is but a comparatively little time for those things to be accomplished.

I look at matters perhaps a little different from some that get away off this way and then the other, and when they get disappointed will apostatize.

In order to explain my feelings I will bring up one little example; for instance, it was expected that when the saints gathered to Jackson County, there would be a perfect paradise, and there would be an end to trouble and to opposition. And when the saints were driven out from Jackson County, almost all in the church expected that they would speedily be restored; and a person was considered almost an apostate that would say, they would not come back in five years or ten at the furthest; but the prevailing opinion seemed to be that it would take place immediately.

When Zion's Camp went up, and found the saints all scattered abroad, what did we hear?—Why, all in camp were on the tiptoe to have Zion redeemed immediately; perhaps some would stretch their faith and put it off for five years; but those were considered weak in the faith. This was their extreme enthusiasm.

I was appointed to visit all the saints in Clay County, to strengthen them, and I proved to them from the Book of Doctrines and Covenants that it would be very many years before Zion should be redeemed; and some would believe it, and some others would think that Bro. Pratt was rather weak in the faith; but I endeavored to show to them that such and such things had got to be fulfilled before the redemption of Zion; and time has proved the truth of what I advanced.

Now let us see if they have not got to the other extreme, twenty two years have passed since that time, and if we look around now, is it not the other way, the very opposite? The people think of almost every thing else but the redemption of Zion, and speak to individuals about it, and they put it off a great distance ahead.

But I do not feel to go to this extreme. I will give you my opinion; so far as the revelations go, in speaking of this subject, I think that this event is nearer than this people are aware of.

Again, take the subject of the coming of Christ, and as far back as 1831, I remember that I came on from New York to Kirtland, Ohio, and I found many saints thinking that Christ would come immediately. Though I had but little experience, yet I had applied myself to the written revelations, for they were not then printed, but I frequently got the privilege of reading them, and copying some of them, and therefore, I had an opportunity of judging more correctly, perhaps, than those who had not the same privilege.

No doubt they felt exceedingly anxious to have him come, as we all do, and this anxiety overcame them, and hence they were mistaken. I have no doubt that there are others in the church that think it is a far off event, an event that will probably take place in the days of their youngest children; but from what is written, I look upon it, as an event that is much nearer than is generally supposed.

It is true, there is a great work to be performed, but the Lord has a great many to perform it. If he had them all concentrated in one vast body from England, Scotland, the nations of Europe, and the Islands of the sea, he could soon accomplish the work, notwithstanding its vastness.

A great work has to be brought about; how many years, or scores of years, it will be, I know not, but from the scenes we behold among the people, the breaking up of the nations, and the signs of the times, and the present aspects of the European war, and from the shutting up and closing up of the proclamation of the Gospel in many lands, the coming of Christ seems to be near at hand, yet Zion must be redeemed before that day; the temple must be built upon the consecrated spot, the cloud and glory of the Lord rest upon it, and the Lamanites, many of them, brought in, and they must build up the New Jerusalem! It is true, so says the Book of Mormon, that inasmuch as the gentiles receive the Gospel, they shall assist my people the remnant of Jacob, saith the Lord, to build the New Jerusalem. And when they have got it built, then we are told that they shall assist my people who are of Jacob to be gathered in unto the New Jerusalem.

Only a few thousand or hundreds of thousands, then, are to be engaged in this work, and then, after it is done, we are to assist the Lamanites to gather in; and then shall the powers of heaven be in your midst; and then is the coming of Christ.

It will not be before the Lamanites come in, nor before the temple is constructed in Jackson County; but there is a great people to do the work.

I look upon these events as something that will take place sooner than many expect, and it will find many putting it away at a distance. This is evident, from the fact, that he will find them eating, and drinking with the drunkard, and marrying, and giving in marriage, to the very hour of his coming.

This shows the state of the world as it is to be at his coming, and if they are to perceive one event after another why do they indulge themselves in these things? It shows that they do not perceive that it is so near. It will not be those who have oil in their lamps, for they are ready; and when the sound goes forth the oil is there; but it will be the others; their lamps will have gone out and they will have no light; and hence he comes, and men are not aware of it; he enters in and the door is shut, and five out of the ten virgins that have actually gathered, as it appears, are numbered among hypocrites and unbelievers.

How often do I think of this, and the condition of the Saints? Will the Saints be ready? With all the evidence and testimony that they have portrayed before them from Sabbath to Sabbath, is it not strange, that so many will be so unprepared for that terrible day of the Lord? it will be a pleasing day to the righteous, but terrible to the wicked.

This ought to brace us up, it ought to keep up our spirits, and cause us to prepare for that time. If I should not do this, I neglect my duty. Should I do wrong because some person in the Priesthood, high in authority, does wrong? No, it should have no influence whatever over me.

We should have the Spirit of Light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world, and especially those that obey the truth. And if we will yield to this influence we will not be led away from the right path; we are not to give way, no, not even to angels who may pretend to come from heaven.

The spirit upon us should enable us to do that which is right, and that which is our duty. For instance, take the word of wisdom, which is given for our benefit and temporal salvation. It is true, disobedience to that is not so gross a sin as some others; but still it is given for our temporal salvation, and should be observed. Now it would require the servants of God to preach it every two weeks, or at least every month, to persuade this people to hearken to it; and yet they know it is the word of the Lord. If I were to call a vote, I presume that there would not be one that has come to the years of understanding but what would say it is the word of the Lord.

They go away, after hearing a most glorious discourse upon this, and other revelations, and perhaps they will keep the word of wisdom two or three days; but it makes their head ache, and then they take a little tea and it does them good for the moment, and they think the Lord don't know what they need as well as they do.

I do not say that you do say this, but your actions bespeak this. But it is such a trial! It must be a terrible trial which the Lord said the weakest of all that are or can be called saints could obey.

A thing like tea to have influence over us so that we can only obey the words of wisdom two days, and then break it, until we hear another discourse, and thus breaking our covenants; it shows the folly and weakness of man. It shows how the influence of one man prevails over another.

Why cannot you be independent beings, and say, I will do this, and that, and the other, let my neighbor do as he may; let my neighbor do as he will, but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord! This is what ought to be.

In making these remarks I take them to myself, although I have, as an individual, been very strict in relation to the word of wisdom, since I have been in the valley, and years before. Do not I like the good old tea? Yes, I do, and when it is sweetened up, and a little cream turned in, it is very pleasant, as, no doubt, also was the forbidden fruit; but it is for me to use my endeavors to have it observed, by setting a good example, that I may have influence over my neighbor and over my family; and I do use that influence as far as is consistent, but it is difficult to persuade persons from their old habits.

I wonder what those persons would do, if called to be martyred for their religion, who cannot do without violating the word of wisdom! I am aware that it is not by constraint, and a man should not constrain his family to obey it, but every man will have to give an account of his doings, and abide the consequence, whatever it may be, if it be the destroying angel going through the land to slay the disobedient.

A man may keep the word of wisdom so far as tea, coffee, and tobacco are concerned, and still come very short. If he wishes and intends to be right, he must obey this, together with all the commandments and words of wisdom. We must regulate our thoughts, our comings in, our goings out; and all our doings, and our minds, by the spirit of the Lord and by the counsels of his servants. Can the destroyer have influence over such a man?

Let such a man stand up and say, Lord, I have done as you told me, I have kept your words; could such a man be destroyed before he had accomplished his work on the earth? I question it. Well, we shall undoubtedly see a time when we shall need such confidence as this.

May the Lord bless us all for Christ's sake. Amen.

A Sunday Mob—Disgraceful Disturbance.

The Bath, Me., Tribune, has the following:

We hoped, when we chronicled the destruction of the Old South Church in this city, that we should never again be pained by the recital of a similar outrage upon the rights of any class of our fellow-citizens, but the late events prove that we mistook the temper of many of our people.

On Sunday, as the Catholics attempted to hold religious worship appropriate to laying the corner-stone of a new church, a large concourse assembled to witness the exercises, which were prevented by rowdyism of the lowest sort and violence.

During the forenoon a wooden cross which had been erected, was forcibly pulled down.

Early in the afternoon an American flag was raised, amid the cheering of considerable number of persons, who showed themselves hostile to the exercises and the occasion.

Mr. Russell, acting Mayor, pulled the flag down, amid shouts of "Hustle him out!" and hisses. But on his leaving, it was again put up.

A rush was made for the corner-stone which had been previously laid, and several attempts made to remove it from its setting, which was prevented, as we learn, by the exertions of Marshal Walker and Mr. Constable Leach, who kept the crowd at bay.

There was much bad talk, shouting, fighting, &c.

The Catholics, finding that they would be opposed in their exercises, quietly withdrew, and left the lawless mob in possession of the field.

Electric Cannon.

Mr. D. C. Mitchell, of the Dumfries Militia, has invented an Electric Cannon. It is fired without a touch-hole, by means of electricity. The conducting and non-conducting wires are introduced into the cannon during its manufacture, and cut off close to the surface; so that, in the event of the gun falling into the hands of the enemy, they would fail to discover, at least for some time, how the cannon was discharged. Having no touch-hole, it cannot, of course, be spiked, and it is said that it will last four times longer than the ordinary cannon.—[Bell's Life.

THE MORMON.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, NOV. 24, 1855.

Threatened Rupture between England and the United States.

THE most important item for editorial capital during the last week or two has been the probabilities and improbilities of a war between this country and England, and perhaps other European powers that might league with her to quench the growing thirst of Jonathan for new acquisitions of territory.

It appears that so far as information has been permitted to come before the public, the London Times has been the cause of all the excitement thus far, both in that country and in this; but to suppose that that journal has alone taken the responsibility without the known will and wish of some of England's most prominent public functionaries, would be to charge the Times with greater weakness than the long established reputation of that journal will justify.

The Times professes great reluctance, on the part of England, at anything but an amicable relation with this country, and says that the constant aggression of fillibustering parties into foreign territory, with the inability or indisposition of the United States Government to control them, has led the British Government to assume the menacing attitude she is now taking. We extract from the London Times, as follows:

"It is because we see no hope of finding in the United States a government capable of preventing its citizens from waging private war on their own account against the best friends and truest allies of the great republic, that we are most unwillingly compelled, even in the midst of the great European struggle in which we are engaged, to assume a defensive attitude. In order to trample out the first sparks of this fire, and prevent a conflagration which, if once allowed to spread, may cause incalculable misery to the human race. We cannot wait patiently till these lawless emissaries of insurrection and plunder have set their feet within her Majesty's dominions, and encountered there the resistance which is sure to overwhelm their wild and desperate schemes. We cannot wait till we are placed in the terrible dilemma of either sparing men to whom clemency is cruelty to the human race, of which they are the enemies, or of inflicting a just punishment, which may be the means of inflaming against us the passions of the American people and leading to a disastrous and fratricidal war. We will, if it be possible, prevent the crime that otherwise it would be our duty most severely to punish, and this we do in the name and in the hope of peace.

The Manchester Examiner of October 27th comes out in the severest strictures on the London Times and the article from which we extract the above, and denies the cause to be that attributed by the Times, and says that England, and not the United States, is the aggressor. We extract from the Examiner:

THE ANGLO-AMERICAN WAR.

Are we or are we not in danger of a war with the United States of North America? This is a question which has just been raised by two singular articles in the leading columns of the Times and the Morning Post, both of which journals are known to be in close, if not confidential connection with the Palmerston administration. One of the chief daily contributors to the columns of the Times is a member of the government, and from that cause, probably quite as much as from any influence or status he may have acquired as the representative of Kidderminster in the House of Commons, has won for himself a seat on the Treasury Bench. The Morning Post, for several years, has been notoriously the organ of Lord Palmerston, and from this fact has derived a factitious importance, due neither to the position it holds among the metropolitan press, nor to its merits as a daily mouth-piece of public opinion.

On these grounds, it may fairly be taken for granted, that whenever such announcements as those which have this week been made through the medium of these journals take the public by surprise, the government has, at least, certified the facts, if it has not actually suggested the tone which characterizes their formal communication.

On Thursday last, the Times, in an article saturated with that reckless and bullying spirit which it invariably assumes towards the American people and their government, proclaimed to the world that preparations are in progress for a powerful demonstration of force on the other side of the Atlantic. The English government, we are told, is omitting no opportunity of reinforcing the West India squadron, and thus interposing a powerful fleet between this country and the North American continent. No formal disclosure is made of the specific causes for a presumed rupture with the United States; but the public is led to infer that American designs on Cuba, or the mad enterprises of some portion of her filibustering citizens in other directions, are on the eve of precipitating a quarrel between this country and the government of Washington. The American people are so free that they will not be controlled by a government of their own creating, and therefore it is, says the Times, that we are about to assume a defensive attitude on their coasts, to resist their lawless enterprises, and overwhelm their wild and desperate schemes. Not one word is said throughout the article on any other subject of difference between the two governments than the threatened filibustering expeditions against Cuba, or the anarchal States of Central America.

We have had ample experience of the overbearing and dictatorial superciliousness invariably assumed by Lord Palmerston in his administration of our foreign policy, and we are not without our fears that, in the present critical conjuncture, he may display more boldness than discretion in the pending dispute with the American government. That dispute has originated in a distinct violation by the British Minister at Washington of the constitutional laws of the United States. It is not the lawless aggression, threatened or actual, of American citizens on Cuba that has precipitated the quarrel, but the attempt made by British emissaries engaged and authorized by Mr. Crampton, our Ambassador to the United States, to enlist American citizens on American soil as soldiers in the British army. The laws of the United States distinctly prohibit this species of enlistment, and yet in violation of these laws, a regularly organized system of enlistment was planned and carried into effect, with the cognizance and complicity of the British Ambassador at Washington. The American Government arrested one of these agents, and it was proved on his trial that Mr. Crampton was a party to and a principal in the whole proceedings. It is understood that the American President has demanded the recall of Mr. Crampton on these grounds; and as Mr. Crampton was only the representative of the British cabinet, his withdrawal would be tantamount to a confession on the part of the British government of a wilful violation of the laws and constitution of the United States.

* * * * * *

Lord Palmerston has sent what the Morning Post calls a formidable fleet to Bermuda, and we are on the eve, to all appearances, of a great complication that may eventuate in disaster. Nothing could tend to arouse the national susceptibilities of the American people more effectually than a bullying demonstration of our naval power on their coasts at such a juncture. We are loth to believe that war between two such nations can be hatched out of such a paltry squabble.

Here we have the antipodes on the question before us. The Times, goaded on by a reckless hatred to the Republican institutions of this country, and backed up by a portion of the aristocracy of the British Government, belches forth its burning lava, long concealed beneath a subtle, national policy. That such feelings existed in that nation is no novel, but their exhibition at this particular juncture, when the nation is already at war with another power, that from all human appearance will give her and her Allies sufficient chance to exercise their military prowess for some time to come, is not at present so clear. Different motives have been adduced both in that country and in this as being the causes of the present appearance of a naval fleet on our Western waters, but all have as yet, in our opinion, been entirely unsatisfactory for want of magnitude sufficient to justify such a demonstration. There is something, we opine, that does not yet fully appear, that, when understood, will reveal a more systematic and longer contemplated and matured policy, on the part of England, and perhaps other powers of Europe, towards this country, than has yet come to the surface.

The present internal, undulating, and incongruous position of this country on the subject of slavery is well known in England, and its ultimate issue calculated upon as philosophically as any other problem of cause and effect. They look forward with unwavering confidence for the dissolution of the Federal Union as it now is, and exult in the prospect of such a consummation. What course England intends to take in such an event is, of course, problematical, but the natural relation between Monarchical and Republican institutions is pretty good ground to frame ideas from.

The London News of November 1st takes up the North and South question of this country, and, unlike some more subtle periodicals, comments freely, as will be seen by the following extracts:

We are telling no news to the world in stating that the Americans, who must always have an agitation going on, have for a year or two past been becoming more and more excited on the Disunion question. The Southern States have been so accustomed to threaten secession from the Union when anything that they did not like was said or done at Washington, that their complaints have for some time ceased to alarm the friends of republican government. But when the North, after long submission to the domination of the minority from the South, began openly to question whether the Union be really a very divine instrument, seeing the moral sacrifices it has required, it was evident to all Europe, as it had long been to all wise Americans, that the Union must break up in disorder, unless its subjects could agree (and agree soon) to weed out the compromise which renders it now unworkable. The Washington newspapers of recent dates—the tidings which come from the very heart of the Union—openly acknowledge the danger. Within this month the Washington Union has spoken thus. After referring to a meeting at New York, and another at Charleston, this central paper says: "We need not repeat what we have so often said, that whenever the North and the South are arrayed against each other, with political parties in the field exclusively sectional in their organizations, the days of the Union are necessarily numbered. The Charleston Mercury, therefore, is but carrying out its hostility to the Union when it advocates a Southern party, and repudiates the democratic organization." The South, however, no sooner sees the North seriously forming a disunion party than she complains of the treason, and of some other things which show how empty were her own threats of secession. She complains of poverty, especially, and of her weakness in all respects, in comparison with the North. One of the most curious features of the whole controversy is the incompatibility of the pleas of the party which began the sectional quarrel. The Slave States complain of the oppression of the free States, while boasting in the same breath of their own supremacy in Congress, where they have carried all their points, from the beginning of the quarrel till now. Where they have been baffled, it has been by the nature of things, and not by the votes of the North. They complain that the free States are rich and populous, while they themselves are "ruined" in fortunes, and in a continually decreasing minority as to numbers; yet, they furnish expeditions to "acquire" territory, of whose richness they hold out tempting accounts to settlers from Europe who, like John Mitchell, think a plantation stocked with fat negroes a very good thing. After playing fast and loose with the Union for above twenty years, the South seems to be at last really frightened lest the North should take her at her word. The first and most obvious resource is to bring on the question of a foreign war. The present time is remarkably favorable to the device. The Czar's emissaries have flattered the vanity, the cupidity, and the prejudices of that class (large in every country, and predominant in a slaveholding one) who are in heart either despots or slaves. Spain is seen to be occupied with her new regime, and England and France with the war; so that a great amount of coveted territory is supposed to be less carefully guarded than usual. To crown all, the Cabinet at Washington is devoted to Southern interests, to an extent which a black page of American history will show to all posterity. This Cabinet is now the speaking-trumpet of the Slave States, aggravating its insults and its boasts, for the purpose especially (among several) of silencing opposition in the North, by means of the common interest of a foreign war.

Will the policy succeed? Will the event justify the South in her confidence that the North will allow her to make war with England? Nobody doubts that a war with England would either secure the Union for a further term or break it up at once. Which is the most likely?

To us it appears that there are strong reasons for believing that a serious government proposal of war with England would be the last stroke on the wedge which is splitting the Union.

* * * * * *

It will be seen by the above three extracts, that the views taken by those journals are entirely dissimilar in their character and sentiment, so that whatever may have been the motive of the Times in issuing its "fiery edict," its cotemporaries, except the Post, are not yet posted on the diplomatic intrigue.

With all that has been said by the Press, pro and con, we have not yet seen or heard anything to justify the apprehension of a rupture between the two nations at present. Were there no greater cause for apprehension of war and bloodshed within our own national boundaries on the North and South question, which is more and more agitating the public mind, as man after man, and party after party, files off into the extremes of fanaticism, than there is at present for war with England, we should feel less concerned than we now do. Yet the known existence of intestinal diversity of interest and sentiment in this country by the nations of Europe, may, and undoubtedly will, have an influence to make them more insolent and overbearing towards us, and less reluctant to strike, if they ever intend to, while the iron is hot.

Straws tell which way the wind blows, and although the present demonstration on the part of England shall prove to be that which we believe it to be—merely a diplomatic ruse—we trust it will have a tendency to open the eyes of the American people to their best interest as a nation which is to revere as sacred the institutions of their fathers, and no longer play the fool by quarrelling over questions of a local character, and selling their birthright, as many have already done, like their father Esau before them, for a mess of potage.

Will it Ever be the United States of the World?

WE look over the various vehicles of information continually issuing from the press of this country with the deepest interest; it is there we can find the expression of the common mind of mankind; there we can find as great a diversity, and much greater variety of subjects for the exercise of the reflectives than probably the world ever before exhibited since the flood; it extends into every ramification of life, and connects itself with every department of existence. Each subject may have had its day, during ages past; each in turn passing away to give place to subjects later or more important. At the present time, all known subjects are upon the list together; all have the great bill of fare before them, to select from according to their several tastes, disposition, or ability. The diversified hue and cry now reiterating through this land remind one of the cries of some vast city—oranges! apples! hardware! strawberries! dogmeat! oysters! images! pamphlets! papers! hot cakes! cholera bitters! patent life preservers! and panaceas of all ills! As though the wide world, through the influence of the press and increased facilities of travel, were bringing all their wares to one great market, and all subjects of universal or individual interest, whether for good or evil, were concentrated and brought out in this our country and in our day. Through the press we are made aware of the affairs of distant nations, and through the facilities of rapid communication they are brought into our immediate neighborhood; the result is an increased individual interest of all in the affairs of the most distant nations and tribes. We look over the periodicals of the day, as we would go into a museum to look upon the past, present and future, the productions of civilization and barbarism, christianity and heathenism, rare paintings and sculpture, and the rude specimens of the wild men of the forest, weapons of war, and peaceful specimens of mechanical skill, the musty records of the past, and the beautifully embellished works of the present—interesting, grotesque and instructive.

Such is the developement of objects and pursuits of the present generation—war, science, politics, manufactures, philosophy, gold, religion, domestic and governmental policy, all are passed around like the Indian pipe of peace, each to take a whiff and pass it to his neighbor. What will be the result of all this? We see the venturous step of advancement intruding upon the forbidden grounds of bigotry and superstition, boldly entering the sacred shades of that which was once deemed most holy, even almost violating the sanctity of domestic and family organization. Explorers are out upon every sea and land, and every nook and corner is penetrated and searched out.

Will the concentrated intelligence of past ages, with the improvements of the present, advance man in the scale of being, and lead him to seek for improvement in the science of life? We think it will, for man is a progressive being. It is an era of transition, an age of active, busy preparation. Is it to the establishment of some vast permanent moral, political or religious government, or is it to eventuate in a combination of all in one magnificent structure, under which all the nations of the earth may gather? The idea of a government, extending over the diversified tribes and nations of the earth, classifying, organizing and controlling the whole, has been considered chimerical, a sort of monomania raving of some besotted Alexander, hair-brained Peter of Russia, or unprincipled fatalism of a Napoleon—some bigoted believer in the Revelation of Patmos—Daniel, or some other old prophet of the dark ages. Changes of circumstances always require change in the administration; this would apply to individual States—why not to the world? In forming alliances, each State has in view a connection with the strongest. Although the present distracted state of the world might seem to forbid the expectation of an immediate amalgamation, yet the rapid increase of means of communication, the sure and decided commingling of interests, a universal interchange of sentiment, an increasing desire among mankind to shake off the shackles of despotism and enjoy the liberty of speech and conscience—all conspire to show that such a combination of circumstances must eventually result in some kind of universal government—moral, religious and political.

The antagonistic principles of despotism are passing away, and although a semblance of power is kept up, yet every one feels aware that its vitality is gone. The present movements among the nations are more like the premonitory symptoms of a new life, the birth of a man child, than the closing struggles of decaying despotism.

It is true there is yet a large portion of the globe still overshadowed by the old worn-out garments of despotism, but what are the materials of which their subjects are composed? They would be as easily moulded as the passive potter's clay, if once placed in wise and judicious hands. It is not these that would form an impediment in the way of universal government—it is the want of a firm guiding hand to concentrate the forces of new life that are now being produced upon the stage of action. All are anxiously looking for some great change, and many of the best informed are watching for the advent of some mighty genius to take the helm and guide the ship with safety through the coming tempest. The success of such an one would be the surest guarantee for him to rule; nor can one doubt the need of such an one at the present time.

The direction taken by inquiring minds is not only to the outward forms of government, but the public eye is turned to its interior arrangements and upon all that has a bearing upon the future prospects of community—in this connection has public attention been drawn to the subject of family organization, in consideration of its forming the basis of all governments. There are comparatively few who are bold enough at present to risk their reputation in an attack upon the old and long cherished order of family government, although very many are convinced there are vast moral, political and religious evils arising directly or indirectly from the present monogamic order; yet the few, who at this early day venture upon this subject before the public, denote an agitation and a spirit of investigation among the people, that will ultimately result in the only true basis of good domestic and popular government—the ancient and honored patriarchal order, the only one ever sanctioned by Heaven.

It is true there are some who overrun the mark, and disregard all law and order, but that in most cases arises from the want of knowledge of the true primitive law governing in the patriarchal ages.

The intelligence of the people will soon see the necessity of adopting rules and regulations, which will bring them to a closer acquaintance with long-disused and forgotten laws of God of former days, which, when compared with human laws, will be seen to be so far superior, that the universal vox populi will be for its establishment, as the only permanent and true basis of good and wholesome government, notwithstanding the objections of learned casuists or would-be moralists of the present-day.

Resolutions to Dissolve the Union.

AT an annual meeting of the Progressive Friends, held at Livonia, Wayne county, Michigan, ending on the first day of August, 1855, were passed some very spicy resolutions.

We said spicy, but might have said peppery with still greater propriety; yea, cankery, in the utmost extent, tending to eat the very vitals of this great Republic, and consign it to a premature grave.

A large portion of the resolutions have reference to the Passmore Williamson case, lauding him for his sterling integrity and moral worth, and condemning Judge Kane as having prostituted the ermine of the judiciary, &c.

The four resolutions that have reference to the General Government, we quote, to show the extent to which the anti-slavery feeling is carried with some of the Friends of Human Progress:

"Whereas, Liberty is among the natural and inalienable rights of every human being; and whereas, slavery, as it exists in this country, violently plunders three and one-fourth millions of our fellow-beings of that most sacred right; therefore,

"Resolved, That, as Friends of Human Progress, we regard the institution of slavery as a crime, not to be perpetrated, apologized for and defended, but to be immediately, unconditionally, and for ever abolished.

"Resolved, That, from the formation of the present American Union to the present day, the will of the slaveholder has been its supreme law or Constitution, and there is no rational hope that it can ever be otherwise as long as the Union remains.

"Resolved, That all who consent to support the Constitution of the existing Confederacy call God to witness that they will submit to, and help execute, the will of the slaveholder.

"Resolved, That our only rational hope of the principle of abolition of slavery and of the support of liberty for ourselves and posterity is, in the dissolution of the present American Union, and the formation of a Republic on the principle of No Union with Slaveholders."

Irish Revolutionary Sentiment.

WE copy an address to the Irishmen of the United States, which was adopted at a convention of delegates of the Emigrant Aid Society, in New York, in August last.

It is not unlikely that the London Times, in its late bluster about the fillibustering operations in this country, had reference to this when it spoke of the improbabilities (probabilities) of a demonstration through that medium to revolutionize Ireland:

FELLOW COUNTRYMEN: The time has at length arrived for action. Every steamer that crosses the Atlantic to our shores brings intelligence of fresh disasters, distress, and difficulty to our old inveterate foe. Let us therefore unite in a bond of brotherhood to aid the cause of Liberty for Ireland.

The moment is propitious—the means are in our own hands. Let us use them with prudence, with caution—but with devoted energy and the determination of men whose birthright is a heritage of vengeance—vengeance for seven centuries of wrong, of massacre, of spoliation, of rapine, of tyranny, deceit, and treachery, unparalleled in the annals of the world's history!

Remember Limerick!—remember Skull and Skibbereen! And oh! remember the long, bitter years of exile; and think of that beautiful land, the home of your childhood and your affections; where repose the ashes of your fathers and the martyrs of your race; and say, shall no effort be made to wrest the island from the Robber Pirate, who has so long held her in the gripe of tyranny, depressed the energies of her people, and despoiled them of their inheritance?

It is for her exiled children to say, shall this cease, and Ireland be free, or shall the tyrant boast a perpetual tenant right of the country.

The men in Ireland are ready, they wait only the assurance of our sympathy and aid; wisely taught by the experience of the past, they have ceased to blaster and brawl. The mind of the country is brooding over the vastness of the opportunity presented to it. It resembles the calm of a vast magazine, without but a spark of electricity to touch it, to burst forth in a terrible explosion.

The English sergeant seeks recruits in vain, for the peasant spurns the "Saxon Shilling" and turns with buoyant heart to reap the harvest with which a bountiful Heaven has blessed the land. He waits impatiently for the moment when the trumpet of insurrection shall summon him to the Rebel's Camp.

We do not counsel you to form a fillibustering league, or raise an army of invasion, under the shadow of the stars and stripes, where we have found shelter and protection. We deprecate the violation of any law of the land in which we live. You will from time to time be advised of the course of action to pursue.

We now ask you to form in each city and town in the United States a branch of the "Irish Emigrant Aid Society," assemble in each locality at once, avoid all useless speeching, go to work, communicate with us, we will forward you charters and instructions to form "Auxiliary Aid Societies." Elect your own officers; appoint the most responsible man in your locality as Treasurer. Avoid all useless expenses and parade. Work diligently and earnestly. Report to us the names of your subscribers and amount of money paid in. We, in turn, will report to the Supreme Directory, when elected, and thus there will be an unity of action, and we shall at all times know our strength and resources, and when the moment for action comes, our leaders will not be working in doubt and darkness.

Above all, let us bury in generous oblivion all past dissensions; ask no man, who will aid you, his creed or his politics; whether Young Ireland or Old Ireland; so he is for Ireland, and her rights, he is our brother. Let the past be a sealed book; or, at least, let it teach us mutual forbearance, and the folly of mistrust and disunion.

Let only a generous rivalry animate us as to who will do most for Ireland.

There is not a moment to be lost; we have already delayed too long Some have been waiting to hear what this leader would advise; some what that newspaper would suggest. And in this state of doubt and incertitude, we, who are no leaders, and aspire to be none, we whose proudest boast is that we are of the people, have boldly stepped into the breach, and merely given a voice, a feeble one indeed, to the thoughts and desires of millions of our fellow-workers.

Few revolutions have ever been the creation of leaders. Let the people commence the work; let the ranks be formed, and the leaders will fall into their places. Let us to the work, then, in good earnest. Let us

"Send the cry throughout the land,
Who's for our own again?
Summon ALL men to our band,
Why not our own again?

"Rich and poor, and old and young,
Sharp sword and fiery tongue,
Soul and sinew firmly strung,
All to get our own again."

Meeting of the Snakes and Utahs.

BY Bro. D. B. Huntington we learn that Ti-be-bu-tow-ats (meaning the White men's son, so named, by being made a chief by the United States Agents at Laramie in 1852) one of the Chiefs of the Snake Indians, and Ka-tat-o Chief of the northern Snakes, had come to this city for the purpose of making a treaty with the Utahs; they were met on Sunday, 2d Sept., by T-shar-poo-e-ent (White eye), Au-ta-ro Chiefs of Yampa Utes, Tintick, the hereditary chief of the Timp-no-quint band; Sow-i-ett's son represented his father and band, Tab-ba a chief of Ar-ra-peen's band, and Pe-teet-neet, chief of the Spanish Fork band, accompanied by subordinate chiefs and braves on each side.

The Utes met at the Governor's office fully armed with bows, arrows, and guns, at 10 A. M.

The Snakes formed a line opposite the Tabernacle, unarmed.

A messenger went from the Utes to tell the Snakes to stop where they were; they tarried a while and then moved east, opposite the Deseret Stores, led by D. B. Huntington, Utah and Sho-sho-ne interpreter, where they encountered the Utes, who had formed a line, painted black as if for battle, and completely armed, in violation of the usual Indian customs on making peace.

Huntington went over and told the Utes to put away their arms, when they dismounted, and all placed their guns against the wall, except Squash and To-ma, and Batieste retained his war spear. When the Utes had laid down their guns, many of them commenced concealing their bows and arrows under their blankets, which Ka-tat-o saw, when he lifted up the pipe of peace towards Heaven as high as he could raise his arm, and shouted in a loud voice, "THIS IS THE WEAPON I COME TO FIGHT WITH." At this time Batieste, the coward, commenced dancing the war dance and singing the war song in front of his men, and thrusting his spear to the earth. Huntington told the Utes to come and meet the Snakes in peace, when Old Pe-teet-neet started, followed by the other chiefs and braves. On approaching the Snakes, Pe-teet-neet offered Ti-be-bu-tow-ats his hand, who refused to take it. He then raised his own hand towards the Heavens, whereupon Pe-teet-neet did the same, they then solemnly lowered their hands low towards the earth, then raising up, looked each other in the eye, eagerly grasped each other by the hand, and then embraced each other in their arms. The several chiefs then went through the same solemn ceremonies.

The Snakes maintained their position in the line, when the Utes passed along the line, measuring arms, shaking hands, and embracing each other. When this portion of the ceremony was done, it was agreed that they should adjourn to the encampment of the Snakes, on Union Square. They went promiscuously, and the Utes encamped in D. B. Huntington's door yard.

The Snakes and Utes then formed two parallel lines, about two rods apart, and sat down on the grass. Ka-tat-o and Ti-be-bu-tow-ats then filled two large pipes with tam-i-nump and tobacco, commenced on the right of the line of the Utes, presenting the pipe to the first man, not allowing him to touch the pipe with his hands; who having smoked until satisfied, the pipe was presented to the next; and thus passed through the entire company. If any one was unaccustomed to smoking, he was excused, by putting his right hand on the right shoulder of the Snake, and drawing it slowing down his arm and along the pipe.

After the Snakes had passed the pipe to all the Utes, Pe-teet-neet and Tin-tick presented the pipe to the Snakes in like manner. They spent the remainder of the day in eating and refreshing.—[Deseret News.

FOR THE MORMON.

Letters upon Turkey.

THE Turkish nation is subject to such gross misrepresentations, regarded, as it is, through prejudiced interests, in a spirit of falsity, which few are likely to undertake to set aside, that I may as well assume the task of rectifying the mistakes of ignorance, and of affording a true idea of Turkish rule and Turkish polity. The sound commercial intercourse which the western nations have had the opportunity of enjoying with Turkey, should long since have done this; but this has been nobody's business, and the duty has appealed to no principle of moral equity. Much has been surmised, but little known. The French have had a party and a press, concerning itself with what it has pleased to call the Question D'Orient; but this has rather been to hasten present complications than to anticipate or adjust them.

We hear on all hands the empire is falling to pieces. Falling to pieces with what? The municipal institutions scattered over its surface, and to which all the people and races of Turkey are severally united, with their own laws, customs and regulations, are indestructible in character so long as not arbitrarily removed. Inherited in their simplicity from Arabic institutions, they have afforded the means for a quiet and unobserved progress of opinion; they have guarded rights and privileges; they have increased the efficiency of every design for the well-being of these several communities. What was the glory of Greece, or the means of existence and of extension of the Roman Empire, but the establishment, extension, and enlargement of these municipalities? Oh! but they say we are ignorant. Ignorant of what? An English Member of Parliament, whose name the Franks write Urquhart, confesses in his work on the resources of Turkey, being frequently ashamed, on being asked by the people in different villages in the interior of Turkey to tell them something new and useful, he was obliged to confess he had nothing to communicate. It is complained that, as matters stand, possessions are large, and that improvement is not to be expected in private property. Well, if there is no improvement, who is injured? If improvement there must be, who will show how? Will it be any improvement to invest the landlord with power over the immediate cultivators, as in Ireland, England and France, where increased demands both of tithe claimers and landowners follow the improvements of the tenants. For an imaginary economy, we are to be led into practical mistakes; at the expense of the predilections, habits, customs and feelings of a mass of human beings, all that we do is to be modified to suit the capricious ideas of the west; and in the exercise of a strangely diffusive sympathy, we are to be driven to submission, without a question of right or compromise. The picture commonly drawn of us is that we have stood for ages naked, defenceless, exposed to the hostility of invincible enemies, and only saved from destruction by the magnanimity of rivals. Well, the critical hour has arrived, war has broken out, our army on the Danube has measured itself against the colossal forces of Russia, and our success has been signal and complete. Before that time, what had we not done in southern Greece? Whence is our power derived, except from the honorable discharge of our trust. The imputation of exaction would at once excite contention. Our energy is knit by a principle of union which has never been exceeded in the history of social combinations. Will those, who seek to supercede us be more laborious, more virtuous, more sober, less disposed to extort an unreasonable proportion of the gains of the laborer? will they not rather seek for the means of an increased expenditure? Our rights and privileges are inherent; our laws and regulations are not of their framing; the touching of the latter will destroy all their simplicity, usefulness, and efficacy; and when this is the case, what remains of the former?

Lately, the most important question in the political world, was the attitude of Austria and Russia. Now, it is discovered that fleets cannot conquer armies, or set their dicta on countries touching merely inlets of the sea. Formerly, Russia was declared vast and poor, and to be crumpled like a sheet of brown paper; now it is discovered to be powerful and rich. They think to make Russia surrender recent conquests, and shut herself up in her own solitudes. But which is the more difficult task imposed? Already the commercial credit of both England and France is being shaken. Russia will not become a belligerent, and Russia will not abate her pretensions. As to Prussia, the truth is, the East is nothing to her. It is very nearly the same in her estimate, which power shall possess Constantinople, except, that being more jealous of Austria than of Russia, she would rather prefer that the Czar should extend his empire across the Danube, than that there should be any increase to Austrian power. The argument lately put forth in the government organs at Vienna, that Austria can have no wish, with her already too complicated interests, to possess herself of the Danubian principalities, seeing these would require such additional care and policy to guard, is intended merely to blind us, to lull our suspicions least we should favor the Russian cause, and give her a better chance of gaining supremacy in Germany. Besides, it is the interest of Russia to favor Prussia more than Austria, and to seek to dominate Germany through Berlin rather than Vienna. The court of Vienna is far more independent, far more led by ideas of its own; more than all, it is a southern, whereas, Prussia is a northern and a Baltic State, with far more affinities for Russian policy and alliance. Russia, too, has a bribe for Prussia. She is the only power that could enable her to take the lead of Germany, which she would do should Austria become estranged. The alliance between Prussia and Russia is more than the interest of the reigning families. But it has its risks. It exposes Prussia to the hostility of France; the provinces across the Rhine may any day be invaded and annexed. Russia never omits to take into account the internal enemies of Austria. Most curious are discussions of the powers on these appropriations and adjustments. We Turks understand not the transfer of a vast body of sentient beings from one set of masters to another, without in any way consulting them in the matter. We unite even in arms as a company of merchants, under certain rules and with certain prospective advantages.

France, as a nation, has made less progress than any other; the only way she can prevent her decline and fall is by the extension of her territory. Not only must she have the twelve millions between the Alps and the Rhine, but the myriads of Asia. She undertakes conquest in every line; and when a whole people breathe war, aggression, conquest, it is a sign of evil omen. The preparations in her dock-yards are not to be mistaken. They are to render her independent of the naval strength of England, and to be a principal element in the combination, by which she is to fulfill her proposed destiny. The egotism of the French is a thousand times more threatening than the placid concert of the Germans, or the provocative bearing of the Muscovite. The French know how to convert their resources into power, but not into prosperity or comfort. They steer under difficulties with consummate address, but cannot raise an industrial empire, because too earnest to spring into greatness. Is there any greatness without freedom? The aspirations of its people are incessantly checked in this ascendancy of absolutism.

Thousands cry out against us as a despotism, esteeming our rule a despotism from its very simplicity. A society, in which the people are admitted and instructed to bestow happiness on themselves, will necessarily be actuated by the highest and most ardent affection for the State; and in this regard exists in Turkey the only tie that can suffice to bind. The general mass of a community, like the mass of any other material, may be often in a state, not admitting of much reflection or judgment. And they may be reduced out of this state into inconvenient and miserable situations by insidious and deceitful proposals. But they must be excited by the prospect or hope of security and happiness; they never lose sight of that hope, and are never reduced into an incapacity of realizing it. Can France or England offer this? France has an external as well as internal policy, both undergoing constant modification, without reference to any abstract principle according to immediate interest, which no one can view without mistrust. It presents the embodiment of no manly sentiment round which to rally. What is hankered after is glory, French glory, to meet a spirit of insatiate vanity, and this at any sacrifice of material interests.

Then as to the English, malice goes hand in hand with their justice. They claim alone to know and to enjoy rational liberty and national independence. They have a government, the parliamentary speeches of whose members, not to speak of its acts, disclose constant duplicity; and as a people, so wrapped in their own conceit, as to make no allowance for apparent differences of other people, taking these up but to ridicule them. Because their houses are not invaded and searched, because they do not avenge themselves on distasteful measures, by popular commotions and violent outbreaks, therefore they are paragons of free beings. If they do not speak of all other nations as barbarians, they virtually regard them as such. Railery, the venting of their displeasure, is to be taken as the best sign of their good nature.

A Petrified Indian.

WHILE engaged in excavating recently upon the Milwaukie and La Crosse Railroad, near Schlesengerville, Iowa, the workmen came upon the petrified remains of an Indian, and with the remains some singular relics of olden times. The body was perfect, not having suffered by decay. His height at the present time would be considered gigantic, measuring seven feet two inches. On his breast was a plate of copper, on which were engraved numerous hieroglyphics, the meaning of which can hardly be imagined. But there they are, a record of the past. Could these hieroglyphics be read, they might, perhaps, unravel some of the mystery which hangs like a dark cloud over the history of the red man. An arrow of considerable strength and curious construction was also found with him, and especially invites the attention of antiquarians. —[Exchange.

[If the writer of the above will read the translated hieroglyphics in the Book of Mormon, he may learn many things which will serve to unravel the mystery of which he speaks.]—ED. MOR.

A New Tree for America.

AMONG the recent importations of seeds from Alicant, Spain, were those of the Carob tree, the pods of which, when ripe, contain a few drops of a substance resembling honey. From this circumstance, it is supposed that this tree is identical with the one upon which St. John fed while in the wilderness, and hence sometimes is called St. John's bread. It blooms twice a year—at the end of January or the first of February, and about the middle of September—and when well watered, grows to a considerable height and size, sometimes spreading to such a degree as to have a circumference of two or three hundred feet, and bearing upwards of a ton of pods. Young trees, only a year old, often have stems eight or ten inches thick, with branches ten or twelve feet long. Cattle, horses and mules devour the pods with great avidity, and if well fed upon them will become extremely fat, or in good condition to work. This tree, doubtless, will succeed well in the southern, and perhaps in the Middle States.—[California Chronicle.

HISTORIAN'S OFFICE,
GREAT SALT LAKE CITY,
Sept. 30, 1855.

To the Editor of the Mormon:

SIR,—The frost this fall has held off remarkably well. A good portion of the corn has ripened, although some yet remains green; the crops, however, will be rather light. Some wheat also is still green.

On the evening of the 3d, the first immigrating company of Saints, two hundred and six in number, under Captain Hindley, arrived in this city in good condition. The second company, principally Danes, under Noah G. Guyman, arrived on the evening of the 7th inst. The third company, led by Seth M. Blair, arrived about sundown on the evening of the 11th inst. They were mostly Texans. On the evening of the 25th, the first division of the P. E. Fund Company, in charge of Elder Ballantyne, arrived in this city. They were preceded by the Nauvoo Brass Band, who went out as far as Willow Springs to meet the company, and their old captain, William Pitt, returning from his mission to England; also, Elder William Glover, a member of the Band. Moses Thurston's company (the sixth) arrived early on the morning of the 28th inst. The general health of all the companies was good. There have been several slight rains, but none sufficient to start the grass on the bottoms west of Jordan, in consequence of which they will be entirely useless for a herd ground this winter.

The Deseret State Horticultural Society has been organized under the Presidency of Elder Wilford Woodruff. They have had two exhibitions, at which peaches, apples, plums, and grapes were displayed. Some of the peaches measured from seven to eight inches in circumference, and were a beautifully flavored fruit; the apples, plums, and grapes, also, were remarkably fine, and for seedlings would not disgrace any Eastern market. There has been considerable budding of fruit trees from the best specimens. Bro. William C. Staines presented the Historian's Office a basket of delicious peaches, which have been named the "Ladies' Favorite." I never tasted a better flavored peach. Fruit has been tolerably abundant, but would have been more so had it not been for the excessive drouth. This is certainly cheering, when we remember that seven years ago the valley was a howling desert, pronounced by travellers unfit for cultivation, and that the first year of our residence here Bro. Staines lost 100,000 fruit trees through the ravages of the crickets, nor has he been much more fortunate this year, 500,000 apple trees having been destroyed by grasshoppers.

At the public works, Bro. George Cook has manufactured pruning and Congress knives, of a beautiful finish and temper, also a set of curriers' tools, which the say cannot be beat; he is also making lances for Captain Clawson's company of Lancers. Unpickable locks, swords, carding and thrashing machines, &c., are being made there in the best style.

Several jobs have been let out on the most difficult parts of the Cottonwood Canal, and as soon as the customary fall rains have sufficiently moistened the ground, an immense amount of labor tithing will be applied on that work, the design of which is for boating the granite to be employed in the erection of the Temple.

The new Historian's Office was ready for the roof, but on the night of the 27th a violent gust of wind from the north blew down a few yards of the gable end, breaking a number of joists, which will somewhat retard the progress of the work. The Governor's large house is enclosed. Secretary Babbitt is erecting a commodious two story dwelling house, as are also Elders O. Pratt, Staines, Jarvis, and many others. The adobe work of the County Court House is progressing finely. The adobe work of a meeting-house at Pleasant Grove, 60 by 36 feet, is about completed; the rock basement, ten feet high, is partitioned into store rooms. A similar meeting-house is in progress at Lehi.

A great number of cattle have died in Utah county; it is thought to be in consequence of their drinking from stagnant pools, the excessive drouth having dried up the smaller streams.

The grasshoppers have destroyed nearly all the corn at Lehi and Draperville.

Messrs. O. Pratt and J. W. Fox started on the 11th for Green River, to ascertain where the northern line of the Territory crosses that River, and located it about four and a half miles above the upper ferry.

Mr. Townsend has purchased the bell cast by Morgan Phelps from the first iron from Iron county, very hard. He has mounted it on the top of the Salt Lake Hotel; it has a shrill, sharp ring, nearly equal to the bell at the public works.

I am, at present, compiling the history of the last days of April, 1844.

President J. C. L. Smith, and some twenty-five other brethren from Iron county, have come up to attend Conference. In addition to the destruction of grain, by grasshoppers and drouth, in that county, they have been visited by an early frost, which has done considerable damage. A great portion of the wheat at Cedar City is injured with smut. About one quarter of the wall of Paragoonah has been recently raised to a height of eight feet, and the materials are now on the ground to complete the structure to that height, which Bro. Dame, with a vigilant company of workmen, is rapidly consummating. The fort, when completed, will be one hundred and six feet square and twenty-two feet high: it will be built of stone and adobies.

Some very fine cotton has been raised on the Santa Clara. Dr. Hurt informs me that he never saw a choicer article in his life. I send you a small specimen.

Yours truly, GEO. A. SMITH.

PAROWAN, Aug. 23, 1855.

To the Editor of the Mormon:

DEAR SIR: Yours of May 2d has just come to hand, and in reply I will say that the numbers missing from our file of THE MORMON have not arrived here, and though we do not attribute this to your neglect, we consider the loss a considerable one. We who reside in Parowan, always hail the arrival of THE MORMON with peculiar satisfaction, and peruse its piquant columns with a gusto better realized than explained. In relation to the volume sent to Peter Martineau at Milwaukee please forward it to Sixtus E. Johnson, Honolulu, Sandwich Isles, care of P. B. Lewis, that the morning dawning in that distant region may be still more brightened by the scintillations of THE MORMON.

I will add a few more items of news that may interest you perhaps, or others of the Saints whose desires are for the prosperity of Utah. The season, thus far, has been quite dry, but having the crystal streams of the mountains to back our labors, we shall raise enough produce to sustain ourselves and the incoming Saints, but it is very doubtful if there will be a sufficiency for any others. I believe it is customary for all christian missionaries to go to the fields of their labors well backed by the God of this world, and having, as they suppose, a sure supply of eatables and wearables, and enough of the "needful" to appear as gentlemen, and to secure the respect of their flocks; and I really cannot see why there should be any exception in the case of those who are to be sent to the poor benighted Mormons, whether they be gentlemen of the black cloth, or the blue, and whether their arguments for the conversion of souls be derived from the Bible, or Scott's Infantry tactics. I see that Mr. Bennett of the New York Herald is in favor of the latter style of conversion, and thinks that a "Company of Infantry could on a pinch set Utah to rights." From this it appears that the zealous apostle of christianity, Mr. Bennett, does not suppose us capable of receiving the truths of the holy scriptures, as it would be too strong meat for us; but is desirous of administering the milk of the Gospel to us as babes, in such mild and heavenly precepts as "charge bayonets," "present, —aim—fire." That kind of argument has been made use of for many years past, but with very poor success, probably on account of the obduracy of our hearts. But with a zeal not cooled by failure, he would still persevere in his glorious mission, until the Mormons are converted into christians or corpses, as he declares that christianity and Mormonism cannot exist together. It is said "give the devil his due" and I will here return thanks to Mr. Bennett for his honesty and candor in not including Mormonism with the false christianity of the day. It exhibits a greater degree of fairness and truth in him, than would be thought possible in his case. Yes, Mr. Bennett, in case you should succeed in sending a "company" of missionaries, with christianity in one hand and "Scott's tactics" in the other, to convert us to the faith, doubtless many of our number would accept the latter boon, could they choose for themselves. Col. J. C. Fremont declared while among us in February, 1854, that he never was treated more kindly in his life, or saw a more serviceable militia, and of course his testimony must be true, as he is not a Mormon.

The health of the people of this Territory has been excellent thus far, and all things show a state of prosperity and peacefulness not equalled elsewhere. It would probably be quite dull to any one but a Mormon, as we have no interesting list of murders, rapes, robberies, fires and accidents to preserve us from dying of ennui, but the Saints having their minds engaged in trying to serve God and do good to their fellow man, do not desire that their peaceful homes should be turned into a pandemonium.

We see with regret the progress of disunion principles in the United States (!) and have no feeling in common with those traitors who would destroy the mighty fabric reared by a Washington, Adams, Jefferson and other noble spirits, and trust that we shall always be found true to the Constitution of the United States, even though all the rest of the States and Territories should prove traitors.

Our relations with the Indians still continue favorable, and all our cities, towns and villages continue to flourish. The new settlement at the Los Vegas, in New Mexico, on the southern route, is in a prosperous condition, as also the operations at the Santa Clara. May you be prospered in your affairs is the desire of your brother in the Gospel.

JAMES H. MARTINEAU.

P. S. I think if we could depend upon receiving all our papers from the States, I could treble your list of subscribers from this section of the country. J. H. M.

We shall be glad to hear often from Bro. Martineau.—[ED.

THE Placerville (California) American publishes a letter from Orson Hyde, of Carson Valley, in which he says: I learn by a private letter, that in Provo, a town fifty miles south of Salt Lake City, where the wheat crop was mostly destroyed by grasshoppers, that a honey dew had fallen so bountifully on the small cottonwoods along the river banks that the citizens were washing the leaves and boiling the syrup into sugar. One person will make ten pounds of beautiful sugar in a day. This would bring $4 in ordinary times. The people there depend on their wheat to get groceries; but when the wheat failed, sugar fell from heaven. In case of an entire failure of crops, it looks as though we might almost get manna, if not quite. The honey dew approximates very near to it.—[N Y. Sun.

UTAH.—The quarterly accounts of the Surveyor General of Utah, from the opening of the land offices in that Territory to the 1st of October last, have been received by the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

One Week Later from Europe.

The Very Latest by Telegraph.

HALIFAX, Nov. 22, 1855.

THE royal mail steamship Canada, Captain Stone, arrived at this port at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

Her advices from Liverpool are to the 10th instant, one week later than those received by the Pacific at New York.

The Canada will be due at Boston at a late hour on Friday night, so that her mails will probably reach New York on Saturday afternoon.

The excitement in Great Britain in regard to the alleged threatening aspect of the relations between that government and the United States had wholly cooled off, and nothing of a belligerent nature had transpired during the week.

From the seat of war there is no news of importance beyond some unreliable rumors of battles near Perekop and Simpheropol, which were generally discredited.

At the latest moment a doubtful report was in circulation that Nicolaeiff had been bombarded by the allies.

Peace rumors were quite abundant, but they were apparently without foundation.

Strenuous efforts were being made to bring Sweden into the Western alliance.

Unfriendly relations were arising between Great Britain and Spain, respecting certain disputed claims.

The Liverpool cotton market had exhibited considerable animation, and, owing to a limited supply of the current qualities, an advance in prices had been fully established.

On some descriptions the quotations are 1-4d. higher than those advised by the Pacific. The week's business aggregated over 77,000 bales, nearly one third of which were taken by speculators and exporters.

In breadstuffs a general advance had taken place, and all descriptions closed with an active demand. Brown, Shipley & Co. call wheat 3d. higher: flour, 1s., and corn, 2s. 6d.

Provisions had undergone no change of moment.

A further considerable advance in sugars had taken place.

The London money market was rather easier and consols closed at 88 7-8 for money and 89 for account.

Irishmen Awaking.

FROM a letter by a Richmond Va. Corespondent to the N. Y. Herald dated Nov. 19th, we extract the following:

Slightly as the present movement in this country for the liberation of Ireland seems to be regarded, it is unquestionably assuming an aspect which to my mind is truly indicative of a purpose to carry out the plan proposed. The project is favorably viewed by the friends of Ireland in the South. In this city alone an organization comprising from three to four hundred, is on foot, and I have ascertained that before a month from this time it will increase to double that number. The operations are conducted in secret—the taking of an oath being, as I believe, an indispensable qualification to membership. This is regarded as objectionable by many influential persons who sympathise with the movement; but that feature will probably be dispensed with after the organization is perfect and, in view of the advantages to be derived from the accession of the influential but scrupulous friends of the cause.

I am informed, upon unquestionable authority, that organizations for the same purpose are being formed in every part of Virginia, and in fact, the South, wherever the proper material is known to exist. I can say with perfect confidence that no object of a political character having reference to the election of '56 is contemplated, as was supposed in the beginning. On the contrary, from what I can learn, a positive prohibition is enjoined against the introduction or discussion of any question bearing remotely upon politics or religion. Knowing that all previous movements tending to a similar object were defeated by divisions, arising from either of these sources, they are particularly cautious to avoid a recurrence of a like disaster in this instance.

The recent tone of the English press has given an impetus to the movement which no appeal, however patriotic, could produce. Before the sentiments of these papers became known, I doubt if it had a single adherent south of Mason and Dixon's line. And if the influential press of this country had continued to observe that indifference regarding it which they manifested from its inception, it would have died a natural death. I know enough of the feelings of the friends of Ireland in the South, to justify the conclusion that here, at least, it would have gained no foothold, so long as the agency for its promotion was limited to the Irish American organs in this country. The discussion of this question in the press of England, and the comments in the press here, which necessarily followed, has done more to promote the cause than could have been effected by such sheets as the Citizen and Irish American in a year.

Mr. Fillmore at Vienna.

A VIENNA letter of the 13th ult. says: Mr. Milliard Fillmore, late President of the United States of America, visited this capital during the present week. It is to be regretted that the illness of a member of his family curtailed his visit, and prevented its exceeding the very moderate limit of three or four days. Mr. Fillmore was received with marked attention by the imperial ministers, and others at present in this capital. Parties were at once improvised to mark his presence here; and it was a matter of regret to a very high personage that "the Emperor himself was not in Vienna to mark, by his personal attention, the satisfaction he felt at the visit of one who, though elected by universal suffrage to the presidency of twenty-four millions of republicans, had yet, during the eventful years 1848-50-51, carefully eschewed all foreign intervention, and in every way avoided complicating the trouble affairs of continental Europe."—[Boston Journal.

Two Germans named Kronnenberger and John Grasslein were deliberately fired upon yesterday evening, on the Bel Air road, a few miles from Baltimore, by a man named John Patterson. Grasslein was instantly killed. The deed was entirely unprovoked. Patterson has been arrested.

John Bull Humbugging Mr. Buchanan.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21, 1855.

MR. BUCHANAN in his dispatches to the Government, states that professions of friendship toward the United States were never more strongly expressed by the British Cabinet than now.

Government having six years ago instituted a suit against Wm. B. Scott, formerly Navy Agent at Washington, to recover an alleged balance on the settlement of his accounts, the jury this afternoon in the Circuit Court rendered a verdict of nearly $18,000 in favor of the Government.

The Plains.

WE learn from the St. Louis Republican, that scientific men are now exploring the plains or prairies between the Mississippi and the Rocky Mountains, and the prospect is good that an abundance of coal and water can be obtained at a small outlay of money and labor. Successful experiments have been made in testing the practicability of boring artesian wells, and the result is most satisfactory. In one instance, near the Pecos river, about the thirty-second parallel, at the depth of six hundred and fifty feet, the greatest abundance of perfectly pure water was obtained. Besides this, the operation developed the existence of coal beds, easily accessible, and, as far as the experiments have progressed, evidently underlying the whole of that immense country. The importance of this discovery will at once be apparent. If rivers cannot be created by these wells, water sufficient may be obtained for all the purposes of irrigation, and thus the plains may become as thickly inhabited, and the land rendered as productive as any other portion of our country. With plenty of coal for fuel, the want of timber will hardly keep back the pioneer; for the materials for building are too numerous to admit of such a supposition. The thorn will doubtless grow as well there as here, and live hedges, even in sections were forests are abundant, are now adopted by the farmer.

Camels and the Government.

THE communication which the War Department now has with the frontier ports is an expensive and uncertain one. The troops in New Mexico require the transportation of several millions weight of stores and supplies. Contractors undertake to perform this at fourteen cents per pound. The route lies from San Antonio, in Texas, eight hundred miles to El Paso. Sub-contracts are made with teamsters on the route, who own carts and oxen, to transport with a cart and three yoke of oxen, 2,500 pounds, at seven cents per pound. On the 25th of July a caravan of four hundred carts left El Paso, with one million pounds of stores. The time occupied is about six weeks, and the profit to the contractors about $20,000 for the trip. A cart and oxen will make three trips, when they are useless. Now it has been ascertained that camels are peculiarly fitted for that service, as being cheap, durable, and quicker. A company for the importation of camels has been chartered by the State of New York, with a capital of $300,000. It is proposed by the holders of the above contract to put it into a company with parties who will advance $50,000, to be expended in the importation of camels; the profits, under the present contract, to be enjoyed pro rata. Mr. Edward Macgaurran, of this city, is, we understand, the agent.—[U. S. Economist.

Progress or the Chicago, St Paul and Fond du Lac Railroad.

WE learn that at a meeting held at Janesville on Saturday, which was addressed by William B. Ogden, Esq., of this city, subscriptions to the amount of $250,000 were received to the stock of this road, and on Monday morning the contractors commenced work upon the section between Janesville and Woodstock, a distance of thirty-eight miles, with sufficient force to carry the work forward rapidly. A considerable portion of the road is graded for this distance, the iron is provided, and we understand that Mr. Ogden stated, at the meeting referred to, that the whole section would be ready for the cars by the first of March, thus uniting Chicago and Janesville by rail.

This will be gratifying intelligence to our citizens and to all the people along the line. This is destined to be one of the most important lines of roailroad for freight and travel centering in our city. It will as effectually bring the trade of southern and middle Wisconsin to our doors, as the Central does that of southern and middle Illinois, and we believe even more so. And it is constantly to go on increasing in importance. Who can predict its business when it shall have penetrated to the heart of Minnesota and stretched out its iron arm to Lake Superior!—[Chicago Democratic Express.

Surveys in Nebraska.

THE surveys in Nebraska have been interrupted and brought to a stand-still by the hostility of the Pawnee Indians. On the morning of the 3d ult., some chiefs of that tribe came to the camp of the surveyors, and ordered them in the most peremptory manner to leave, backing their orders with repeated threats that every man who did not leave the survey before the sun should arrive at meridian, should be shot. They then proceeded to destroy all the landmarks made in the vicinity. The survey was consequently abandoned.

MARRIED,

IN Nauvoo, Pa., by C. L. Farnsworth, Esq., Mr. NELSON ROOT to Miss MINERVA CANFIELD, both of that place, and members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

In travelling from the Salt Lake Valley to this place, we had the pleasure of sojourning beneath the hospitable roof of Brother and Sister Daniel Canfield for a number of days, during which time we formed an agreeable acquaintance with the parties whose marriage we are now happy to record. We congratulate them in the following homespun:

> Long life and happy days the pair attend,
> And many branches from these Roots extend,
> 'Till all united, form a goodly tree,
> To bear celestial fruit eternally.

Letter Notice.

WE are constantly receiving letters from Europe, addressed to our care, with the postage unpaid. Now, we are willing to accommodate men, but we can't pay their postage, as one out of ten perhaps is not called for. This is to inform all such persons that no such letters will be taken out of the office, by us, in future.

Mormon Publications.

THE DESERET NEWS is a weekly paper, the official organ of the Church in Utah, and is published in Salt Lake City; it is ably edited by Albert Carrington. It is circulated extensively in Utah Territory; how much abroad we are not prepared to say.

Price of subscription, $5 in advance.

THE ST. LOUIS LUMINARY.—A weekly paper lately started at St. Louis. It is a very neat paper, full of useful information, and especially interesting to the Saints, to whom we recommend it. It is ably edited by Elder Erastus Snow, one of the Twelve Apostles, and President of the Stake of St. Louis. We recommend it to all lovers of truth.

Price of subscription, $2 in advance.

Subscriptions can either be sent to THE MORMON office, or to the editor of the Luminary, St. Louis, Mo.

THE MILLENNIEL STAR.—A weekly publication of 16 pages, adapted for binding; of which there are 16 volumes now bound. It is printed on good paper, clear type, and is devoted principally to the progress of the work in Europe. It is very ably edited by F. D. Richards, one of the Twelve Apostles, and President of the European Church.

Price in England, one penny, or two cents. The law of postage between England and the United States is, that two cents on each paper shall be prepaid in each country, and two cents after the arrival.

Price of subscription, including foreign postage, $2.25, in advance, sent to the address of subscribers. Elder Richards has requested us to act as agent, but has not given us the terms. The above is the nearest approximate that we can arrive at without instructions.

The subscriptions can be sent to us, and we will immediately forward the names and address.

Published at 36 Islington, Liverpool, and 35 Jewin street, City, London.

Besides the above, there is a paper published in Australia, another in Bombay, one in Switzerland, one commencing on the Sandwich Islands, one in California, and one in Cincinnati; besides a host of minor publications.

PROSPECTUS.

THE MORMON

IS the name of a Weekly Journal which will be published in the city of New York, by JOHN TAYLOR, one of the Twelve Apostles of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; formerly editor of the "Times and Seasons" and the "Nauvoo Neighbor," in the city of Nauvoo; subsequently of the "Etoile du Déseret," in the city of Paris, France; and "Zion's Panier," in the city of Hamburg, Germany.

THE MORMON will be devoted to the cause and interests of the "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," and will be the advocate of its claims; social, moral, political, and religious: and will also treat upon all subjects which the Editor may deem interesting, instructive, or edifying to his readers; among which will be science, literature, and the general news of the day. Further than this, he has no pretensions, nor does he purpose to be bound to any particular party or interest.

To the Latter Day Saints he would say, as he is known to them, and deputed by the Presidency, the above will be sufficient. To others: that while he esteems all honorable men, and would, by all proper means, court their respect and patronage, he has no promises to make; but leaves himself at liberty to examine any principle, whether moral, social, scientific, political, religious, spiritual, temporal, past, present, or to come; and pursue such a course as to him may seem best.

The Editor would state that from his numerous correspondents in Europe, East Indies, Australia, Pacific Islands, California, Utah, and other parts of the world, he hopes to make THE MORMON interesting as a newspaper, not only to the Saints but also to his patrons in the United States, England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, the Isles of Man and Jersey, as well as in France and Germany.

The Editor would further state, that as our emigration will come, in future, by the way of the East instead of the South, and as THE MORMON will be extensively circulated among the emigrating Saints in Europe and the citizens of Utah Territory, it will be an excellent medium of advertising for Merchants, Storekeepers, Wagon Makers, Horse and Cattle Dealers, and Carriers in the West and on the route; as well as the Wholesale and Commission Merchants in the East.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION—$2, IN ADVANCE.

To all our Presiding Elders throughout the World:

DEAR BRETHREN—You will perceive by the above Prospectus that Mormonism is assuming another phase, and that we are now going to be the representatives of our own opinions, instead of having others to represent them for us. And as I am particularly desirous to make the paper interesting, I should feel much obliged if you would write communications to "THE MORMON" on any matter of interest; social, moral, scientific, or religious: the local and political position of the country where you reside, its inhabitants, customs, manners; its arts, sciences, productions, curiosities, and religion; or any other thing that you may deem interesting: not forgetting the state of our own Church.

As a Deseretian I am desirous to gather honey from every flower, and make "THE MORMON" a welcome visitor at the fire-side of every Latter Day Saint; to be sought after by men of intelligence, and be the true representative of Mormonism in the World. J. T.

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the trangression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The fourth is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the 'laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Bien-aimés frères, je désire, en commençant cette publication, vous adresser quelques paroles. Le Seigneur, dans sa bonté et sa miséricorde, a jugé convenable de restaurer au monde l'Evangile primitif, dans toute la simplicité, la beauté et la pureté qu'il avait autrefois, parmi les chrétiens des premiers temps, aux jours de Jésus et de ses Apôtres.

La lumière de la vérité a éclaté au milieu des ténèbres et de la corruption des hommes, en ce temps où le monde est déchiré par mille opinions contradictoires.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Si nous suivons attentivement l'action de Dieu sur le genre humain, nous trouverons que tous ces maux proviennent de ce que les nations et les peuples se sont éloignés de Dieu; et rien moins qu'un retour à lui ne peut arrêter la terrible tempête, calmer la mer furieuse, tranquilliser les passions capricieuses des hommes, et rendre au monde moral, religieux et politique, cet ordre qui règne dans la création physique de Dieu.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui règle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

C'est la religion que vous croyez et que vous enseignez, qui est destinée à restaurer l'homme et la terre; c'est elle qui ramènera les peuples à Dieu, qui les retirera du chaos moral, religieux et politique du monde, et les rassemblera en un peuple qui sera conduit et reconnu de Dieu; qui sera honoré devant les hommes et les nations; et qui aidera à établir et à développer le royaume de Dieu dans ces derniers jours.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaîtraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? Ou devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours?

Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconque demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Evangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit?" Nous le faisons aussi. Crurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains, par la foi en Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "l'espoir en la résurrection?" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.?" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.?" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions á son Eglise actuelle.

Nous demanderons ce qu'il y a d'inconséquent en tout cela? Lequel est le plus inconséquent, de croire et de pratiquer les Ecritures, ou de dire, nous les croyons et puis de les nier á notre organisation, à nos doctrines, à nos œuvres.

Mais des visions, des prophéties, des révélations n'ont-elles pas une tendance à conduire á l'enthousiasme et au fanatisme? Oui, les visions humaines et les délusions de Satan l'ont. Mais si le Seigneur eût pensé que ses visions et ses révélations fussent préjudiciables aux hommes, pourquoi les aurait-il données dans les anciens temps? Si elles doivent être préjudiciables de nos jours, certainement elles l'eussent été autrefois. L'enthousiasme, la folie et le fanatisme des hommes est une chose; autre chose est Dieu révélant sa volonté aux peuples pour leur organisation, leur stabilité, leur consolation, leur union, leur savoir, leur édification, et pour l'établissement de son royaume.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaitre Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Les philosophes ont scruté l'homme, la terre, les œuvres e la création pour trouver un vrai système, Ils ont tous eu leur jour. Ils ont introduit beaucoup de bons principes, mais quant à l'amélioration du monde, là, ils ont fait défaut. Leurs systémes, quelque bons que soient plusieurs d'entre eux, sont bien loin d'embrasser l'objet désiré: "Ils ont été pesés dans la balance, et trouvés trop légers."

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaître que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence, ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les eobe: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lasciveté, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votro lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

To the Emigration and Our Readers Generally.

We shall endeavor to be always prepared to impart the latest information relative to the best course to be pursued by Emigrants on their arrival in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

Our emigration have heretofore, almost exclusively, gone by the way of New Orleans, but will hereafter land in the Eastern cities; and one of the principal objects of establishing "THE MORMON" is for their information, as well as all other emigration arriving in this country.

We shall take special interest in seeking out the cheapest, best and most convenient mode of conveyance from this and other points, as well as to observe the course pursued by agents in the accommodation for travelers on the routes, and make of "THE MORMON" a directory, to which all Emigrants and Travelers may refer with some degree of safety.

A Card to the Saints.

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "THE MORMON." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish, you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

By a Series of splendid STEEL ENGRAVINGS and WOOD CUTS, from Sketches made on the spo from Life, in 1853, expressly for this work, by
FREDERICK PIERCY,
AND CONTAINING A MAP OF THE OVERLAND PORTION OF THE JOURNEY.
EDITED BY JAMES LINFORTH.
This highly and interesting Work will form a narrative of the Journey from Liver ool to Great Salt Lake Valley, and will give Historical, Descriptive, and Statistical Information respecting the places, and the Indian Tribes on the route, and in Utah Territory.
The mode in which the Latter Day Saints' emigration is conducted; a review o it from the commencement; and incidental instructions to emigrants, will constitute an early part of the Work.
The Statistical information will be drawn from the most authentic sources, and consequently may be relied upon. That portion of it which relates to the Latter Day Saints, will be particularly valuable, owing to the difficulty hitherto experienced by all classes in obtaining anything accurate, from the conflicting statements which have appeared from time to time, in a great portion of the public press.

Home.

BY W. WEBSTER CLAFLIN.

EARTH may boast her ruined scenes
Of beauty rich and rare,
Her hoards of wealth and glitt'ring gems
That sparkle everywhere;
But steered by fortune's hand along,
Whichever way I roam,
I find no spot so dear to me
As my old cottage home.

It is not hard to gather friends
Our journeyings to cheer—
Friends for a day, but friends in name
Unlike the near and dear;
The cherished few who cluster round
The old ancestral seat,
Where, tired of all the cares of life,
We rest our weary feet.

The heart will own no intercourse
With flattering smile and word,
But turn to a more genial place
Where Love's soft tones are heard;
A mother's smiles are not forgot—
A father's lessons kind—
Such love and kindness we may search
The world in vain to find.

Dear Home! though I may wander far,
And traverse land and sea,
Thou'lt ever be the dearest spot
In this wide world to me.
I'll not forget these cherished friends,
The constant and the true,
Who shared my early cares and joys,
Though often finding new.

Is the Union in Danger?

WE are as ready to allow as any one, that the cry of "saving the Union" has been used on many occasions where circumstances did not warrant it. Indeed it has been employed so often, that people have come to regard it with a sneer, especially those who, with more zeal than discretion, are waging a crusade against the institutions of a portion of the States of this confederacy. It becomes thoughtful, sensible men, however, to seriously study the signs of the times, and see whether we are not drifting upon breakers which will rend the good ship of state into fragments. In order to fully understand the great questions now at issue, we must look back to the formation of this government, and if we would comprehend our dangers, we must not only study the starting point, but we must examine the course of our governmental policy since the adoption of the Constitution. There is one error in which most people too commonly indulge, which is to suppose that we have already established democratic institutions in this country. Such is not in reality the fact. We have formed a government based upon the grand idea of human equality, but we have by no means fully developed the idea, and most of all we have not secured it upon a durable foundation. It is but a little more than half a century since our Constitution was formed—a time too short to mature any system of government. During that period, it has suffered many severe shocks—the waves of disunion and fanaticism, have beaten against it, but it has hitherto proved too strong for their united assaults. It is now undergoing another stupenduous assault, and if candid men will look at the weapons of warfare used to effect it, they will at once perceive that they are of the most formidable character—real Lancaster guns and Minnie rifles. The agitation is now a purely sectional one, based ostensibly upon the ground of "progress of liberty" and the defence of "human freedom."

The institution of the South—a feature that was in all the States when Jefferson penned the immortal words "that all men are free and equal," is now declared to be inimical to the liberty of white men. The passions of the people—the love of liberty—the sympathy of humanity, are all appealed to in the most earnest manner, to exterminate this "hideous evil," this "gigantic iniquity." The press, the pulpit, the forum, yea, even monarchical England are enlisted in this crusade for "liberty." Our own people are appealed to to form themselves into a sectional party to resist the vile encroachments of a system that would destroy the hopes of "humanity." It is needless to say that when the subject is presented in such colors, there is danger unless the real state of the case is understood. If this be really a crusade for liberty which the abolitionists are waging—if the hopes and the future interests of white men are centered in the success of their schemes, as they teach, and thousands, we fear, believe, then, indeed are we in a situation which threatens to destroy our happy country and rend the union of these States into atoms. It becomes all then, to study the principles upon which this government is founded, and to remember that upon carrying out fully and fairly the principles as laid down in the Constitution, rests the success of establishing democratic institutions on this continent.

There is real danger in the present crisis. All who will carefully study the signs of the times must see it. There is a determined and bitter hostility on both sides, provoked by long continued exasperations which presages no good results. Politicians are more corrupt than ever before, and the hopes of success allure many into positions which they would not otherwise assume. We meet men almost every day who are convinced, they say, that a certain course is right, and yet have not the courage to assume it because they are afraid of its unpopularity. "The people will repudiate it," they say. Now, when our leading men are made of such timber—when they have not even a splinter of the "old hickory" in their composition, what is to become of our country?

What shall be said of men, too, who have not the manliness to assert what they believe to be right—who tremblingly crouch before what they suppose to be public opinion,—which is often, as the late election in this State has shown, a mere phantom of their own imgination? We were told in October if any party dared to endorse democratic measures and the democratic national administration, it would be swamped irrevocably. But what is the result? Why, the very party which came the nearest to it in this State has increased its vote over last year, while the other, which endorsed the administration but not its measures, has about half what it received at that election! This same public opinion has made more traitors and doughfaces that all other causes combined. If our politicians are to succumb to it any longer we shall be in the very meshes of disunion, before we are aware of it.

Let honest men look at all our difficulties fairly in the face, and ask themselves, regardless of all consequences what is right? and summon the courage to follow it. Such a course will create public opinion. A few prominent men of our country, speaking out boldly upon the great questions of the day, will calm the storms of folly and fanaticism. But if we are allowed to drift along, we shall soon be where it may not be easy to return. The South have rights under the Constitution which must be granted them. If they are not granted they will rebel, or else they have not the spirit we give them credit for, in which case we should despise them the same as we would any other people who would tamely submit to an invasion of their rights. If the cry "no more slave States," which has resounded even from some so-called democratic orators, is to be not simply a cry, but a reality, then we will write the ominous though fearful words in advance, "the Union is dissolved."

There is no getting over or around this point. Let every person who thinks he believes that this motto is to be carried out sit calmly down and calculate, if he can, the value of this Union. Let him estimate the worth of a confederacy which may be as happy and as prosperous as any nation on earth, divided into petty states, with local rivalries, and border feuds, to be followed by distinct clans, led on by men still more unprincipled than those who now create divisions and jealousies, leaving in their train devastation and bloodshed, and the ruin of all that civilization has effected. Others may sneer at the worth of the Union, but for us we earnestly declare that our mind is completely at a loss to comprehend its importance. The thoughtless may consider it of no consequence, but let any man take the map of this country and study it for one hour—see the interlacing rivers—the vast range of lakes—the exposed sea coast—the diversity and yet unity of climate, soil, and productions, and he will at once perceive that no mind can estimate what the fatal results of a separation of these States would be.

We have said that we discern in the signs of the times real danger, and we do. We see it in the affected disregard for the Union—in the ridicule bestowed upon it by those who are seeking to sectionalize parties, and in all the various forms which opposition to the rights of all parties in the confederacy assumes. We are not alone in this view of the case. The New York Observer, a careful and close scrutinizer of the signs of the times, has an able article upon it, from which we make the following extract:—

"A strong effect has been made to set up an issue between the North and the South as the great absorbing consideration in politics. Geographical divisions are always to be deprecated, and especially in a country where the bond of union is so constructed as in ours. The old question of State Rights has not even to this day been settled to the entire satisfaction of all parties. The original principles of Union are yet in discussion. Compared with other countries, our government is yet in its infancy. It is therefore extremely hazardous for us to venture upon such tests as shall array one section of the country against the other, lest we put in peril the integrity of the Union and the hopes of freedom. However disposed some persons may be to ridicule apprehensions of this sort, as being spectres of an excited imagination, or the fears of a timid spirit, we are of those who believe that there is real danger close at hand. What makes us more fearful is, that the ridicule of these apprehensions proceeds from those persons whose measures and conduct are eminently calculated to precipitate the very result we deplore. It is a part of the scheme of those who would make the coming Presidental Election a section one, to laugh at the apprehensions of those who regard such a test as dangerous to the existence of the Union; by allaying these apprehensions, they would hope to be more successful in their plans. But, under God, our confidence is in the strong conservative element that pervades the masses of American citizens, the intelligent yeomanry who think and read for themselves, and who regard a man who aspires to power on the strength of a sectional division, as a future Arnold, or Cataline, or Burr."

As the Observer truly remarks, there is danger close at hand, and hundreds of prudent men begin to see it. The opening of Congress will reveal it. It is true that the hopes of our country are in "the intelligent yeomanry." They have twice withstood the assaults of British arms, but will they be able to stand up against another kind of warfare, when she comes with the honeyed words of love and philanthropy on her lips? Will they not now be seduced by flattery? The next Presidential election must decide this momentous question, and determine the fate of America, as well as the success of republican institutions.—[N. Y. Day Book, Nov. 14.

Nicaragua and the Movements There.

NICARAGUA, as by this time probably most readers know, is a tract of country almost as large as Missouri, lying between the parallels of 10 and 15 North, with Honduras and Salvador at its Northern end, and Costa Rica at its Southern. It has some 600,000 inhabitants of the Spanish-American breed, with a government which for two or three years past has been distracted by factions; one party being known as the government, and its opponents as the democratic party. Across the southern part of it, where it is quite narrow, and is known as the Isthmus of Nicaragua, has been established the route of the Nicaragua Transit Company, which transports its passengers to and fro between the ports of San Juan del Norte on the East side of the Isthmus, and San Juan del Sud on the West side. The government and people of Nicaragua would have been wise had they refused the right of way across their country to this or any other California company. The consequences have been such as under the circumstances might have been easily anticipated. Thousands of adventurers have passed through their country—have seen the invitations it held out to fillibustering enterprises—and have now begun to act upon their knowledge of these advantages. Walker, of California, a professional fillibuster, has, it is well known, entered the country under the pretence of an alliance with the democratic party, with every prospect of having established himself and his followers there permanently. As this enterprise will probably be attended by consequences of great political importance, its history so far has more than common interest; and we therefore present it to our readers in some detail.

On the 4th of May, General Walker with sixty-two men, taking passage on board the brig Vesta, left San Francisco for San Juan del Sud. The Vesta reached Realejo in June. From Realejo, Walker marched to Chinandaga, where he was joined by 120 men of the democratic party. Returning to Realejo, he embarked in the Vesta for El Gigante bay, en route for the town of Rivas. On the evening of June 28th, he reached Tola, a little town not far from Rivas.

"In Tola, General Walker encountered some thirty of the enemy's cavalry, who, it is presumed, were out as a picket guard, whom twenty Americans were detailed to attack, and in a few moments drove them from the town, killing eight, taking the captain prisoner, and seizing all their horses, arms and clothing. They quartered that night in Tola, and on the following morning, the 29th, marched on Rivas, where they arrived at about 11 o'clock A. M. On arriving at the outskirts of the town the democratic party mounted a hill, from whence they could see the enemy at a distance of about six hundred yards. The enemy opened a brisk fire, but the Americans took it coolly—advancing to within three hundred yards, when they gave them a volley and yell—rushing into town, the enemy making tracks in different directions. When the Americans got possession of the main street they could see nothing of the enemy—but could hear their bullets whistling by in quick succession. In a few moments the enemy made their appearance and vigorously attacked the American portion of the combatants, several of whom fell. At this stage of the proceedings the whole of Gen. Walker's native force decamped, leaving about fifty Americans to fight some seven hundred of the government troops in their own stronghold, having them surrounded on all sides. After about two hours' street fighting, Gen. Walker gave the order to take a position in two houses, one immediately opposite the other; they took possession and fought till about five o'clock, some of the Americans receiving wounds from shots through doors and windows, and when any of the enemy had the temerity to appear within range, they were sure to fall. At five o'clock Gen. Walker ordered a retreat, which was done with the loss of but one man. In the battle of Rivas the Americans lost but ten of their men in six hours' fighting; of the enemy upwards of 100 were killed on the spot."

On retiring from Rivas, Walker repaired to San Juan del Sud, which he reached on the 30th with his force much jaded. Fearing an attack here, and the Vesta not being in sight, he seized a schooner, the San Jose, and embarking his men, proceeded in search of his brig. Finding her after a few hours, he released the San Jose, and transferring his force to the Vesta, sailed back to Realejo. There he remained two weeks, at the end of which time he went to Chinandaga, where he continued two days, when he proceeded to Leon, the head-quarters of the Republican party, and the finest city in Nicaragua. There the democrats mustered one thousand men. Having remained ten days in Leon without accomplishing any movement of importance against the enemy, the Americans returned to Chinandaga, where they lay inactive two weeks. On the 9th of August they started for Realejo, where they were joined by one hundred and fifty natives, under the command of Gen. Valle. Subsequent movements are reported as follows:

"On the 11th they sailed for San Juan del Sud, where they arrived on the 15th, the enemy decamping as soon as they appeared. They remained in San Juan, recruiting, till the 2d of September, and at 12 o'clock on that night Gen. Walker, with his whole force crossed the Transit route to Virgin Bay. At about 10 o'clock on the morning of the 3d the alarm of the enemy's approach was given, twelve of our native guard fighting 550 of them, loading and firing in their retreat, in good style, until they were reinforced. The Americans received the enemy with a deadly discharge of rifles, when they broke and ran—hunted to cover by the riflemen. The result of this battle is illustrative of the superiority of the Americans and their arms over an enemy—there being only 175 Americans and native troops against an army of over three times their number.

"At the battle of Virgin Bay, the Americans did not lose a single man, and had but two wounded. The natives had five missing and three wounded. Of the enemy ninety were buried in Virgin Bay, and about forty wounded. Gen. Walker then returned to San Juan, where he arrived on the 5th. On the night of the 12th, a detachment was sent out as an ambuscade, about five miles on the Rivas road, where they remained till six o'clock through heavy rains. They then started for Virgin Bay, where they arrived at 12 M. On the following morning, the force returned to San Juan, where they remained until the arrival of the Cortes, with reinforcements, under Lieutenant Col. Gilman."

The Cortes brought down from San Francisco and landed at San Juan, Oct. 3d, another band of 35 adventurers, headed by Col. Gilman. There then took place a new organization of the whole cammand; a piece of artillery, obtained from the clipper ship Queen of the Pacific, was added to their means of offence.

On the 10th of October, all preparations having been made, Walker again proceeded to Virgin Bay, which he reached the next evening. The steamer Virgin lying here, Walker embarked his men on board of her and went up the lake (Nicaragua) toward Grenada, the capital of Nicaragua. At midnight of the 12th, the invaders landed four miles from the city. At dawn they reached the city, and advancing, with the "Western whoop," carried a barricade erected across one of the principal streets and gained possession of the plaza. Some fighting ensued, which resulted in the death of a native drummer of the Americans and of 15 of the enemy. But the city had fallen into the hands of the Americans. Subsequently, its fort, a mile distant, was taken after a short engagement by Col. Gilman and 25 men.

About the time of the departure of Walker for Granada, another expedition had set forward from San Francisco to join him. This expedition was under the command of D. B. Fry, and "the notorious Parker H. French." It included some fifty men. They left San Francisco, on the Uncle Sam, Oct. 5th, and reached San Juan on the 16th following. Proceeding to Virgin Bay, they took passage on the steamer Virgin, with 280 passengers, who had come through from San Francisco and were bound for New York. Arrived before San Carlos at the Southern extremity of the lake, they summoned the garrison to surrender. Capt. Erickson, with two oarsmen, were sent on shore to present the demand in a formal manner, and were captured. Shortly after several shots were fired from the fort at the steamer. Capt. Turnbull was then sent with twenty-five men to storm the fort, but returned without effecting anything. The steamer was then put back to Virgin Bay, and all her New York passengers relanded there at midnight of the 18th. Early on the following morning, (Oct. 19th,) French and his band left in the Virgin for Granada, there to join Walker.

Above, we have given all the incidents which connect French and his party with the main enterprise. But there were other incidents, including a couple of tragical episodes, growing out of French's movements, which remain to be told.

When the Uncle Sam arrived at San Juan, French and Fry detained the baggage and specie until he had got his command ready for crossing over to Virgin Bay. After some delay the treasure was reloaded and forwarded to the Bay, where it was placed on board the steamer Virgin; and having been returned to Virgin Bay, finally found its way safe to New York. Not so lucky however were all the passengers. On the return from French's fruitless demonstration on San Carlos, they were all put on shore at Virgin Bay. There, on the evening of the 19th, while the passengers were standing in and about the office of the Transit Company, a detachment of two hundred government troops from Rivas came into town, and without a moment's warning made an attack upon the passengers by firing upon them and charging upon them with fixed bayonets. This assault caused a grand stampede, most seeking shelter in the jungle. Upon being assured that there was no "fillibusters" there, that the persons whom they had assaulted were all peaceable passengers, desirous to go on their journey at the earliest opportunity, the officers ordered that no person should be further molested, and a general call was made for the passengers to "come out," and they did come out by slow degrees through that night and the next day.

At noon on the 20th, the steamer Virgin returned for the purpose of landing Mr. Moot, chief engineer of the Uncle Sam, and considering the great hazard in which their lives were placed, Capt. Scott took on board such of their number as had remained or found their way back to that place—about one hundred and seventy. She then proceeded to the Island of Omapota for the night, and returned again to Virgin Bay in the afternoon of the 21st, to take on board such passengers as might then have "come out." In the course of the night and day thirty-one had returned. Several had returned to San Juan with the intention of going to San Francisco on the Uncle Sam. So far as at present known, the immediate consequences of the assault of the 19th were five killed, five severely and three slightly wounded. Some are still missing, and from the shrieks and groans that were heard in the jungle, we may well suppose that several have died there of their wounds and exhaustion.

The most of the passengers were compelled as a choice of evils to go to Granada, which is near the Northern end of the lake, while their proper course homeward lay to the Southern end of it. Arrived at Granada, they saw Col. Wheeler, our Minister to Central America, who provided them with good quarters. On the 23d they found means of getting away, and reached San Juan del Norte on the 27th of October, having lost nine more of their number—four by cholera, and two by fever.

Besides the consequences of French's movements on the returning Californians, must be mentioned the consequence of the same movements to those who were on their way to California. As the steamer San Carlos, with the passengers from New York of the 5th, was on her way up the San Juan river, she was fired upon from the fort at San Carlos. The shot struck the steamer midships, killing a Mrs. White and her infant child, and severely wounding her son.

We new return to Walker. This "conquering hero" having obtained possession of the capital was hailed as chief by a large part of the population, and finally received the capitulation of Gen. Corral, the commander of the government forces.

Col. Wheeler, the American Minister, figured in the closing scenes. He, it seems, volunteered with his Secretary, to wait on Gen. Corral, who was at Rivas. There he was detained a day or two, and was not released until a demonstration had been made against that town.

All this time, Col. Kinney was lording it at San Juan del Norte on the Eastern coast of Nicaragua, calling for emigrant farmers and mechanics to settle on his domains there. But Walker it is reported looks with evil eyes on Kinney.

Again, the Nicaragua Transit Compaay is evidently complicated with Walker. With only one exception, no one among their responsible agents resisted the appropriation of their steamer, (the Virgin,) to the uses of the fillibusters.

Finally, we have a report that Great Britain re-asserts all her old claims on the Mosquito shore and Bay of Ialands; and is sending out a fleet into the waters of the gulf.

The foregoing shows the existence of very serious complications. Nicaragua is perhaps destined to be very shortly the theatre of much greater events than have yet happened there. As she has 600,000 inhabitants, nobody could object to her admission as a State into our Union on the score of deficient population. How soon she may be "knocking at the door" for admission, who can say!—[St. Louis Morning Herald.

Extract of Theo. Parker's Speech,

In Boston, on the Mob Anniversary of Oct. 21, 1835.

THERE were two great books which our fathers were bred on. One was the Bible; and though I am not a worshipper of the Bible, I must say, that whatever high praise be bestowed on Roman eloquence and Roman law, or on Grecian art, philosophy and poetry, none of them ever came from such a depth of manly heroism as those old Hebrew Prophets, Psalmists and Apostles spoke out of and spoke into. And a community which took the Bible for its one book, wept over it in sorrow, rejoiced over it in delight, prayed over it, and almost worshipped it—and that at a time, too, when priest and king forbid—would be likely to have some heroes among its sons and daughters. That we might depend upon—for the Bible does not lack spunk—depend upon it. If the Puritans did not take the Love of the New Testament, they did take the sternness, the unconquerable courage, that flamed in the Old Testament and in the New. That was the first book.

The other was a kindred work; it was Fox's History of the Martyrs. Mr. Fox was a noble man, who lived three hundred years ago, who, with unaccountable industry and untiring patience, ransacked all history to find out the story of men who had resisted the majority of the Christian Church, been wise and religious in advance of the clergy of their day, and suffered in consequence. There are three volumes of this history—very small type and very long pages; every one of them contains more matter than all six of Mr. Bancroft's History. That was the "profane literature" of our fathers, with whom the Bible was their sacred literature.

Now, it must not be supposed that a mob is much of an argument with men and women whose pillows were stuffed with Old Testament prophets, and whose cradle quilt was made of Fox's Martyrs. This mob of '35 was only fanning the flame. One of the fathers of New England said—I do not give his words, but his idea—When the ungodly are nearest to their hopes, the godly man is furthest from his fears. And I put it to these friends behind me, if they were ever further from their fears than twenty years ago this day? The woman who presided at that meeting, who would not listen to the Mayor's cowardly counsel, and those who were associated with her—why, "when the ungodly were nearest to their hopes, they, the godly, were furthest from their fears."

There were two different spirits present here on that day. One was outside, howling and yelling in the mob; the other was on the inside. The outside, it was the slave spirit. It is represented by two powers now—one, the Slave Power of the South; the other, the Money Power of the North. They had struck hands long ago. Their hands were joined in mutual insurance; they have not separated since. The Money Power of Boston is on the same side with the Slave Power of Richmond and Alexandria.

Since that day, see what triumphs have been made by the Slave Power. Then we had, at most, two and a half millions of slaves; there are three and three-quarters in the United States to-day. Since that day, see what has been done. Arkansas has been made a slave State; Mississippi a slave State; Alabama a slave State; Texas has been annexed as a slave State; the Mexican war has been fought in aid of the Slave Power; Utah and New Mexico have been made slave territory; slavery has been carried into California, and exists there at this day, on sufference, by the common law, though it is forbidden by the Constitution. We have passed the Fugitive Slave bill; eight-and-twenty men have been returned into slavery from Pennsylvania in a single year, and two from Boston. The family to which Mr. Phillips alluded had commenced their service of the Slave Power four years before the mob. In 1852, when Mr. Samuel Sewall, whose office is under our feet, asked the Supreme Court of Massachusetts not to allow a slave owner from Cuba to take his slave back, one of that same family, Mr. Charles P. Curtis, asked the Court to deliver him up; and the Court said, "Yes; let the slaveholder have his victim," and he took him.

I say that the Slave Power of the South, allied with the Money Power of the North, has made stupendous strides since that time, and just now it has marched into Kansas and Nebraska, and carries the ballot-box at the point of the bayonet, and puts down freedom with the edge of the sword. In Pennsylvania, you know what has been done and is doing. The mob of 1835 is now organized, and has the forms of law on its side. Mayor Bigelow and Marshal Tukey in 1851, Dr. Smith and Apothecary Edmonds in 1854, they are the mob of 1835, in an official dress.

A LATE writer says, no one can want food and remain virtuous. Making shirts at ten cents apiece would put the devil into the head of a Vestal virgin. Low wages and dear beef lead to more seductions than Byron's Don Juan.

THE MORMON.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, DEC. 1, 1855.

Hand Carts for the Plains.

THERE has, for several years past, been a desire among some of the Elders and Saints of the Church, to introduce hand-carts as a means of conveyance across the plains, for those of limited means. The idea at first excited ridicule, and its advocates were subjected, in many instances, to severe and caustic jokes; as time rolled on, however, like all other new, unpopular and unpalateable theories, the idea gained ground; prejudice gradually gave way, until it has gained sufficient force to present itself calmly and seriously before us, as a feasible and efficient mode of locomotion for many of the hardy and strong Saints to adopt in their transit across the plains to the valleys of the mountains. It has not been without its advocates in Deseret and the States; but especially has it found grace and become a favorite topic among the laboring classes of the English, Welsh, Scotch, German, Danish, and other European Saints. Those who have crossed the plains argue, that as Europeans, as well as many of the Saints in our eastern cities, have never been accustomed to the management of cattle, and as many of the oxen obtained on the frontiers are young, and either poorly broken, or not broken-in at all, and are difficult to be governed by the most competent hands; that, therefore, to those unaccustomed to cattle, there is a great amount of labor, toil, privation, loss of time, breakages, and other annoyances, consequent upon the management or mismanagement of those unruly animals; that the time and labor thus expended could be more usefully and efficiently employed in propelling a hand-cart; and that in the several weeks which are frequently expended in waiting for, and breaking cattle, in repairing breakages, and in other detentions, they would be as many hundred miles on their journey, and with less time, labor and annoyance than is generally experienced by the uninitiated at their outfitting stations. Others argue that it would be no more labor to perform a day's work at propelling a hand-cart than it would be to perform many other kinds of manuel labor; and that being more in accordance with the habits and pursuits of many of the stalwart laboring classes, it would not be uncongenial, and would be for them a most efficient mode of locomotion. The cheapness of the outfit is also introduced as an important item; thus affording the means of transportation to many, that it would otherwise take years, in some instances, to prepare for the journey. The strong desire and urgent solicitations of many of the Saints, in relation to this matter, have finally reached the ears of President Young, who has paid some attention to this matter. In a communication to us he has stated that he would not object to an experiment of this kind being tried, if judiciously arranged, wisely and prudently conducted, and sufficiently guarded against contingencies by the contiguity of ox or other trains, which, in case of trouble, would be sufficiently near to render timely assistance.

Having had this subject frequently urged upon us, at the suggestion of President Young, we have taken the thing seriously into consideration; and being at St. Louis at the time the late missionaries from the valley arrived, and knowing that many of them were men of experience in those matters, we appointed a committee from among them to investigate this subject, give us their opinion as to the feasibility of the enterprise, and if they thought it practicable to give in a report of what they thought would be a necessary outfit; the kind of carts; what amount of provisions, clothing, tents, &c., would be required, together with their weight; what number of cows, and of ox teams would be necessary as auxiliaries, and to give in a report of such a fit-out as any of them would be willing to take the charge of across the plains, giving them to understand that some of them might be chosen to conduct them. The following is the report:

PRESIDENT J. TAYLOR—Dear Sir: The undersigned having been requested, by you, to make an estimate of an outfit, for a hand-cart emigration train to Salt Lake Valley, have given the subject what consideration we were able, having had but little time for reflection. Our estimates having been made under these circumstances, may, perhaps, upon trial, be found to be more or less impracticable. We have had some experience in crossing the plains, and on foot; yet we are aware that there is a wide difference between walking across the plains by the side of a team and wagon and drawing the wagon yourself; that is as yet an untried experiment; still, we are of the unanimous opinion that it can be done with much less expense, and comparatively little increase of toil and hardship, than with ox teams, and that with a judicious selection of a pioneer hand-cart company, and careful and proper management of that company through, the ice, as it were, will be broken, and a way opened through which thousands of our brethren, who are not able to furnish themselves with an outfit under the present system of emigration; but who could nevertheless very readily fit themselves out for this mode, as well as a great portion of our Perpetual Fund emigration will hereafter move on to the Valley. We have crossed the plains several times, and with both ox and horse teams, and are of the opinion that, in addition to travelling, the labor of driving, herding, guarding, and attending to the teams, together with the care and anxiety necessarily experienced by every careful teamster, is nearly, if not quite equal to the additional labor of pushing or hauling a hand-cart.

We think that four persons of sufficient age and strength to walk the journey; say two men and two women, and perhaps an infant or two, would be safe in commencing the journey with the following outfit, to wit:

1 Tent,	20 lbs.
Flour,	240 lbs.
Bacon,	50 lbs.
Groceries, fruit, &c.,	30 lbs.
Bedding and clothing,	60 lbs.
Cooking utensils,	15 lbs.
Gun and amunition,	10 lbs.
Sundries,	10 lbs.
	435 lbs.

One team of three yoke of oxen and wagon to each fifty persons, or perhaps ten carts, to convey the sick, &c.; one cow to each ten persons, or say two carts.*

This estimate is made upon the supposition that the outfit will be procured mainly on the Missouri River, near Council Bluffs, and that the train will be met with supplies from the Valley, at the last crossing of the Platte, or at farthest, at Devil's Gate. In addition to the team above-mentioned, individuals having but little means may club together, if it should be thought advisable, and fit out an additional team and wagon, in which they may transport any additional freight or lighten their hand-carts at pleasure.

The hand-carts should, we think, be sufficiently narrow to run within the tracks of common wagons, to avoid the ruts. The hub should be six inches long and five inches in diameter, with two and one and a quarter inch boxes; the wheel at least four and a half feet across, the rim of good hickory, bent, not more than one and an eighth inch deep and seven-eighths or one inch wide. A broad, thin rim, although it would move over the sand and mud with considerable more ease than a narrow one, yet it would, we think, be very likely to split, inasmuch as it would project considerably beyond the spoke on each side; and if it was sufficiently thick to prevent splitting, it would be much too heavy, and when it dropped into ruts, as it must unavoidably do, it would require heavy lifting and pulling to extricate it. On the other hand, if the narrow rim is used, it should be as narrow as practicable, that it may meet with as little resistance as possible. The axle-tree should be hickory, two by three or three and a half inches; the bed about fifty-four by thirty-two inches, of quarter inch stuff, with three bows to support the cover, as low as possible, to avoid gathering wind.

J. LAVANDER,
J. S. SCOFIELD,
WILLIAM ALLEN,
H. BOWLEY,
C. KLINEMAN,
C. CHRISTIANSON.

The above report we should think to be generally correct, and will be adopted as a test, with perhaps some little variations in the details. While at St. Louis we had the first hand-cart made for emigration purposes; it was light and strong; its weight probably not more than sixty or seventy pounds; some little alterations were suggested, and another one ordered as a pattern. The wood of which it was made was well seasoned and tough, and the workmanship of the best kind. The wheels have light iron bands, which are thought to be cheaper and safer than any other kind, whilst their weight would not be much, as they are only about one and one-eighth of an inch wide and one-eighth of an inch thick. The cart was very much admired by the brethren, many of whom anticipated the pleasure of going westward with the first "Telegraphic Hand-Cart Express."

In regard to the feasibility of the enterprise, men, of course, differ in their opinions, and we must confess that on its first introduction our prejudices were strong against it; we thought it looked too much like hard work for men to perform labor that has hitherto only been considered proper for beasts of draught and burden; but like many others with whom we have conversed on this subject, the more we investigate it the more are we satisfied of its practicability. Our reasons are in brief, as follows: So far as men are concerned, we, upon reflection, are led to believe that they perform as hard labor in breaking cattle and making them way-wise, in hunting them up and yoking them in a morning, in travelling all day and driving team, in driving them from one to four miles to grass of an evening, and in guarding them, as they would have to perform in pulling or pushing a hand-cart, without all these other extra duties, which are frequently very vexatious and annoying, particularly to the uninitiated; several of the Elders and friends with whom we have conversed on the subject, who have conducted companies across the plains, say, that for the men, the hand-cart system would, in their opinion, be lighter labor than that of driving and taking care of cattle to those unacquainted with it; again, in regard to big boys and girls and frequently women, when their teams are light and loads heavy, they have in hundreds of instances walked nearly all the distance.

We do not here, however, present ourselves as its advocate; we mention the foregoing merely to show its possibility or practicability. We would not recommend them to those who have means to carry them in a more comfortable manner. We do not recognize anything very brilliant in dragging a hand-cart, and landing among strangers, brethren though they be, with the very limited amount of clothing and other absolute necessaries for the journey; but we think we discover in it barely a means of transit for thousands of limited means, many of whom have been, and are likely to be, detained for years from accomplishing a journey which is to them of the first importance, if they have to fit out in the ordinary manner. We discover also another thing, in the present mode of transit; men have frequently to obtain aid from their friends to assist them in their outfits, which to a high-minded, sensitive, though poor man, is very painful; but in this case they aid themselves by their own right arm; they depend on their own resources; they spend not another's wealth, but their own nerve and muscle; they are delivered from the humiliation of obligation, and are free as the antelope or buffalo that rove the plains.

With the above considerations, therefore, we are willing to make a test of this matter; but it must be done wisely, prudently, and judiciously, and be under the strictest regulations. We consider ourselves responsible for the proper carrying out of this enterprise; and whilst we are willing to counsel and assist the brethren who may desire to engage in it, we cannot admit of any irregularity. Men of experience and ability will be appointed to direct, and brethren will be expected to be subject to their counsel in all things. We do not consider it wisdom for every one to make or to obtain their own carts; they must be made of well-seasoned, tough timber, and by experienced hands, otherwise they will give way on the plains, and leave their projectors, as well as the company, in a very painful position. To prevent these breakdowns, and consequent disasters, we shall appoint proper persons to make them, as well as to superintend the outfit; and no person will be allowed to take more, and every person will be required to take as much as prescribed in the above bill, subject of course to some little alterations as above referred to.

The amount of weight for one cart is estimated at 435 pounds "for four adults and one or two infants." There should not be more than one infant to a cart; but it will be observed, that to every ten carts there will be three yokes of cattle and one wagon. The 435 pounds might be made to 450 pounds, and that addition made up in bedding or clothing, and then the wagon would carry 150 pounds from each cart, leaving 300 pounds as the net weight to be drawn, and leaving also the weight of 500 pounds unoccupied in the ox-wagon for the weak, sick or lame, in case of contingency. There is another important consideration, which is, that every day the load becomes lighter by the consumption of food, so that at the end of sixty days the weight would be lessened by about two hundred and forty pounds of provision from each cart; and about this time the company would be met by the teams coming to meet them from the valley. As a precautionary measure also, we shall have an ox-train immediately following the hand-cart train, to assist in case of an unforeseen contingency requiring aid.

It will be seen by the above, that these estimates are for a hand-cart company; but, if persons going by this company should wish other things taken, and have the means, they can either unite together and purchase an ox-team, or hire their luggage carried. They must not take more than the above in this company; neither is it understood that this will at all interfere with our former mode of emigration, which will go on as usual. We do not wish to cramp men, but to open a wider field, and afford facilities for emigration to a large class that have hitherto been deprived of the means of moving. We say to all Saints, go, if you can take clothing, merchandize, machinery, tools, books, scientific apparatus, musical instruments, gold, silver, precious stones, or any thing valuable, beautiful and useful for science, literature, the arts, or to ornament Zion, and can furnish teams to haul it—take it along; but if you have these things, and not means, dispose of them; you cannot take them with this company.

As we before stated, there is nothing very pleasing nor inviting about this journey; but we think, after all, it is better to go there among friends, poor, than to endure the buffettings of a cold, heartless world, in poverty. There are thousands of brethren there who have not only the means, but souls, who have passed through every kind of affliction, and know how to sympathise with others; and when they hear of a company or companies going in hand-carts, will come out to meet them, with teams and provisions, one-third of the way. The committee who made the foregoing report knew this, and based their calculations on it; and, furthermore, although the companies will be comparatively destitute when they arrive at the Valley, they may as well be poor there as here, and can as easily obtain supplies; if goods are high, so is labor, which equalizes matters. Again, we have bishops there, whose office is not a mitred sinecure, but whose business it is to look after and provide for the wants of the people, and who, previous to, or on their arrival, will make provisions among the various wards for houses, labor, &c.; so that the Saints, on their arrival, will find a home; and if not elegant or sumptuous, they will be welcome, and they will find themselves among brethren who are always ready to lend a helping hand to the honest, industrious, and virtuous.

Upon carefully reviewing the whole subject, therefore, and putting it to ourselves, although we should greatly prefer a carriage, or even an ox team, to that of a hand-cart, yet, if our family was here, and the alternative placed before us, of carrying the hod, wheeling and digging dirt, working on the highways, quarrying rock, digging, coal mining, and performing many other kinds of drudgery which many of our brethren are engaged in here, to obtain an outfit, we should say give us the hand-cart.

* The ten persons here referred to are eight adults and two infants.—[Ed.

To the Subscribers of the Luminary.

OWING to the absence of President Erastus Snow to the valley, and decease of our beloved and lamented brother—Professor Orson Spencer, who, it was anticipated, would attend to the editorial department in St. Louis, and from other considerations, it has been deemed advisable to suspend the issue of the St. Louis Luminary until such time as circumstances will admit of filling the editorial corps by appointment from the valley or the return of Pres. Snow. The yearly subscription for the Luminary is about to expire, and as there may be some who have recently subscribed, we shall make arrangement to supply them with the MORMON, so that no loss shall accrue from the former arrangements of Pres. Snow; we shall also insert the Luminary's unexpired advertisements, and request a continuance; and we respectfully solicit the subscribers of the Luminary and the Elders to exert their influence through the country to forward names and subscription to our office in New York, as early as possible, for the present and coming yearly subscription for the MORMON, that we may be able at the earliest moment, to supply the back and following numbers to the several subscribers, and be better prepared to commence the issue of another year.

Utah Cotton and Manna Sugar.

BY the October mail from Utah we received from the Church Historian's office a sample of cotton raised in the valley of the Santa Clara, in the southern part of the territory. We have submitted the sample to Mr. E. R. Young, cotton manufacturer, at Westport, Ct., who says it is "equal to our best Georgia upland," and that he can spin No. 60 yarn from it. Any who may be sufficiently interested can see the sample by calling at the Mormon office.

We have also samples of the manna sugar, gathered in the vicinity of Provo City, Utah Territory, during the past season, which the curious can see if they wish.

Arrival from Utah.

WE are happy to announce the arrival in this city from Great Salt Lake City, of Elders Asa Calkin, Joseph S. Scofield, and James Lavender, on their way to Europe.

These brethren are well and in good spirits. The party with which they came across the plains consisted of some twenty-six missionaries to the United States and Europe. They left Salt Lake, Sept. 10th, under the charge of Elder Andrew Cunningham, who conducted the company through to their entire satisfaction.

Owing to the absence of traders along the road who had retreated to Laramie on account of Indian difficulties, they had no opportunity of exchanging animals and a number of the company walked nearly the entire distance in order to preserve them until they reached the frontier.

Bro. Calkin informs us that they had an agreeable trip across the plains, occupying some forty-nine days to Council Bluffs City, Iowa. They report no difficulty with the Indians—saw them occasionally until they came to the Black Hills, where they had a visit from the Arapahoes who were very friendly, they saw no more until they came among the Omahas near the Missouri River. There was quite an excitement at Laramie over the Indian war, General Harney had left Ash Hollow some two weeks previous on his way to Fort Pierre, were he was calculating to meet the Indians and if possible decide the matter. It was reported that the Sioux were gathering in large numbers at that place.

The company overtook a small detachment of General Harney's command, returning from Ash Hollow to Fort Kearney with the prisoners taken at the Ash Hollow battle. The prisoners consisted of four or five squaws and about twenty-five small children.

Col. Sumner and command, who had been ordered from the frontier to join General Harney, had been as far as the Cotton Wood Springs some seventy miles above Kearney, had returned to that fort on account, it was said, of the loss of horses which were giving out and dying daily.

The Omahas were on a spree having just received their payment from the Government.

Bro. Calkin, Scofield, and Lavender left this place for Liverpool on the 28th of November, in the steamship Pacific.

The rest of their comrades are scattering through the Western States from Iowa to Texas.

THE editor of the Council Bluffs "Bugle" must be a smart fellow. He has performed all his quill and scissor duties, and with the help of two hands, raised seventy-five acres of corn, five of oats, four of potatoes, ten of wheat, five of buckwheat, one of melons, one of pumpkins and squashes, one of garden, and a half of millett. Council Bluffs will go ahead, if the rest of its citizens are one-quarter as efficient. —[New York Sunday Dispatch.

Yes! Joe is "some pumpkins"—more potatoes—any amount of wheat—and above all we "acknowledge the corn."

WESTWARD HO! We understand that there are now sold in this city, weekly, an average of fifty through tickets for the "far west." Many of our best men are taking their final leave of us.—[Lowell Courier.

FOR THE MORMON.

Letters upon Turkey.

NUMBER TWO.

IN thinking of the Turkish government, do not confound its political centralization with any centralization of the administration. The latter does not exist, and could not exist with diverse races, and laws, and institutions. Austria attempts this with but partial success: the whole confederacy—if that can be called confederacy, the parts of which are restrained by force—is rickety in the extreme. Every disturbance, however trivial, alarms her, not for the part, but for the whole. Our municipal institutions possess in themselves the power of becoming modifiers of the community; the only duty, even of military commandants, is to recive duties collected by municipal officers appointed by the people. Notwithstanding our almost uninterrupted wars, the people of Turkey are trained to far less extent than those of other countries. Did it enjoy peace, so as to allow the majority of laborers to work uninterruptedly, these taxes might be trebled or quadrupled. If there is to be another governmental rule, another system of policy, these institutions must be swept away. The aim of the French government is to centralize every thing. Would each community, under it, be left then as now to apportion its own burdens? At present, it matters little into whose hands the people pay their taxes, so that they are protected in their frugal and industrious habits, possessing, as they do, ample means of employment. Had the pachas of our provinces but fixed salaries, were these general government collectors and sub-collectors in connection with a civil tribunal of equity, to which cases in litigation might be brought; and had the people these, instead of the swarms of functionaries with which they are now assailed, each under bonds to secure a certain given amount, and making the surplus a matter of speculation for private emolument—all cause of complaint would be removed. The government of Turkey is fully as fit to institute such a reform as any other that might attempt to supercede it. Powerful municipalities resisting but the slightest modicum of taxation, and weaker bodies, subject to a thousand harrassing vexatious imposts, afford the instances of apparent despotism seized on by those who declare our institutions are falling into decay, and who are behind the spirit of our institutions. Is there any country in the world where moral sanctions are held in such high repute? and consider the effect of these when applied to a principle of government. We want, as does every system in the course of time, from the tendency of all that is human to become disorganized, reforms—but these reforms must be simple, practicable, and advantageous, both to government and to the people. And what institutions possess in themselves such principles of permanency as the municipalities of which Turkey may be said to be composed, which have been rooted for centuries, and sprung out of Arabic foundations. The Janissaries, the secret police, who years since were destroyed as a body, were the agents who wrought acisms in our midst, and entailed on the country its full disasters. You will say that our destruction as a nation is being hastened on by war and bloodshed. Yet, granting this unanswerable argument, we still exist, and perishing we still are reproduced. We cannot perish but by annihilation, by extirpating the very root of the Osmanlis. Ambition might provide to other powers the temptation, but supposing the possibility, wherein is the qualification? In its government? What a favorable contrast does that of Turkey present, as compared to any of Europe? Here there is no masked tyranny. The tyranny decried at, when experienced, is made evident; it is incapable of being hidden. The people appeal to few only when wronged—the supremacy of moral conviction as to what is in itself great—giving, at other times, the rule of action; and wrong is exposed only to be rectified. Is this so in the courts of Europe? There, wrongs are often unsusceptible of remedies. To the acute minds of the people of Turkey—minds nurtured by these municipalities, allowing differences of opinion, and giving weight to expressions of conviction—the remedy can be pointed out, and nothing appears to prevent its application. Amidst so many races, each with its own instinctive national characteristics, there will be manifold, at times undeniable, tyranny, but this tyranny is neither constant nor systematic. It is some arbitrary act, in respect to which some individual, casually in possession of power, has taken advantage of, for a temporary purpose; it constitutes no precedent, and its systematic repetition would entail his own disgrace. Turkey has no privileged classes. Its municipalities, linked together by a commou interest—an interest not for the enjoyment of some vague national feeling, but from higher and more intelligent considerations, perceptions of material interests, the desire to enhance the continuance of administrative privileges, and a moral consciousness, whatever evils are occasionally entailed, belong rather to the common lot than to municipal organization—constitute its tower of strength. Be not deceived. These must of necessity, in any occupation of the country, be swept away. But our "bigotry," and our "exclusive laws!" Read Turkish law in what light you will, and you will find it is only appealed to in the clashing of the interests of different municipalities to establish a right or avert or rectify a wrong. There is necessarily never any great complication of interests. As to differences of religion, what laws shall control the feelings engendered by this; and has any more favor or goodwill been expended between different classes of religionists in Western Europe, where more material interests were not united? Witness the political position of the Catholics of Great Britain previous to the passage of the Emancipation bill. Passing from a religious footing, this religious feeling takes in other countries in a political line. With ourselves we have no vast political systems in operation on which to divide opinion. Justice is all we look for, not political theory; justice we receive, and complain only when it is interfered with. "A State," says Achman Thasar, "is prosperous when justice is administered impartially, and when the police is good. A sovereign cannot administer justice without soldiers; soldiers cannot be procured without money; money can only be procured if the country flourishes by good government; and consequently, a sovereign can only reign by justice. We are regarded, to be sure, as a privileged class, and regarded, through religious animosity, with disdain; but can all our acts be received as oppressive; and the municipalities existing under our rule, as offering, in their highest development, only a passive resistance to our oppression, when our strong arm has served to save this country from continuous anarchy, in which all right would have been confounded, and it would have been made the prey of more crafty and designing powers, that would have subverted the freedom of these several constituencies, and under one plea or another, entailed on us their uniform but complex system of rule, which, with the destroyal of individuality, would have crushed out the national life.

FOR THE MORMON.

Russia and the Russians.

THE best apology given for the Crimean war—or shall we not say for the Crimean disasters?—an apology still irresistably maintained, was that on this peninsular, the southern extremity of the Czar's dominions, Russian resources were destined to be sapped and Russian strength exhausted. Even now it is declared, that except for a point of honor, the withdrawment from the Crimea of all the Russian forces is expedient on all military grounds. As though to enforce this view, and to indicate the certainty of the conquest of the peninsular by the allies, we are informed that the Russians lack everything but food; whilst ten days after this assertion, and embodied in more recent telegraphic despatches, we learn that at Karabelnai, a citadel out of the direct route, were found immense supplies of clothing.

Looking to the geographical character of the Crimea, to the fact that any military more, to be effective, must be simultaneously made from three points towards Simperopol, each lying through mountain passes; when, above all, the success of all three expeditions is necessary to the sought-for result, and the failure of any one jeopardizes, together with itself, the remainder, we may well balance probabilities in favor of Russia. To these considerations may be added the powerful party in England, hourly gaining accessions of strength, where, in favor of peace, the financial embarrassments already entailed, the little understanding of the question possessed by the people of England or France, and the little probability existing of any permanent union between them, their national interests, or rather whose national objects of ambition are so widely dissevered. The confession of those least acquainted with the Russian people, and who have regarded them in a comprehensive, statesman-like view, has been, that what most they needed for further education was war on a grand scale; the invariable testimony being, that such a war, appealing powerfully to their nationality, and spurring them on to appropriate to themselves all the improvements of science, would rapidly advance them in the van of nations, there being nothing in the Russian rule repugnant to such development. As to liberal ideas, of what avail would be the least liberal ideas of western Europe to a country, the first condition of whose progress is unity. Even now its races are too far dissevered. Each year they are being brought more and more together. Possibly the greatest disasters which could befall them would be the erection of the different portions of southern Russia into separate and independent kingdoms. It is likewise to be remembered that Russia, so despotic in the north, becomes more liberal as it approaches the south, according with the prepossessions, habits, bearing and temperament of the people. How different the bearing of the people of St. Petersburg and those even of Moscow, where the blended architecture of the east and west is the type of their proud sense of the dignity of man, united to an intelligent acquiescence in a central authority.

Russia has always been noticeable for taking advantage of that which other powers have done. Syria would, ere this, have belonged to France, but that Mehemet Ali, whom the acts of French agents had incited to revolt, was encouraged by Russia to possess himself of that country, instead of Barbary, a result which has given to the Syrian government practical independence of the Porte, and removed it from the tutelage of France. The history of her diplomacy affords innumerable instances of such acts. Hers it is to take into consideration every interest in any way to be modified or affected by a given move; intelligence and keen sagacity reigns in her councils—undiverted, while so engaged, by any sinister prejudice; she has patience, the all-essential element in the consideration of movements depending on so many combinations; the issues prove her wisdom. She appropriates, in like manner, to herself the men of science; introduces into her dominions, in tangible personality, all that freedom and enlightenment have elsewhere served to develop. What though she may fail of establishing, unassisted, and by virtue of indomitable energy and enterprise, vast engineering establishments, she will invite into her kingdom the men standing at the head of the sciences, and Muscovite ingenuity shall be found willingly to follow their dictation. Thus she appropriates, in a day, to herself, the best fruits of foreign toil; thus she tempts into her service those who embody the practical results in science and in art that distinguish the present day; and thus nations, merely depending on the possession of superior skill, will, in any permanent contest with her, be of necessity overmatched. Russia profits by every error they commit in peace or in war, and weakens them just in the proportion that she gains new accessions of strength.

Correspondence.

From our California Correspondent.

SAN BERNARDINO, Oct. 24, 1855.

BRO. TAYLOR—Dear Sir: I have looked with considerable interest on the position you and others have taken in the world, or rather in the States; as heralds of our principles and faith you are almost alone, in the midst of enemies, and those, too, who boast of being equal, if not superior, in intelligence, learning, and talent, to any in the world. Our enemies are something like the Chinese pirates, who, when too closely pursued to be able to defend themselves in the ordinary way, threw "stinkpots" on their English and American pursuers; so with our enemies; when they fail to contest the truth by fair and honorable means, use the "stinkpots" of slander and misrepresentation.

A special conference was held here last June, for the purpose of taking into consideration measures to raise means to pay the balance due on our ranch, and also to proclaim the gospel throughout the State; accordingly, about eighty Elders were sent, and Bro. Lyman went to the upper part of the State, and C. C. Rich remained at San Bernardido until about the 10th of September, when Bro. Rich went to San Francisco; they returned about the 12th of October, together with the Elders who were sent to preach.

The Elders came across a great many old Mormons, scattered through all parts of the State, and they stirred many of them up to a remembrance of their former covenants, and many families have already arrived in this place, and many more are expected here before spring; and although our Elders did not baptize many, they received benefits themselves and benefitted brethren who had become cold and entangled with the world.

There are several of our brethren here who have been on foreign missions, Brothers Hugh Findlay, William Frotheringham, and Robert Owens, from the East India mission. Brother Burr Frost from the Australia mission, and Brothers Reddin A. Allred, Ephram Green, and James Keeler, from the Sandwich Islands. Eleven of those who were baptized in India have landed at this place, which are the first from Asia, also a company of Saints came with Bro. Frost to this place from Australia, they were shipwrecked at the Sandwich Islands and part of the company are at the islands yet.

We are also looking every week for another ship to land at San Pedro, with Saints from Australia, the work is progressing on the Islands and Saints rejoicing and Babylon howling because they cannot hinder it.

We have our evils to contend with here as well as Saints have elsewhere, there are a considerable number of the disaffeced here who are making efforts to sow corrupt seed and destroy the good, and they have increased for two or three years gradually until it is begining to show its head in our midst, but I hope that those who are gathering from abroad by our Elders will prove themselves Saints and keep a preponderance in the favor of the truth. Brother A. Lyman and the Elders before mentioned will probably leave for the Salt Lake to-morrow accompanied by several others for the same destination, Brother Lyman and Rich are in good health, Brother Rich will remain here this winter.

A conference was held here last Saturday and Sunday, a much larger assembly was together than ever met here before, and a good spirit and feeling was manifested during the meeting.

The Salt Lake mail arrived last night, the only news of importance was brought by the mail carriers, who state that they met an express from the Elk Mountain settlements, who told them, that the Indians had attacked the brethren of that place when only sixteen of them were at home, and killed three of them and wounded one, they lost all of their cattle but six cows, all of their provision and the company was on the road to Sake Lake.

Yours in the Everlasting Covent,
D. M. THOMAS.

PRESIDENT JOHN TAYLOR arrived in this city on the 14th inst., in fine health and excellent spirits, and took his departure yesterday morning, making a visit of nine days: but considering the amount of business on hand all the time, it appears like so many hours. We are however, promised another visit in one or two months, or at any rate, as soon as circumstances will admit. In the meantime, we desire the prayers of the Saints, and the co-operation of all the faithful in this stake of Zion, that we may continue to discharge the duties and responsibilities devolving upon us with that righteousness, efficiency, and dignity, that becomes an Elder of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Elder Taylor's address to the Saints in the United States and Canada, which is published in another column of this paper, will be found highly interesting to the readers of the Luminary.—[St. Louis Luminary.

FATAL ACCIDENT IN BROADWAY.—The flag staff on the top of Wallack's Theatre blew down a few days since and striking Mr. Wallace T. Vaughn on the head, killed him almost instantly. His remains were conveyed to the eigth Ward Police Station House, and the Coroner notified to hold an inquest. The deceased lived at No. 111 Wooster street where he has left a young wife, who is just about being confined. He was a brass finisher, and a member of the Fire Department, belonging to Engine No. 4. Mr. Wallack has made a proposition to the Company to meet them at 11 o'clock to-day, to make arrangements for securing a maintenance for the family of the deceased.

Later From California.

Arrival of the Star of the West.

The Accessory Transit Company's steamship Star of the West, Thomas Miner, Esq, commanding, from Punta Arenas, Nicaragua, arrived at her dock early Wednesday afternoon with passengers, and dates from San Francisco to the 5th ult. There has been no sickness whatever during the entire voyage.

Owing to the completion of increased facilities for traveling on the transit route these passengers crossed the Isthmus and got on board the Atlantic steamship inside of twenty seven hours—and the excellently organized arrangements of A. C. Hutchinson, Esq., the agent now in charge of the naval depot at Punta Arenas—this ship was got thoroughly ready for sea in two hours after her arrival there from New York.

Since the sanitary visitation of the "northers," which prevail annually at this season in Nicaragua, the cholera has entirely disappeared, and The San Francisco Herald, in reporting the arrival of the steamship Uncle Sam—belonging to this line, with 680 passengers who left this port on the 5th of October—says, "not a single case of sickness occurred among them since leaving New York."

On the 5th instant General Corral, commander of the forces of the late Government of Nicaragua, was detected in traitorous correspondence with Santos Guariola, late a General officer in the legitimist army, notwithstanding he had so recently ratified the treaty of peace, and, with solemn ceremonies inaugurated the new government, and subsequently celebrated the union of the two armies by a public ball, in demonstration of his sincerity. He was promptly arrested by order of General Walker, tried by a court martial, found guilty of high treason and shot at the public plaza in the City of Granada.

The Commander-in-chief of the combined army has recently received considerable reenforcements of Americans, and is in firm possession of every city and hamlet, and, Napoleonic, he may announce "the Empire is peace."

Homeward, the Star of the West called at Key West on the evening of the 23d, for coal and left same night. On the 23d, off Sand Key, exchanged signals with the clipper ship Christian Cabot, steering west. On the 25th spoke the clipper Santa Claus of Boston, from New Orleans, bound to Liverpool, in lat. 30 12, lon. 79 40, wished to be reported.

H. B. M's brigs of war Arab and Espiegle were in the port of San Juan when the Star of the West left.

The Star o' the West brings California papers of the5th inst., and Central American papers to the 17th.

SUMMARY OF THE NEWS.

From the San Francisco Alta, November 5th.

Accounts of marvellous gold discoveries have been received from Tuolumne county, surpassing in wonder the early reports from Gold Bluffs. Table Mountain is confidently believed to contain deposits of gold exceeding in richness all former discoveries in this State. The mountain, or ridge, which is about twenty miles long and three hundred yards wide, is being tunnelled its entire length, and everywhere the "prospect" is extremely rich—in some instances a pound of gold being taken from a pan of earth. According to a local paper one hundred thousand dollars of gold were taken from a hundred square feet of earth, drawn from the bowels of the mountain. In the locality named there is work for thousands of men for years to come.

Business in the interior towns is represented to be quite brisk, and with the first rains a great increase is anticipated. The miners generally defer to the latest moment the laying in of their winter stores, and the country dealers also put off the purchase of large stocks as long as they can do so with safety. The first rains also furnish water to wash out an immense amount of gold from the heaps of dirt which have been thrown up during the dry season, and then both miners and traders are better prepared to make their purchases.

The anticipations of the rising of the Indians of the North have been more than realized. In Oregon, Gov. Curry has taken the field with one thousand volunteers, all well armed and mounted, and three hundred regulars are expected to co-operate with him. Several companies of United States troops will be dispatched from this city in the steamship California, which sails for Oregon on Tuesday next. Gov. Mason, of Washington, has also called for volunteers. The disturbances among the Indians extend to the northern part of this State, as well as throughout Oregon and Washington Territories. We have counted up in the various reports received, some sixty murders of whites by the Indians, and a reliable correspondent at Port Orford states that seventy Chinese have also been massacred. When bodies of whites and Indians have met in Rogue River Valley and that vicinity, large numbers of the latter have been killed. It is probable that somewhat exaggerated accounts have been received, but what is actually known is sufficient to produce the liveliest alarm for the safety of the whites scattered throughout our frontiers and the territories at the north of us.

The Novelty Distillery in this city was destroyed on the 2d instant. One of the large stills in the establishment exploded, communicating fire to the building, and causing its total destruction. Two men were killed and four others more or less injured by the burning fluid, which was scattered in every direction. Subsequently five firemen were injured (one of them mortally) by the falling of one of the walls. The establishment was erected at a cost of $300,000—a considerable portion of which was furnished by New York capitalists.

San Francisco was visited by a regular "norther" on Friday last. Several vessels at the wharves were some what injured by chafing and coming in collision with one another, but in no instance was the damage very material.

The Chinese are going from our shores. The discriminating tax upon foreign miners, under which the Chinese are now compelled to pay $72 per annum into the State Treasury, and which is to be increased $24 each succeeding year, will necessarily induce their speedy departure from the mines. The Challenger, which sailed on Thursday for Hong Kong, took four hundred Chinese as passengers.

During the past fortnight two whale ships have arrived at this port from the Ochotsk Sea, and have discharged about 2,000 bbls. of oil, and upward of 30,000 lbs. of whalebone. This latter article will be shipped to the East, as well as some of the oil. Farseeing men are looking forward to a day not very distant when the entire whaling fleet of the Pacific will rendezvous at this port. The arrangements are now in progress which will go far to produce this result.

The competition between the Steam Navigation Company and the "opposition" on the Sacramento River, has reached a point never before attained. Passengers and freight are carried at rates merely nominal. One or two steamboat collisions are noted, fortunately, however, without any damage to life or limb.

Mr. Julius Levy, of the firm of St. Losky, Levy & Co., has been convicted in the U. S. Circuit Court of smuggling sixty-seven cases Havana cigars, valued at about $30,000.

The misunderstanding between the contractors and the stockholders of the Sacramento Valley Railroad has been settled, and the work is now rapidly progressing.

Two men were executed at Coloma on the 26th ultimo. Crane, the spiritualist, convicted of the murder of Miss Newham, and Mickey Free, who was concerned in the murder of Howe and others. The scene was witnessed by 6,000 spectators, and among the number were many females.

The vote for Governor of California has been officially announced—Johnson 51,157, Bigler 46,220. Johnson's majority, 4,937.

The total valuation of real and personal property in the city of San Francisco is $32,076,672. In Sacramento City it is $7,617,785.

Two men whose names are given as Blake and Butler, were murdered at Vallecito, Calaveras county, on the 24th ult. They had been pursuing some horse thieves, and coming up with them a fight ensued which resulted as above stated.

A very general disapproval of the hanging affair at Columbia is expressed. In fact, Lynch trials and executions are becoming more unpopular every day.

The financial condition of the city and county of San Francisco, is still somewhat gloomy. The county has been liquidating some small claims at the rate of $2 scrip with 10 per cent interest, for one dollar indebtedness. Within the last six years there has been paid into the city and county treasuries nearly $11,000,000, and all this has been drawn out, while the present indebtedness, funded and unfunded, amounts to at least $4,000,000. The taxable property of city and county is about $33,000,000, and the population generally estimated at 55,000. Thus we have the material to recover from our pecuniary embarrassments, if a prudent policy is pursued hereafter.

The first anniversary of Oakland College was celebrated last Wednesday on the College ground. There was a large attendance of our citizens. The exercises were extremly interesting.

One Week Later from Europe.

The Collins steamship Atlantic, Capt. West, arrived on the 30th ult. She sailed from Liverpool on the 17th.

The United States flagship Jamestown, Commodore Crabbe, Lieut. J. F. Armstrong, commanding, was at St. Vincent, (Porto Grande,) on the 29th October, and sailed 30th for Porto Praya and the coast of Africa southward. Would be down the coast five to six months.

The Dale, Lieut. commanding Walbach, was at St. Vincent, (Porto Grande,) and sailed Oct. 31 to join the Commodore at Porto Praya, and thence to the United States. All well in both ships.

The master and crew of the late brig or bark Kalafat, of Bath, were on board the Dale for passage to the United States, the Kalafat having been sunk in the English channel by collision—said to have been from Cardiff for Pensacola. The master and crew of the Kalafat all saved and well.

There was no cholera or other disease at the Cape de Verds on the 31st October. The famine had already, however, become general in the Northern islands.

When the news of the action of the late Naval Board reached the African squadron, Lieut. I. J. Walbach was in command of the Dale, and Lieut. W. A. Bartlett in the full performance of his duties as First Lieutenant of the flag ship. These gentlemen, though "dropped" by the action of the "Board," bring home with them proud testimonials from their Commander-in-Chief, and the officers and men of the squadron in which they served. The Commodore ordered Lieut. Bartlett to the United States via England, with the despatches, (arrived in the Atlantic,) and Lieut. Walbach will probably return in command of the Dale, unless some officer should arrive to relieve him.

The war excitement in regard to the United States has entirely subsided.

The victory of Omer Pasha over the Russians is the most important piece of war news by the Atlantic. The following are the particulars in brief:

The Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Sublime Porte to the Ottoman Minister at London.

Constantinople, Nov. 15, 1855.

On the 6th of November the troops under Omer Pasha, with the water up to their armpits, under a terrible fire, forced the passage of the river Anakara, or Ouflour, in Georgia, which was defended by 16,000 Russians.

They attacked the Russian redoubts at the point of the bayonet, and carried them, despite the desperate defence of the enemy.

The Russian troops were completely routed, and fled.

Our troops captured five cannon, seven ammunition carts, and some forty prisoners.

The Russians left more than 400 dead on the field of battle, among whom were two superior officers and 100 subalterns.

Our loss amounts to 68 killed and 220 wounded.

Intelligence from the Crimea is to the effect that a sharp lookout was kept on the Tchernaya, as some Russian deserters had reported that Prince Gortschakoff would attempt a general action before making a retreat. The Russian army having been ordered to hold itself in readiness from an attack, the Allies reinforced their advanced posts every night, and supported them with field artillery. The Allies had completed some very important works near Fort St. Nicholas, and increased the number of batteries bearing on the northern forts. Prince Gortschakoff, reporting from the Crimea on the 5th ult., states that the Allies continued to occupy the valley of Baidar with two divisions.

The Post Amt Gazette of Frankfort says; All the powers invited to take part in the approaching conferences on the subject of the Sound dues have now accepted the invitation. France and England will be there represented, and it is certain that the United States of America will also send a plenipotentiary.

The day fixed by the Danish government for the opening of the conferences on the Sound Dues was the 20th ult.

The Danish government, it is stated, repudiates any intention of relinquishing its neutrality, or of entering into negotiations for altering the present law of succession.

Telegraphic.

Kansas Affairs.

Chicago, Nov. 24, 1855.

The Weston Reporter, of the 16th inst., confirms the late rumor in regard to the great excitement existing in Platte county, Missouri, concerning the return of George S. Park to his residence in Parkville. A meeting had been held in Platte City, to take measures to execute the threat contained in the resolutions which were adopted at the time of the expulsion from the Territory of Messrs. Park and Patterson. A committee was sent to Parkville to demand that Mr. Park be delivered up, but the citizens of Parkville refused to accede to the demand. Threats were made to burn and destroy the town, when the citizens organized in large force to protect it, and held a meeting, at which they resolved to defend it to the last. Here the matter rests for the present. The excitement is said to be of the most intense description throughout the whole region. Previous to adjournment, the Kansas Constitutional Convention adopted a clause giving 4th of July next as the time within which to remove all slaves from the Territory. No permanent capital for the Territory was located.

THE KANSAS CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

Chicago, Nov. 23, 1855.

In the Kansas Constitutional Convention, a schedule was passed, on the 10th inst., declaring that the Constitution shall be submitted to the people on the 15th of December. If ratified, it provides for the election of a Governor, Lieutenant Governor, State Auditor, Judge of the Supreme Court, Attorney General, and members of the General Assembly, on the third Tuesday in January; also that the General Assembly shall secure the enforcement of the sixth section of the Bill of Rights before the 4th of July next.

Acquittal of Capt. White, of the Ship James Chester.

Baltimore, Nov. 24, 1855.

Capt. White, tried under the charge of unwarrantably casting away the ship James Chester, was acquitted by the jury to-day without their leaving the box.

Arrest of a Murderer.

Boston, Nov. 24, 1855.

James McNally was committed to jail today charged with the murder of Charles S. Smith, a trader in Boston, about five years ago. After the murder McNally fled to Canada, where he escaped suspicion until within a short time. He was arrested in Toronto.

A Fortnight Later from California.

New Orleans, Nov. 24, 1855.

The steamship Daniel Webster, from Punta Arenas, Nicaragua, on the 19th inst., arrived here to-day, with California dates to the 5th inst.

The mining news is of an encouraging nature.

The Indians in Oregon were continuing their depredations on an extensive scale.

An additional force of two hundred men had left San Francisco to join Col. Walker, who still retained quiet possession of Granada, Nicaragua, and the transit route. He was daily receiving accessories.

On the 13th inst. Mr. Wheeler, the United States Minister at Nicaragua, formally recognised Walker's Government.

General Corral had been found guilty of treason and shot, and Espinoza had been banished.

Col. Kinney remained at Greytown, but fifty of his followers had joined the Walker party.

From Washington.

Washington, Nov. 25, 1855.

The Union has been authorized by the State Department to say that Mr. Buchanan has had two conferences with Lord Clarendon in relation to the West India squadron, at which Lord Clarendon had stated the squadron originated in no purpose unfavorable to the United States, but that its object was to protect British commerce against Russian privateers, three or four of which, according to particulars which had been received, he (Lord Clarendon) understood were fitting out in New York, one being nearly ready for sea, and one said to be a very large and fast vessel, especially intended to intercept British ships conveying Australian gold—with the purpose first, however, to capture one of the Cunard steamers. In justification of the statement, Lord Clarendon made reference to the case of the bark Maury, as represented in affidavits sent to him, and communicated by Mr. Barclay, the British Consul in New York, to Mr. Crampton, and by him transmitted to the British government, and at the same time laid before our government.

My former despatch having been, without authority, contradicted, I repeat on the best of information, that the present determination is not to forward copies of the President's message for distant newspapers, as heretofore, in advance of its delivery to Congress. It may not even be printed till that time.

Bloody Fracas at New Haven.

New Haven, Nov. 25, 1855.

A shocking affair took place in this city last night. Two policemen, named Thomas Cummings and William Grant, attempted to arrest a drunken man in an Irish grogery in Morroco street, when the gang present blew out the lights and fell upon the officers, beating them so severely that Cummings has died of his injuries, and Grant is not expected to recover. Cummings was sexton of St. Paul's church. He reached that building after the affray, began to make his fires for Sunday, and was found dead near the furnaces this morning. His skull had been fractured by a slung shot.

From Santa Fe.

Independence, Mo., Nov. 26, 1855.

The Santa Fe mail arrived on the 23d, bringing us but little news of interest.

The excitement occasioned by the election had not subsided ,and much dissatisfaction against the Gallegoes party, was felt, because of the manner in which the poll-books were returned—those of Valencia county being kept back, while the opposite party, to counteract this, seized the poll-book of Taos county, despite of all Gallegos's cries.

Mr. Otero has started to the States to attempt to arrest the Delegate elect. He is accompanied by Judge Brochus and Mr. Pelham, Surveyor-General, and will come in by the Southern route.

Gallegos came by this stage, on the Northern route.

The Indians have commenced their depredations again, despite of the treaties of peace, and as I have written fully by mail, you will see what effect these treaties have upon them. I expect the Mexicans are also in fault, for the Indians have come in and complained to the Alcaldes, and they, of course, keep silent on the matter.

The Salt Lake mail is not in yet, but looked for daily, as the weather here has not been unusually cold.

From Washington.

Washington, Nov. 26, 1855.

The dispatches by the Canada underwent examination at the State Department till a late hour on Sunday night, and to-day were officially considered, the Cabinet meeting an hour earlier than usual.

It is understood the representations of our Government regarding the alleged violation of the neutrality laws by Mr. Crampton have not been met in that straightforward manner our Government had a right to expect. Mr. Buchanan says the professions of friendship by the British Cabinet are more profuse than heretofore, and expresses the opinion that procrastination has been resorted to in the hope that something might turn up to relieve the British Government from its dilemma.

Judge Ellis has resumed the editorship of the American Organ. Here pudiates the slavery question as an element in the American party's constitution, and says that differences of opinion on it must be tolerated.

From Washington.

Washington, Nov. 29, 1855.

The contest for the printing of the House is getting interesting. Vespasian Ellis, of The American Organ, and Cornelius Wendell, formerly of Albany, an Adamantine Democrat, a practical printer, and a popular man, are the principal competitors. Stranger things have happened than Wendell's success.

The subject of the Mexican three millions is untouched. There are about one hundred and thirty members now here.

Intense excitement exists here in regard to the organization of the House. The Democrats give up all hopes of electing any officers. Mr. Forney will be the candidate of the Democrats for Clerk, and Mr. Richardson for Speaker. General Cullom, of Tennessee, it is considered sure, will be elected Clerk of the House. It is understood that the Democrats have resolved to vote first and last for the caucus nominees, refusing all coalitions with other parties. The Know Nothings and Whigs calculate also to gain some recruits from those Democrats who are on the anxious bench.

About twenty of the Know Nothing party held an informal meeting this afternoon for consultation as to the course to be pursued in the election of officers to the House. The Democrats and the Ohio delegation, severally, are holding private meetings to-night, interchanging views on the same subject. The Republicans are still working to concentrate all the opponents of the Administration in a general caucus for the nomination of officers. Several caucuses will be held on Saturday.

The National Hotel is the scene of considerable excitement. Upward of one hundred Members of Congress have arrived there, and intermingling with them are numberless politicians of every stripe, many of whom are office-seekers.

There is a rumor that Senator Douglas is dead, but it cannot be traced to any reliable source.

The President's Message will be put in the hands of the printer on Saturday. The only difficulty with the President about sending it in advance to the Postmasters of the principal cities for delivery to the press as soon as the Telegraph shall announce its presentation to Congress, is the anticipated delay in the organization of the House, and the possibility of its leaking out before it is presented to Congress. The agent of the Associated Press had an interview with the President to-day and suggested that the copies to be sent to the principal cities be directed to the Postmaster-General, which would prevent the seal being broken until authority is given by a dispatch from the Postmaster-General to do so. The President holds the suggestion under consideration.

Governor Reeder at Trenton.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 29.

Governor Reeder addressed a large meeting here this evening, on the advantages of Kansas as an agricultural country, of the wrongs of freemen in Kansas, and of the prospects of the future of Kansas, under fair and proper legislation.

Exciting News from Kansas.

St. Louis, Nov. 30, 1855.

We have accounts from Independence today, stating that three armed free Statesmen had attempted to drive Mr. Coleman a proslavery settler, from his claim near Hickory Point. Mr. Coleman killed one of his assailants, when a mob gathered to either drive him and other settler off, and then burned down their houses. The ringleader in this affair was arrested by Marshal Jones, and taken to Lecompton. Governer Shannon has called out the militia. Many citizens from Independence, Weston and St. Josephs, have gone to offer their services to the Governor to restore order. The people of Lawrence are in arms, and have five peices of artillery. A number of houses have been burnt in Douglas county, and several families driven to Missouri for refuge. The law and order people of the Territory are rallying in large number to assist the Sheriff in the execution of the laws. Sixteen houses were burned at Hickory Point, and several of its citizens were missing.

Massacre of an Entire Crew,

And Sinking of the Vessel by a Negro.

On Wednesday, Nov. 21st., the schooner Eudora, Capt. William Palmer, of Deer River, Conn., came to anchor in Long Island Sound, between City and Hart Islands. It was observed by passing vessels that she had a crew of four persons, including a negro cook.

On Friday forenoon the captain of an eastern schooner went alongside the Eudora in a small boat, for the purpose of borrowing some coal. He was met at the gangway by the cook, who, on being asked where the captain was, said he had gone ashore with some friends who had called for him. The negro was very willing, however, to lend the coal, and told the stranger that he might take all that he required. He seemed very anxious that the captain should leave the Eudora, and to shorten his stay as much as possible, the negro helped to fill the boat with the necessary fuel.

On Friday morning the negro was observed leaving the schooner in a yawl boat. He commenced sculling around City Island, and from his manner of steering it appeared as though he did not exactly know where to land. He kept close in the neighborhood of the dock, (built on this island,) and acted in such a manner that some of the islanders became suspicious. About 8 o'clock in the evening, and while the yawl boat was close beside the shore, the inhabitants of City Island were astonished to see the schooner heel over and sink. It was a bright moonlight night, and the mishap could be plainly seen from the shore. Two of the inhabitants, named Joshua A. Levinass and Charles McClennon, immediately put off in a small boat, in order to render assistance to those on board the sunken vessel. Before they came up to the vessel, however, they met the negro, who pulled for his life when he saw these men approaching. Suspecting that he had been guilty of some foul act, they immediately pursued him, and succeeded after a short but exciting chase in coming up with him just as he was about to jump ashore. The negro was then promptly secured and taken to the tavern. The yawl boat was then searched, and in it was found a carpet bag containing clothing, which afterwards turned out to have been the property of the captain, a canvas bag filled with many articles, such as knives and forks, tea, sugar, cheese, crackers, beef steak, a silver watch, a clock, and a portemonnaie containing $1.75 in silver and coppers. On the seats of the boat were found an axe, a large knife, a pair of razors, and a telescope.

In answer to inquiries made, the negro said his name was George Wilson, that the captain and crew had fled, and that he, seeing the schooner was about to sink, had left her for his safety, &c. He was kept in custody, and the next day search was made on board the sunken schooner, to find, if possible, some further clue to the affair. Bloody pillows and quilts were hooked up from the vessel, sufficient to show, beyond all doubt, that murder had been committed.

The negro subsequently partially admitted the deed, and again denied it entirely.

The supposed murderer has confined been in jail at White Plains.

Of the names of those on board the Eudora, beside Captain Palmer, there is but little known. One of the residents of City Island says he saw two brothers, named Willey, on board of the schooner on Thursday last, and he has no doubt but that they formed a portion of the crew.

Previous to Wilson's being taken to White Plains, he stated that he had been on board the Eudora about two months, and had made several trips in her to some port on Long Island.

No effort will be spared to raise the wreck, and recover the bodies of the dead. Arrangements are now being made to have a derrick brought to the spot; in which event, all that now remains in doubt will be cleared up, and what appears at present to be wrapped in awful darkness, will be made manifest as day.

And inasmuch as the most sacred of Heaven's laws has been so grossly violated, and the lives of human beings sacrificed to satisfy the glut of avarice or revenge, we cannot but hope that the offence may be visited with a righteous judgment.

The Fanatic's Dream.

Joshua R. Giddings, the Ohio hot-headed abolitionist, is reported to have given utterance to the following language:

"I look forward to the day when there shall be a servile insurrection in the South; when the black man, armed with British bayonets, and led on by British officers, shall assert his freedom and wage a war of extermination against his master. When the torch of the incendiary shall light up the towns and cities of the South, and blot out the last vestige of slavery. And though I may not mock at their calamity, nor laugh when their fear cometh, yet I will hail it as the dawn of a political millenium."

In this case, we are impressed that "the wish is father to the thought." But who can contemplate such an idea without a shudder; and who so traitorous as to believe that the negroes of the South, "led on by British officers," will ever "light up the towns and cities" with incendiary fires! Would the North look coldly on in such an event, and see their Southern brethren massacred, without an effort to suppress the insurrection and drive the British from the land! The picture of Nero playing on his harp, in view of a city in flames, is often quoted to inspire the mind with a sense of horror; but how tame is this picture when compared with the dream of the Hon. Joshua R. Giddings! There are few Northerners, we opine, who could be induced to play the part of a Nero, or of a Benedict Arnold. We therefore anticipate no such terrible consummation as that fondly hoped for by the Abolition philanthropist, who entertains so high an opinion of British freedom and the mercy and humanity of British bayonets. We trust the day is far distant when the cause of liberty shall be placed under the guardianship of the British Lion.—[N. Y. Sunday Dispatch.

Kansas.

The Free State Convention has done its work and adjourned. The new Constitution is to be submitted to the people on the 15th inst., and, if ratified, will be presented to Congress early in the session. The question of admitting or excluding colored persons from the new State is also to be voted upon by the people at the same time with the Constitution. That the majority will vote for exclusion we have no doubt. The Convention, by a small majority, refused to endorse the Kansas Nebraska bill, though they were tempted by intimation that such an endorsement would disarm the Administration, or at least secure the support of Douglas, Bright, and other prominent Democrats. A strenuous effort was made in the Convention to leave the slavery question open, or submit the question whether Kansas should or should not be a slave State as a separate article to the people. This proposal was voted down, it being well known, that it would only offer a pretext to Missouri to rush in and take possession of the polls, and thus plant slavery irrevocably on this disputed ground.—[Anti-Slavery Standard.

The case of Lewis Baker, indicted with Turner, McLaughlin, Morrissey, and others, for the murder of William Poole, was called on the 26th before the Court of Oyer and Terminer, Judge Roosevelt presiding. The whole day was consumed in an effort to impannel a jury. At the hour of closing, nine had been accepted. A severance was granted in the case, so that Baker is to be tried alone.

Corrected to Nov. 30.

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the trangression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The fourth is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the 'laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Bien-aimés frères, je désire, en commencant cette publication, vous adresser quelques paroles. Le Seigneur, dans sa bonté et sa miséricorde, a jugé convenable de restaurer au monde l'Evangile primitif, dans toute la simplicité, la beauté et la pureté qu'il avait autrefois, parmi les chrétiens des premiers temps, aux jours de Jésus et de ses Apôtres.

La lumière de la vérité a éclaté au milieu des ténèbres et de la corruption des hommes, en ce temps où le monde est déchiré par mille opinions contradictoires.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Si nous suivons attentivement l'action de Dieu sur le genre humain, nous trouverons que tous ces maux proviennent de ce que les nations et les peuples se sont éloignés de Dieu; et rien moins qu'un retour à lui ne peut arrêter la terrible tempête, calmer la mer furieuse, tranquilliser les passions capricieuses des hommes, et rendre au monde moral, religieux et politique, cet ordre qui règne dans la création physique de Dieu.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui rè gle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

C'est la religion que vous croyez et que vous enseignez, qui est destinée à restaurer l'homme et la terre; c'est elle qui ramènera les peuples à Dieu, qui les retirera du chaos moral, religieux et politique du monde, et les rassemblera en un peuple qui sera conduit et reconnu de Dieu; qui sera honoré devant les hommes et les nations; et qui aidera à établir et à développer le royaume de Dieu dans ces derniers jours.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaitraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? On devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours?

Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconque demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Evangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés!" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit!" Nous le faisons aussi. Eurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains, par la foi en Jésus-Christ!" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "l'espoir en la résurrection!" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ!" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.!" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.!" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions à son Eglise actuelle.

Nous demanderons ce qu'il y a d'inconséquent en tout cela? Lequel est le plus inconséquent, de croire et de pratiquer les Ecritures, ou de dire, nous les croyons et puis de les nier à notre organisation, à nos doctrines, à nos œuvres.

Mais des visions, des prophéties, des révélations n'ont-elles pas une tendance à conduire à l'enthousiasme et au fanatisme? Oui, les visions humaines et les délusions de Satan l'ont. Mais si le Seigneur eût pensé que ses visions et ses révélations fussent préjudiciables aux hommes, pourquoi les aurait-il données dans les anciens temps? Si elles doivent être préjudiciables de nos jours, certainement elles l'eussent été autrefois. L'enthousiasme, la folie et le fanatisme des hommes est une chose; autre chose est Dieu révélant sa volonté aux peuples pour leur organisation, leur stabilité, leur consolation, leur union, leur savoir, leur édification, et pour l'établissement de son royaume.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaitre Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Les philosophes ont scruté l'homme, la terre, les œuvres e la création pour trouver un vrai système, Ils ont tous eu leur jour. Ils ont introduit beaucoup de bons principes, mais quant à l'amélioration du monde, là, ils ont fait défaut. Leurs systèmes, quelque bons que soient plusieurs d'entre eux, sont bien loin d'embrasser l'objet désiré: "Ils ont été pesés dans la balance, et trouvés trop légers."

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaître que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence, ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les excès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lascivété, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votre lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

To the Emigration and Our Readers Generally.

We shall endeavor to be always prepared to impart the latest information relative to the best course to be pursued by Emigrants on their arrival in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

Our emigration have heretofore, almost exclusively, gone by the way of New Orleans, but will hereafter land in the Eastern cities, and one of the principal objects of establishing "The Mormon" is for their information, as well as all other emigration arriving in this country.

We shall take special interest in seeking out the cheapest, best and most convenient mode of conveyance from this and other points, as well as to observe the course pursued by agents in the accommodation for travelers on the routes, and make of "The Mormon" a directory, to which all Emigrants and Travelers may refer with some degree of safety.

A Card to the Saints.

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "The Mormon." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish, you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

ROUTE FROM LIVERPOOL
TO THE
GREAT SALT LAKE VALLEY:
ILLUSTRATED,
By a Series of splendid STEEL ENGRAVINGS and WOOD CUTS, from Sketches made on the spo from Life, in 1853, expressly for this work, by
FREDERICK PIERCY,
AND CONTAINING A MAP OF THE OVERLAND PORTION OF THE JOURNEY.
EDITED BY JAMES LINFORTH.

This highly and interesting Work will form a narrative of the Journey from Liver ool to Great Salt Lake Valley, and will give Historical, Descriptive, and Statistical Information respecting the places, and the Indian Tribes on the route, and in Utah Territory.

The mode in which the Latter Day Saints' emigration is conducted; a review o it from the commencement; and incidental instructions to emigrants, will constitute an early part of the Work.

The Statistical information will be drawn from the most authentic sources, and consequently may be relied upon. That portion of it which relates to the Latter Day Saints, will be particularly valuable, owing to the difficulty hitherto experienced by all classes in obtaining anything accurate, from the conflicting statements which have appeared from time to time, in a great portion of the public press.

Poetry.

On the Death of Elder Orson Spencer,

BY M. A. WALKER.

Departed Saint! the tender tear
Affection's gentle cheek bedews—
Of those who thy lov'd name revere,
And memory's thrill each throb renews.

But time, the softener of each grief,
Will calm the waves of filial love,
And to the mourners bring relief,
In kindest mercy from above.

Methinks thy purer spirit will
Oft hover round thy lov'd ones here,
And genial influence distil,
Though absent from this lower sphere;

Till a reunion sweet restore
To thee each sacred-kindred tie
Where separations pain no more,
Nor Saints (immortal) ever die.

Since faithful thou hast been to death,
A crown awaits, in sacred trust;
While labors here of faith and love
Are well remembered by the just,

Whose souls aspire to reach the road,
To trace the path thy feet have trod,
That they may find a blest abode,
And with thee ever dwell with God.

Editor of the News.

Sir: The enclosed correspondence not having appeared in the "People's Journal," I thought proper to present you with the rough manuscript, which you are at liberty to publish in your columns, if you think proper.

Yours respectfully,
GEO. A. SMITH.

Great Salt Lake City, }
20th March, 1855. }

Editor of People's Journal:

By the request of President Brigham Young, I have answered your letter to him, bearing date Sept. 18, 1854, of which the following is a copy:

"Dear Sir: We are publishing a history of all the religious denominations now extant, their rise, founder, articles of faith, statistics, &c.

We have published several from the most able pens in the country, and our object in writing this, is to solicit your aid in this matter.

To be brief, will you write us a history of your church, or "the Latter Day Saints," and oblige, which was long delayed in consequence of the irregularity of the mails, not one fourth of the mail matter due to this city having arrived for the last five months, which is owing to some neglect or derangement, we suppose, of the Post office department.

I have taken considerable pains to answer (from the best authorities at hand) as briefly as so extensive a subject could well be considered. I wish you to publish the History entire. If you do not choose to publish it entire and unaltered, please return it to me, as the Editor of the News has already requested me to furnish a copy, which I refused, as I intended it for yourselves.

Be pleased to furnish a couple of copies of the number in which it is published, one to Gov. Young, and one directed to the Historian's Office, and oblige,

Very respectfully yours,
GEO. A. SMITH,
Historian of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Joseph Smith, jun., was born in Sharon, Windsor county, Vermont, 23d December, 1805; moved with his father to Ontario county, New York, and in the year 1819 resided in Manchester: he was by occupation a farmer, and his advantages of education were limited.

At the age of 15 he began to reflect seriously on the necessity of being prepared for a future state of existence. He went among the different denominations that existed in that State, and his mind became perplexed with the clashing and contention which existed among those who professed the name of Christ.

Disgusted with the confusion which his researches disclosed, and encouraged by the promise of Saint James: "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God who giveth unto all men liberally and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him," he retired to a grove, and in earnest prayer besought the Lord to reveal the way of salvation; and while thus engaged, he beheld two glorious beings wrapped in a brilliant and glorious light, who informed him that all the religious sects of the present age had departed from the ancient gospel of Jesus Christ and his apostles, with its gifts and priesthood, which should be made known to him in due season: many glorious things were shown to him in this vision.

On the 21st September, 1823, while engaged in prayer, and striving to exercise faith, the room was filled with light surpassing that of noon-day, in the midst of which was a person whose countenance was as lightning, and yet so full of innocence and goodness, and of such a glorious appearance as to banish all apprehension: he was an angel commissioned of God to inform him that the covenants with ancient Israel touching their posterity should soon be fulfilled, and that the great work to prepare for the second coming of Christ should now commence; the fulness of the gospel be made known to all nations; that the native inhabitants of America were a remnant of Israel, who had anciently enjoyed the ministry of inspired men; that records containing their history had been preserved to the period of their national degeneracy, and that these records had been concealed in the earth, and the Lord promised they should soon be revealed.

On the following day, the angel returned and showed him the spot where the sacred record was deposited. A small rock, projecting a little above the earth's surface, covered a stone box; he opened it and beheld the plates.

The angel said, you cannot at this time obtain them, and when they are obtained, it must be by prayer and faithfulness in obeying the Lord; they are not deposited here for the sake of accumulating gain or wealth, or for the glory of this world; they are of no worth to the children of men, only for the knowledge they contain, which is the fulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ, as it was given to the ancient people of this land. The stature of this personage was a little above the common size of men in this age; his garments were perfectly white, and they appeared to be without seams.

Much instruction was given by the angel to Mr. Smith during a period of four years, and on the 22d September, 1827, the angel of the Lord delivered the records into his hands; they were engraved on plates which had the appearance of gold; each plate was not far from 7 inches by 8 in width and length, not quite as thick as common tin, beautifully engraved on both sides in reformed Egyptian characters, bound together in a volume as the leaves of a book, fastened at the edge with three rings running through the book: with the records was found a curious instrument, called by the ancients the Urim and Thummim. By the gift and power of God, through its means, he translated the record, which is the Book of Mormon. The first edition of 5,000 copies was published by Jos. Smith, at Palmyra, New York.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was organized in Manchester, New York, on the 6th April, 1830, and was then composed of six members, who were baptized by immersion under the hands of Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery, who received the apostleship by commandment from God, and the administration of heavenly messengers, and were the first elders of the Church.

The Book of Mormon being printed, the church began to attract the attention of newspaper editors, who immediately opened their artillery against Joseph Smith, and the handful who had received his testimony. The tocsin of persecution was immediately sounded, and continued to increase, with scarcely any cessation, during his whole life.

Through the labors of Joseph Smith, Hyrum Smith, Oliver Cowdery, and other elders who had been ordained, branches were established in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, the British Provinces, and New England States.

A large branch of the Church was established in Kirtland, Geauga county, Ohio; and the spirit of persecution pursuing all the branches to a very great extent, the Saints commenced gathering to Kirtland; and soon after Joseph Smith, with several of the elders, visited Jackson county, Missouri, and commenced settlements of the Saints, Upper Missouri being at that time but thinly inhabited.

In June, 1831, a conference was held at Kirtland; a number of the elders were ordained high priests by Joseph Smith, he being president of the high priesthood and of the whole Church, being called of the Lord like unto Moses, a Seer, Revelator, Translator, and Prophet; and it was his privilege to have two counselors, to act as assistant Presidents, which form the First Presidency of the Church.

In June, 1832, W. W. Phelps & Co. commenced printing a monthly periodical at Independence, Missouri, devoted expressly to the spreading of the principles of the gospel, and publishing the revelations of God to the Church.

A Mercantile house was established by the firm of A. S. Gilbert & Co., and several hundreds of farms were opened, and mills and many extensive improvements commenced.

The elders continued to preach with unabated zeal, notwithstanding they were constantly subjected to abuse.

On March 25, 1832, Joseph Smith and Elder Sidney Rigdon were dragged from their beds at midnight, in the town of Hiram, Portage county, Ohio, daubed with tar and feathers, and severely injured. Aqua-fortis was poured into President Smith's mouth, and he was held by the throat until left for dead. One of his children was sick with the measles, and being in bed with him at the time of the outrage, was thereby exposed to the night air, and died almost immediately: she may, therefore, be called the first martyr of this dispensation.

In June, 1833, a commencement was made for the building of a Temple in Kirtland.

On the 22d July, 1833, the printing office of W. W. Phelps, at Independence, Missouri, was surrounded by a mob of about fire hundred men; the press was destroyed, the type pied, and the house, a two story brick building, pulled down. Loss of property, $6,700. This mob violence continued from day to day.

Edward Partridge, the presiding bishop of the Church, was publicly stripped, and tarred and feathered on the public square, in the presence of several hundred spectators.

Mr. Charles Allen, a member of the church received the same compliment; the tar was mixed with some corrosive substance.

The store of Gilbert and Whitney was broken open, their goods promiscuously scattered in the streets—lives threatened, individuals whipped and a great number of houses unroofed by parties visiting the different settlements: upwards of two hundred houses were destroyed by fire, and 1500 persons driven from their homes and scattered into the adjoining counties, principally into Clay, without any means of subsistance, a great number having perished from wounds, bruises and exposure.

As the Saints were scattered along the banks of the Missouri River, a plot was laid by a party of the mob to murder all who should be left on the Jackson side. On the morning of the 13th of October, very early, they beheld the wonderful meteoric phenomenon of the stars falling from heaven, which caused the hearts of the Saints to rejoice, and the mob to abandon their purpose; some of the mob were so affected by the sight that they wept believing the day of judgment at hand. I am sorry to say that clergymen of various denominations sanctified these deeds of cruelty by their presence and participation.

In the fall of 1833 a printing press was established in Kirtland, Ohio, where Oliver Cowdery commenced the republication of the Evening and Morning Star.

In 1834, Joe Smith, accompanied by 205 men, visited Clay County, Missouri, and attempted to bring about a reconciliation with the people of Jackson. His Excellency Daniel Dunklin, then Governor of Missouri, notified the Legislature in his annual message, that the means of enforcing the laws, both civil and military, were so insufficient that the Mormons could not be protected in the state. He had previously written to Col. J. Thornton, under date of the 6th June, 1834 as follows: "I am fully persuaded that the eccentricity of the religious opinions and practices of the Mormons, is at the bottom of the outrages committed against them."

By industry, economy, and prudence, the Saints in Clay and the adjoining counties had begun to acquire wealth and to enjoy prosperity, and were enabled to purchase considerable tracts of land, this aided the Jackson county mob to raise an excitement in Clay county. Public meetings were held and the Saints notified by their official resolutions, that they must cease to make improvements in Clay county, or to purchase other lands; and required them to leave the county of Clay. A location was accordingly made in a new, uninhabited, naked prairie county, destitute of timber, by the unanimous consent of the mob, who said it was fit for nothing else but the Mormons. The Saints of Clay county purchased the lands of the government, and moved immediately into Caldwell.

In 1834, Joseph Smith, was set apart as Patriarch over the whole Church to bless the fatherless.

On the 14th February, 1835, Joseph Smith, by a commandment of God, selected and ordained Twelve Apostles, to be special witnesses in all the world of the fullness of the gospel, and to preside over the Church in all cases when the Presidency were absent; and during the year 1835, they visited all the States east of Ohio, and also the British Provinces, comforting the scattered branches, preaching the gospel and building up new branches. Many hundred were baptised during the season. About the same time, he also ordained a quorum of seventy elders for the same purpose, many of whom devoted the most of their time to travelling and preaching, going forth "without purse or scrip."

The Temple in Kirtland was so far completed as to be dedicated on the 27th March, 1836, 416 elders being present in a general council on the evening of the dedication. This Temple is a stone building 80 feet by 60, the walls 50 feet high, and the tower 110 feet high. There are two main halls 55 feet by 65 in the inner court, four vestries in the front, and five school rooms in the attic. The building is well finished, and a fine specimen of architecture.

In June, 1837, Heber C. Kimball, Orson Hyde, Willard Richards, and Joseph Fielding, with three others, started from Kirtland on a mission to the British Islands. They arrived in England on the 20th of July, without a farthing in their pockets, and on the 23d commenced preaching in Preston. At Christmas the Church had extended from Preston to Penwortham, Longton, Southport, Eccleston Whittle, and Hunter's Hill, the number of members amounting to about one thousand.

In 1837 the greater portion of the Saints in Kirtland, moved to Missouri, and settled in Caldwell, Daviess, Clinton, Carroll, and Ray counties. The county of Caldwell had been organized, and the city of Far West established.

In December the printing office in Kirtland was destroyed by fire, the work of an incendiary.

In the spring of 1838, the emigration to Missouri continued, most of the Saints leaving Kirtland. The foundation of a town was laid on Grand River in Daviess county, called Adam-ondi-ahman. Several hundred thousand acres of land had been entered at the land office, and some two thousand large and flourishing farms opened thereon. A village was also commenced in Carroll county, on the Missouri river called De Witt.

Caldwell County in three years, from a naked prairie, had become one of the most flourishing counties in the State. A foundation was laid for a Temple at Far West, 110 feet long by 80 wide, a printing office established, and a monthly paper called the "Elders Journal" published. In August 1838 at an election held in Galatin, Daviess County, a barrel of whisky was rolled out, and the crowd invited to drink heartily, and prevent the Mormons from voting. A riot ensued, which ended in knocking down three Mormons—(eight only being present)—and in 23 of the mob being carried off in a degree helpless. One of the Mormons was stabbed. Immediately the tocsin of Mobocracy was again sounded, and several hundred men assembled at Millport, swearing extermination against the Saints. They were soon dispersed by the interference of Gen. Donophan, but it was only to shift their quarters. They removed to De Witt in Carroll County, and drove out its inhabitants, robbing them of their property. Many of the Saints perished from want and suffering, and the remnant escaped into Caldwell.

The mob again renewed their operations in the County of Daviess, filling the country with false reports; but finding their undertaking likely to fail, Lilburn W. Boggs, then the Executive of Missouri, issued an order for the extermination of the Mormons from the free Republic of Missouri; and ordered Major General Clark, with 13,000 men to proceed immediately to Far West, and put the cruel decree into execution. This force immediately proceeded to the settlements of the Mormons; who being but few in number comparatively, and finding themselves opposed by the executive order of the State, and consequently by the form of legal proceeding, made no resistance to this military force, although they would have fought the whole of them had they continued in their true colors as a mob. Under pledges of peace and protection, men, women and children were indiscriminately massacred, women ravished, houses plundered, horses stolen, cattle and hogs shot in their pens for sport, corn fields robbed, thousands of acres of grain destroyed by turning horses into the fields, and fences burnt up. Several hundred persons were driven in a defenceless condition into a hollow square of armed fiends, and compelled to sign away their property to the Republic of Missouri, to defray the expenses which had been incurred in committing these crimes. About seventy of the brethren were selected for the purpose of execution: public notice was given that they would be put to death, and the residue permitted to go home, take their families and leave the State immediately on pain of death.

On the 1st of Nov. 1838, Joseph Smith and his comrades were tried by Court Martial, without their being present, or allowed to make any defence, and sentenced to be shot. The order for their execution was given by Major General Lucas as follows:

Brigadier General Doniphan:—Sir, you will take Joseph Smith and the other Prisoners into the Public Square of Far West, and Shoot them at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning."

Doniphan possessing a knowledge of Law, and having a good share of humanity, replied—"it is cool blooded murder! I will not obey your order; my Brigade shall march for Liberty to-morrow morning at 8 o'clock. And if you execute those men, I'll hold you responsible before an earthly tribunal, so help me God!"

Thus the lives of the Prisoners were saved. The scene that followed beggars description: language is inadequate to describe it. Immagine fifteen thousand people, embracing all ages, sexes, and conditions, driven in midwinter from every thing they possessed; destitute, hungry, naked, homeless, and friendless, across treckless prairies, scattered two and three hundred miles from their homes, which they had erected on lands purchased from the Government of the United States, and under the protection of the American flag, driven across the Mississippi River; hundreds—perhaps thousands—perished during the winter, spring, and summer because of this exposure. The men in consequence of their over exertion and anxiety failed first, leaving widows and orphan children in countless numbers to still suffer.

Notwithstanding the violent feelings of the people of Missouri against the Mormons, they suffered Joseph Smith, and other Elders who had been in prison for six months [and a part of the time fed upon human flesh] to leave the State as soon as the Mormons had all left.

President Smith immediately went to Washington, and made application to the President of the United States, and to Congress for redress; and the most favorable reply was that of Mr. Van Buren, then President of the United States: "Your cause is just, but Government can do nothing for you." Senator Clay coldly remarked: "Your had better go to Oregon." Senator Calhoun said: "It involves a nice question, the question of States rights; it will not do to agitate it;" and the committee of Congress reported it was none of their business.

The scattered remnant, not disheartened though persecuted, clustered round President Smith, and commenced building the City of Nauvoo, in Hancock county, Illinois, a point so sickly that two unsuccessful attempts had been made to settle it, only a few families living there; yet their burying yard contained such a number of graves as might frighten a new settler from the State of New York, even if there had been three thousand inhabitants.

On the 14th of Sept., 1840, the Patriarch Joseph Smith, Sen., worn out with exposure and toil, died at Nauvoo, and Hyrum Smith his eldest son, who had previously received ordination and blessing under his Father's hands, was acknowledged Patriarch over the whole church.

The bluffs around were put in cultivation, the swamps drained, and in a few years it became as healthy in Nauvoo as any part of Illinois.

Missouri, however, not content with her wholesale system of robbery and extermination against the Saints, commenced a series of vexatious lawsuits against them as soon as they became satisfied that they would not all die on the Mississippi.

In 1841, Joseph Smith was demanded from the Governor of Illinois, and a writ issued by him for his apprehension; a writ of habeas corpus was issued, the case was investigated at Monmouth before Judge Stephen A. Douglass, and the arrest declared illegal.

This proceeding, including the expense of council, fees of attendants, as witnesses, &c., cost upwards of three thousand dollars; no inconsiderable sum for a person who had just been robbed of his all.

Dissatisfied with the result of legal proceedings, Missouri commenced a system of kidnapping by which means a number of individuals were carried forcibly without form of law into that State, whipped, imprisoned, some of them hung by the neck and otherwise tortured.

The sum of $200,000 was appropriated by the Legislature of Missouri to defray the expenses of the Mormon massacres, the plundered property not being considered sufficient to pay the robbers.

In 1842, a new demand was made by the Governor of Missouri. Joseph Smith was again arrested, and an attempt made to kidnap him into that State. A writ of habeas corpus was obtained from the United States District Court for the State of Illinois. Judge Pope heard the case in Springfield, and decided "the proceedings illegal, and Missouri had no claim on him, and ordered it entered on the docket that he should be troubled no more in the matter," this proceeding altogether cost $12,000.

A foundation had been laid for a Temple in the city of Nauvoo. A charter had been obtained for the city conferring liberal powers upon the City Council. A University, and Manufacturing Association incorporated. A Legion also chartered. The University organized and put in operation in several departments. The Manufacturers Association commenced the erection of large buildings for the manufacture of pottery. Thousands of people flocked in from every part of the United States, and the British Isles. Streets were opened, hundreds of fine buildings erected, a company was incorporated for the purpose of building an extensive hotel with a capital of $200,000. A considerable amount of stock was sold and the basement story of the building with 240 feet front was finished. An extensive printing establishment, stereotype foundry, and book bindery, put in operation, two Masonic Lodges established, a large and commodious Masonic Temple was built. Several flourishing villages of the Saints were established in different parts of Hancock and neighboring counties, as well as in Iowa. Joseph Duncan, an aspiring party leader, anxious to become Governor of Illinois, took the stump at Edwardsville, and from that, visited different parts of the State, rousing all the vile passions and religious prejuices that could exist against the Saints, promising that if he could be elected Governor of Illinois he would exterminate the Mormons, this formed an extensive Anti-Mormon party who although unsuccessful in the election which elevated Thomas Ford to the executive chair, continued its operations.

In June, 1843, Joseph Smith was arrested at Inlet Grove, Lee county, Illinois, by Officers Reynolds and Wilson, by virtue of a writ from Gov. Ford, issued on a demand from the Governor of Missouri, and strenuous attempts were made to kidnap him directly to Missouri, which would have been done, had not some high-minded citizens of Dixon and Pawpaw Grove, lent their aid and come to his rescue, the news of his arrest reaching Nauvoo, hundreds of the Saints mounted their horses and started to his assistance (he being arrested while on a visit 250 miles from home.) Another struggle against kidnapping, another series of legal proceedings, another writ of habeas corpus, another trial, another discharge, was the result; the cost of this proceeding was immense, for so zealous were the Saints to protect their leader, in addition to filling the whole country with horsemen between the Illinois and Mississippi rivers, and sending a squadron across the Illinois to prevent his being kidnapped. About 100 men chartered a steamboat which kept a constant watch of the boats on the Illinois and Mississippi river, to prevent his being caried into Missouri by steamboat; $100,000 would not defray the expenses and damage to Nauvoo by this arrest.

The general assembly of the State of Illinois in the session of '43&4 made an attempt to repeal the charters granted to the City of Nauvoo, which although it did not succeed, had a tendency to depreciate the value of stock with the Manufacturing and Nauvoo House Association. In the month of June 1854, a mob assembled, in the neighborhood of Carthage, circulating reports that Joseph Smith and the Mormons had bid defiance to the laws of the State, and all manner of falsehood were put in circulation, to inflame the public mind, and the editors of several newspapers devoted their time and space propagating these falsehoods, and on the strength of the rumor that the Mormons were determined to resist the laws, Gov. Ford came to Carthage and ordered into service several hundred men, mostly members of the mob, he then sent an officer to Nauvoo to arrest Joseph Smith and several others, Mr. Smith apprehending that the intention was to murder him, instead of trying him the 47th time by law, requested the Governor to protect him from mob violence, which he pledged the faith of the State to do; the matter of which he was accused being investigated, he was again dismissed, when a new writ was taken out charging him with treason, and he put in jail. Gov. Ford then dismissed all his troops except one company, (the Carthage Greys,) who were known to possess the most violent feelings of hatred toward the Mormons and treacherously left them to be murdered, after having held a private council on the subject and concluding that that would be the best way to pacify the feelings of the mob he left them to their fate.

On the 27th of June, at twenty-three minutes past 5 P. M. the prison was surrounded by about one hundred and fifty armed men with their faces blackened, who massacred Joseph Smith and his brother Hyrum, the Patriarch of the Church, leaving Elder John Taylor severely wounded with four balls, Elder Willards Richards, who was in the same room escaped unhurt; although President Smith had repeatedly apprised the Saints that his tarry among them would be short, and before leaving Nauvoo told his friends he was going like a Lamb to the slaughter and would never return, yet no people on the face of the earth ever mourned more sincerely the loss of a benefactor than did the Latter Day Saints.

The anti-Mormons rejoiced in his death and exulted loudly in their victorious treachery, while the christian world generally exclaimed "how barbarous to kill him so, but, then it is a good thing he is dead."

At the fall term of court, bills of indictment for murder in the first degree, were found against the principal leaders in the massacre, and they were allowed by the court to go at large on bail, and to go each others security, only $1000 being the sum required.

In May 1845 they had a sham trial and were acquitted, although the court, bar, jury and witnesses knew them to be guilty of the murder.

The Twelve Apostles being the first quorum in authority in the Church, by the unanimous voice of the Saints immediately returned from their mission abroad and took their position at the head of affairs in Nauvoo; Brigham Young President of the Twelves Apostles presiding.

The Temple which was one story high at the time of the Prophet's death progressed rapidly, the Saints continued to gather into Nauvoo.

The Seventies Hall was built, a music hall and a large stone arsenal were also erected, the Nauvoo House was recommenced; the brick work of the first story being built, when the mob coming to the conclusion that the murder of the Prophet had not destroyed the progress of Mormonism commenced an organization for "the extermination of the Saints from Nauvoo under the name of a wolf hunt."

Being aware of the above organization, a council of the leading men of the Church directed a memorial to every State and Territory in the Union (except Missouri) couched in the most respectful language, setting forth the condition of the Saints and asking the privilege of settling in their State, and receiving protection and religious liberty, which was treated with perfect silence.

The old scheme was resorted to, of getting out vexatious writs for President Young and the members of his quorum. He not feeling disposed to be murdered as the Prophet and Patriarch had been, provided himself with good and efficient weapons, gave notice from the stand to assembled thousands that any man that laid hands on him or read a writ to him, he would kill him if he could do it with a pair of six shooters (which he exhibted,) and although many individuals volunteered to try the experiment, yet their nerve failed before coming to the sticking point.

The Legislative Session of 1844 repealed the charters of the city of Nauvoo, of the University and the Legion, a combination was formed, composed of nine counties for the extermination of the Mormons, and the work commenced on the tenth day of September, 1845, by burning all the houses in Morley Settlement belonging to Mormons, and so continuing one settlement to another.

An armed body of about one hundred and fifty men, continued two weeks burning houses, destroying property, and turning helpless women and children out of doors, homeless and destitute to perish; although the sheriff of the county called upon the good citizens who were not Mormons to turn out under his direction and disperse the burners, yet not one obeyed his call, but a party of the armed burners pursued him and drove him out of the neighborhood, he was obliged to summon a posse of those who had been just burned out, and kill one of his pursuers to save his life; escaping to Nauvoo, he issued a Proclamation, commanding the Mormons by virtue of his office as sheriff, to turn out and quell the riot. 500 men were then employed upon the Nauvoo House, which was moving up rapidly, they were dismissed by the Trustees and made preparation for repelling the mob, and the sheriff succeeded temporarily in dispersing the rioters.

General Harding soon after came into Nauvoo with four hundred of the State Militia, camped there several days, inquired where the Prophet was buried, said the Governor could not do anything to protect the Mormons, and did not go into the districts where the burning had been performed, although over one hundred houses had been burned, the troops remained some time in the county, several houses were burned within sight of their camp, and several persons lost their lives because they placed a little dependence upon the militia for protection.

Previous to this, there was a council of the authorities of the Church, who had passed a resolution, which as a matter of policy was kept private, to send 1,500 men as pioneers to make a settlement in California, or Oregon, not intending to remain in Illinois, a proposition was accordingly made to the mob (for the State Government had no power) that if they would let the Saints alone and assist them by buying out their property, stopping vexatious law-suits against them, they would remove from the State; which proposition was accepted; accordingly companies were immediately formed, several thousand wagons were put under contract, nearly all the wagons in the surrounding country were bought up, and all the movements possible were made to provide for an early start in the spring.

But the persecution being renewed in violation of the above pledge, 1,000 families commenced their journey on the 1st of February, 1846, thinking by that means to be able to alley the excitement against those who remained behind. Many of the teams crossing the Mississippi river on the ice, President Young and the leaders of the Church with a scanty fit out pursued their journey westward, having to make the road for 300 miles, bridging numerous streams, and encountering every vicissitude and kind of weather that could be imagined.

They arrived at Council Bluffs in July, where they were met by Captain J. Allen, of the United States Army, who called upon them in behalf of the President of the United States, for 500 men to assist in the war with Mexico. The required battalion was made up, leaving their families mostly in the Omaha country, on the west side of the Missouri river in wagons, without protectors or means of subsistence. Soon after the Battalion started on the road for New Mexico.

The aged and infirm, halt, lame, blind, &c., who were unable to enlist into the battalion, gathered up their wagons, and established a place called Winter Quarters, where 700 cabins were erected during the fall and winter, and where the families suffered extremely from sickness, exposure and the want of the necessaries of life.

As soon as it was known in Illinois that the flower of the camp had enlisted in the service of the United States, the mob assembled with redoubled fury, formed a regular military encampment, provided with artillery in the neighborhood of Nauvoo, which now contained the poor, the helpless, the sick and infirm, as all who were able to leave on any terms, had done so during the spring and summer.

The mob increased their force to about 1800 men, and made several unsuccessful attacks upon the city (which could barely muster 123 efficient men,) killing and wounding a number of its inhabitants, battering down many buildings, and finally succeeding on the 17th day of September, after several days bombardment, in driving the people helpless and destitute of every thing that could make earth desirable, across the river into Iowa, where many must have perished from starvation, had not their kind Creater fed them by sending upon their camp, flocks of quails, so tame that their women could catch them with their hands. To crown their victory, the mob set fire to the Temple of Nauvoo, which was the most beautiful building in the Western States. It was the first specimen of a new order of architecture introduced by Joseph Smith; and had cost a million dollars. The light of its fire was visible for thirty miles.

In the spring of 1847, President Brigham Young, with 143 pioneers, started in search of a place of settlement, and were led by the hand of the Almighty—for no person among them knew anything of the country—directly to this valley, where the company arrived on the 24th of July, having sought out and made a new road 650 miles, and travelled a trappers trail nearly 400 miles.

In the fall of 1847 about 700 wagons laden with families arrived in this valley, which was so barren as to produce nothing but a species of dry grass four or five inches high, and the ground was covered with myriads of large black crickets, the food of the Indians.

In this desolate place the site of Great Salt Lake City was surveyed; not a single person in the whole company having a full supply of provisions, but all were on three-quarters or half rations; and in this condition about 100 of a detachment of the Mormon Battalion found their way here without any provisions. President Young, and a portion of the pioneers returned to Winter Quarters the same fall, and arrived again in Great Salt Lake City with 1000 wagons in the fall of 1848.

The crickets during this season come down from the mountains in myriads and destroyed a great portion of the scanty crops; and the whole would have been destroyed had not the Almighty in his kindness to his people sent Gulls in large flocks, which devoured the mammoth crickets, and then vomited them up preparatory to devouring more.

Notwithstanding the Mormon Battalion was in the service of the United States, and a great portion of their families located at Winter Quarters, the Indian department compelled them in the spring of 1848 to leave their cabins, and move across the river into the State of Iowa, although, it was well known, they were only camped until the return of the absent Battalion.

In the spring of 1848 some members of the Mormon Battalion first discovered the gold mines in California, thus opening to the world an unparalleled source of wealth and adventure.

In the fall of 1848 the first Presidency of the Church was re-organized; Brigham Young being unanimously chosen President of the whole Church Heber C. Kimball and Willard Richards his counselors, and their places were filled in the quorum of the Twelve Apostles, John Smith was ordained Patriarch over the Church.

In March 1849 a provisional government was formed, and a State Constitution adopted by a convention under the name of "The State of Deseret" A Delegate was sent to congress with a petition for admission into the Union. In September 1850 an act passed the Congress of the United States, providing for the organization of the State of Deseret Into the Territorial Government of Utah. News of the passage of this act did not arrive until the spring of 1851, and a full judicial bench did not settle until July 1853, Brigham Young was appointed Governor and has performed the duties of that office for four years to the entire satisfaction of the inhabitants, who unanimously desire his re-appointment.

And although the country was one of the most barren by nature, ever inhabited by men, as according to the estimates of the late Capt. Gunnison of the United States Topographical Engineers, not one acre of in 21,000 can ever be irrigated; and scarce a tree or bush can be made to grow beneath the snow line without irrigation, no colony has progressed with more equal and uniform rapidity.

The settlements have been extended from north to south to the entire breadth of the Territory 350 miles, wherever water can be had to irrigate the earth. It contains about 50,000 inhabitants who are almost exclusively members of the Church. About one hundred saw mills and forty grist mills are in operation, and amongst the public buildings there are the Deseret State House, which has been occupied by the Legislature for five years; the Utah Territorial House at Fillmore City; the Tabernacle in G. S. L. City, a building 126 by 64 feet, arched without a column. There are twenty-four good school houses in this city, generally about twenty by thirty feet and are well finished. All the neighborhoods in the Territory are provided with similar school facilities.

The amount of labor expended in ditching and preparing for irrigation, is far greater than clearing heavy timber farms in the States. Good wheat, corn and vegetables are produced, if carefully irrigated, in great abundance.

On the eleventh day of March, 1854, Dr. William Richards, died in G. S. L. City, of dropsy. On April 6, Jedediah M. Grant was chosen as a counselor in his place.

On the 23d of May, John Smith, Patriarch, died in G. S. L. City.

The Church has about 95 missionaries from Utah, in Europe and an equal number in Asia, Africa, and the Pacific Isles, besides large numbers of Native Elders in the different fields of labor, a considerable number of the saints are scattered throughout the United States and British provinces. The "Deseret News" edited by Elder Albert Carrington is published in G. S. L. City and issues 4,000 copies weekly. A weekly Newspaper is published in St. Louis, Mo. by Elder Erastus Snow: another in the city of New York by Elder John Taylor. A periodical is published in Liverpool England, edited by Elder F. D. Richards, and has issued 22,000 copies weekly. A weekly periodical is published in Swansea, South Wales, called the "Udgorn Seion" in the Welsh Language by Elder Dan Jones.

A periodical called the "Scandinaviens Stierne" is also published in the Danish language at Copenhagen, Denmark. A periodical has also been published in Switzerland in the French language, edited by Elder T. B. H. Stenhouse. The Book of Mormon has been translated and published into the Welsh, Danish, French, German and Italian languages. The work has made considerable progress in Sweden, and Norway, the governments having made their utmost exertion to prevent it; the progress has been slow in France, Germany and Italy, owing principally to governmental proscription.

In Denmark and Switzerland, the progress has been much better. In the Sandwich Islands considerable progress has been made, some 5000 persons having received baptism. The Book of Mormon has been translated into the Hawaiian language, and a printing establishment has been secured for the publication of the Book of Mormon and a periodical there.

The missionaries on the Society Islands met with good success, until the French Government, with sword in hand, adopted the exterminating policy of the mobs in the United States.

Missionaries have established many branches and a periodical in Australia; branches have been established in South Africa, Gibraltar, Malta and also in the allied army and navy in the Crimea; several branches have been established in India, and a monthly paper published at Madras, but owing to the great ignorance and degradation of the people, our missionaries have met with but very limited success.

About 1,000 Saints have emigrated from Denmark to this Territory, and a similar emigration is expected this season. The number of Church members is unknown, but from the best estimates that we can gain, they are over 480,000.

A Company has been incorporated to assist the immigrating Saints to this place, from the countries first, where they are the most oppressed. It is termed "the Perpetual Emigrating Fund Company" and has a capital of $250,000 and is conducted on such principles as to be continually increasing, and extends assistance to emigrating Saints in the form of loans to be re-paid after they settle here.

For the faith of the Church, I extract from the Times and Seasons, as follows:

We believe in God the eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost.

We believe that men will be punished for their own sins and not for Adam's transgression.

We believe that through the atonement of Christ all mankind may be saved by obedience to the laws and ordinances of the Gospel.

We believe that these ordinances are, 1st. Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; 2d. Repentance; 3d. Baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; 4th. Laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost.

We believe that a man must be called of God by "prophecy and by laying on of hands," by those who are in authority to preach the Gospel and administer in the ordinances thereof.

We believe in the same organization that existed in the primitive Church, viz, Apostles, Prophets, Pastors, Teachers, Evangelists, &c.

We believe in the gift of tongues, prophecy, revelation, visions, healing, interpretation of tongues, &c.

We believe the Bible to be the word of God as far as it is translated correctly; we also believe the Book of Mormon to be the word of God.

We believe all that God has revealed, all that he does now reveal, and we believe that he will yet reveal many great and important things pertaining to the kingdom of God.

We believe in the literal gathering of Israel, and in the restoration of the ten tribes. That Zion will be built upon this continent. That Christ will reign personally upon the earth and that the earth will be renewed and receive its paradisical glory.

We claim the privilege of worshipping Almighty God according to the dictates of our conscience, and allow all men the same privilege, let them worship how, where, or what they may.

We believe in being subject to Kings, Presidents, Rulers, and Magistrates, in obeying, honoring, and sustaining the Law.

We believe in being honest, true, chaste, benevolent, virtuous, and in doing good to all men; indeed we may say that we follow the admonition of Paul, "we believe all things, we hope all things," we have endured many things and hope to be able to endure all things. If there is any thing virtuous, lovely, or of good report, or praiseworthy, we seek after these things. Respectfully, &c. JOSEPH SMITH.

We also believe in the Patriarchal order of matrimony.

A foundation has been laid for a Temple in this city 193 feet long and 125 feet wide.

On the 18th of February 1855, John Smith son of Patriarch Hyrum Smith the martyr, was ordained Patriarch over the Church.

The unparalleled progress of this people in the face of so much opposition and persecution, and in so dreary a country, shews clearly that the power of the Almighty is exerted in a miraculous manner to spread his diamond truth to reclaim the nations.

GEO. A. SMITH,
Historian of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

A Musical Prodigy.—There is in this vicinity, says the Columbus (Ga.) Times and Sentinel, a blind negro boy, only six years of age, the property of James N. Bethune, of the Corner Stone, who exhibits the most wonderful capacity for music, and is able to play almost any piece, even the most difficult, on the piano forte, after hearing it once or twice. He has never been instructed in music; his knowledge of the science is, therefore, instinctive. He has the most intense passion for music, and exhibits the greatest emotion during his performances. We have never seen so wonderful a musical prodigy before.

San Francisco Newspapers.—One year ago, last January, says the Alta, there were fourteen daily newspapers in San Francisco, and New York, with more than half a million of population, had but thirteen daily papers. At present, California has fifteen dailies, six tri-weeklies, and thirty-five weeklies.

THE MORMON.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, DEC. 8, 1855.

Civil War in Kansas.

We took occasion to say a few weeks since, when the talk of war with England took precedence of "all minor things," that a greater cause for difficulty existed within the pale of our own national jurisdiction than was likely to arise without.

The portentious clouds that have long been gathering blackness in our national horizon seem now to lower and concentrate over the infant Territory of Kansas, threatening to deluge its soil in the "blood of brothers." Already the tocsin of civil war has resounded through the length and breadth of that virgin Territory, and its echo can be heard in every State east of the Rocky Mountains; yea, its ringing appeals to the Executive of the Nation for aid to maintain the law (if law it may be called,) is now heard and responded to in the City of Washington.

Verily we have fallen on evil times, and whether or not the effusion of blood shall be stayed in Kansas for a time, the fact is too apparent to be evaded, that there is a spirit abroad among the people, on the subject of slavery, that is like "fire shut up in the bones," and that nothing but the interposition of the power of the Almighty will ever be able to quench. And though it may smoulder beneath the surface for a time, and anon break out to be subdued by the lovers of the law and order instituted by "the fathers," yet, to all human appearance, the consummation will be a conflagration that will defy the skill of every party and partisan to subdue or extinguish.

We are not frightened; but we have no desire to be among those who shall, against common sense and reason, cry "peace and safety until sudden destruction cometh"—but write as we feel, and feel as we write.

The elements of strife and discord that are so rife in the public mind at the present time, are not confined to any one particular party or sect—the same proscriptive spirit is observable in the extreme abolition fanatic of the North and the extreme propagandist of the South; and daily and hourly is the conservative spirit of the nation giving way to the fanatical extremes referred to, biased as to which extreme it shall take by local circumstances and proclivities of early education.

The following dispatches from the frontier, up to the 30th ult., if true, show, as a result of all this, a state of things ominous of anything but peace and quietness:

WESTON, Mo., Nov. 30—P. M.

The greatest excitement continues to exist in Kansas. The officers have been resisted by the mobocrats, and the interposition of the militia has been called out.

A secret letter from Secretary Woodson to Gen. Eastin has been written, in which the writer requests Gen Eastin to call for the Rifle Company at Platte City, Mo., so as not to compromise Governor Shannon.

Four hundred men from Jackson county, Missouri, are now en route for Douglas county, Kansas Territory. St. Joseph and Weston, in Missouri, are requested each to furnish the same number of men. The people of Kansas are to be subjugated at all hazards.

IMPORTANT FROM KANSAS.

From the National Intelligencer, Dec 4.

The St. Louis papers of the 30th ultimo contain a despatch from Westport, Missouri, of the 28th, confirming the intelligence published yesterday, that there has been an open rupture in Kansas between the pro-slavery and anti-slavery parties. The despatch was addressed to a member of the Legislature at Jefferson City, and is to the following effect:

"That Governor Shannon, of Kansas, had the night before ordered out the militia against Lawrence, the county seat of Douglas county. There is an open rebellion against the laws, and Jones, the sheriff of the county, is in danger. The call is for help."

Mr. McCarty, to whom the despatch was addressed, thought there was no doubt of its genuineness, whilst others believed it was intended to influence the election of a Senator in Missouri.

We understand that the President yesterday received a telegraphic despatch from Gov. Shannon, of Kansas, by which it appears that a civil war is really threatened. The Governor requests prompt assistance from the General Government, and, in conformity with this request, THE PRESIDENT HAS ORDERED THE IMMEDIATE DESPATCH OF TROOPS FROM THE POST NEAREST THE DISTURBED DISTRICT FOR THE PURPOSE OF PRESERVING THE PEACE.

The New York Herald (Independent) of December 5th, with reference to this subject, says:

We give this morning some very bad news from Kansas Territory. The exciting questions which have made that Territory have at last brought about a civil war, and the abolitionist factions have taken up arms against the constituted authorities, appointed under the Act of Congress which created a Territorial Government.

The story, as we receive it through the St. Louis papers, and the despatches of our correspondent at that point, is as follows:

It seems that a man named Coleman, who lives in a part of the Territory chiefly inhabited by members of the free State party, was ordered off his claim by three abolitionists. He resisted; the assaulters were armed; Coleman shot one of them, and then gave himself up for trial. His house was then burned, and his wife and children driven out of the Territory. The Sheriff of the county was resisted in his endeavors to arrest the guilty parties—the free State people rose in open rebellion and defied the law. They were armed with rifles and had five pieces of cannon. The Sheriff's posse was in danger, and the Governor of the Territory was called upon. He issued a proclamation calling on the people to assist the Sheriff in the execution of his duty. The posse was unable to take the assaulters of Coleman, and the Governor called on the President of the United States for aid. The Washington papers of yesterday say that the President has ordered the United States troops at Fort Leavenworth to the assistance of Governor Shannon. Many persons had been frightened out of the Territory. Companies of outlaws were being drilled daily on the prairies.

The next intelligence from Kansas will probably be that of a desperate conflict, and much bloodshed, for when those frontiersmen shoot they shoot to kill.

* * * * * *

Two delegates have been sent to Congress, representing, not the people, but political factions. It appears, however, that the Southern party are in the right at present, and that they have rallied to support the law.

This is what we make out of the accounts from Kansas which we received yesterday. A civil war has commenced. Blood has already been shed and the laws defied. It seems to us that the struggle will be protracted and bloody. With a weak President, without troops, with a Congress rent into so many factions that the initiative step to organization cannot be taken, with a civil war on the frontier, with a disturbed state of foreign relations—with enemies without and traitors within—we should think that Mr. Seward and his organs would be satisfied with the mischief they have already done. But, no: this Kansas war gives them abolition capital—it will be the great question of the coming Presidential canvass, swallowing up all minor matters, and they will work it as long as possible. Let us see if they will not realise the fate of the "engineer hoist with his own petard."

The New York Tribune (Abolitionist) of same date, on the same subject, says:

* * * If the President has really issued such orders as the National Intelligencer ascribes to him, the object may be not so much the illustration and improvement of the doctrine of Squatter Sovereignty by the employment of mercenary troops to shoot down the settlers as merely to make the fortune of some Democratic favorite by giving him a contract for transportation.

This, however, is too serious a matter to be left in doubt, and we hope the speedy organization of the House of Representatives may forthwith put that body into a position to inquire into the facts. As it falls to them to pay the soldiers, it is their duty as well as right to inquire into the uses to which they are put. Shooting unoffending Indians is bad enough; but to leave Kansas to be overrun by armed invaders from Missouri without sending a single soldier to her defense, and then because the people do not choose to submit to the sheriffs or the laws imposed upon them by a sham Legislature, to employ the foreign mercenaries in the service of the United States to shoot them down, is an outrage upon which a very speedy stoppage ought to be put. Gov. Shannon having by his own act stepped out of his position of Governor and assumed the character of a mere political partisan and agitator on the pro-slavery side, is certainly not a fit person to be trusted with the solemn responsibility of employing bullets and bayonets in a case in which he may fairly be suspected of aiming not so much at the enforcement of the laws as at the triumph of a party, and that the party of slave-breeding and the slave trade.

In times of excitement on questions that agitate the public mind in general, it behooves every sensible man to pause for a moment and let the tempest howl until he can act in accordance with his own unbiased convictions, independent of the sectional cliques of North, South, East, or West. Let him decide, not hastily, but with a wise reference to the good of all concerned. It is well to remember that party spirit is as contagious as an epidemic, and a man once enveloped in it is borne along in its turbid current, which, like the dashing cataract leaping beyond its bounds in times of "freshet," spreads devastation and destruction to the work of industry and art of ages.

Few there are who can look calmly on under circumstances like the present, wherein the momentuous question of our national existence is involved, and say to the boisterous elements, "peace! be still!" without connecting with their efforts for peace their peculiar local prejudices and sectional proclivities. But whether there are few or many of this character, there are none worthy to weild the power of State who cannot do it with an eye single to the general weal; and on no other principle can the principles and institutions of our country be perpetuated.

We know it is said by many who are zealous for the abolition of the institution of slavery in the United States, that when laws are objectionable to the executor of those laws, he should not execute them; but this is altogether too contracted and biased a view to be justified. Much more would it be to the credit of such officer, and the good of society in general, for him to resign his position, and thereby preserve inviolate both his conscience and the law.

But no; his living is probably at stake, and he clutches the spoils, and then, like the dog in the manger, neither executes, himself, nor allows those to who would.

The whole matter, when narrowed down, amounts to this, that to stand upon the broad platform of the CONSTITUTION, and execute the laws in accordance thereunto, is safety; but to depart from it, is to do what is already being done on our frontier at the present time, and measurably throughout the country—to disregard all law—to act from volition—to file off in clans, and to bring about that which has been spoken by inspiration, "that he that will not take up sword against his neighbor must needs flee to Zion for safety."

Christmas Party.

We have been tendered an invitation from Dr. Clinton, President of the Philadelphia Conference, to attend a Christmas Party in Philadelphia, commencing at 3 o'clock Christmas day. We purpose to be there to enjoy the hospitalities of our Philadelphia friends, and doubt not that things will be done up brown under the supervision of the Doctor and President Harrison.

"A Pile."

THE Sacramento Daily Union of Oct. 8th, says—We learn from our friend H. Eno, Esq., of Campo Seco, that a handsome nugget of gold, weighing one hundred and eighteen ounces and sixteen pennyweights, was taken out of the tunnel claim of Messrs. Russwurm & Co., on the afternoon of the 6th. It is valued at $1,800. During the last three weeks they have taken out several pieces weighing from three to seven ounces. The mines generally about Campo Seco are yielding largely.

Polygamy vs. Monogamy.

We are not a little surprised, sometimes, at the remarks made by some of our cotemporaries, in relation to the subject of Polygamy; most of whom gratuitously censure the principle, as being at variance with good morals and virtue. These opinions, we opine, are very hastily conceived, and in nine cases out of ten are the results of education and custom; if calmly and dispassionately investigated, we believe, it would be found that Polygamy is more opposed to our prejudices and preconceived opinions, than to virtue and chastity. Sometimes, however, facts accidentally slip out tending to throw light upon this subject.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune, Dec. 5th, an intelligent European traveller, writing from Varna Balgaria, Oct. 25th, 1855, relates some things which would rather militate against Monogamy. He says:

"On my arrival in Varna I called upon the English Consul, who agreed with me that Americans are great travellers. The French have done something in the way of naming the streets and numbering the houses. "La Rue Rivoli," "La Place de la Concorde," and other familiar French names, reminding one of magnificent Paris, appear, however, rather out of place when applied to the filthy lanes and muddy corners of detestable Varna. I find myself among sharpers and adventurers of every religion, language, and color.

"While wandering one day over this checkered Mosaic of nationalities—this pandemonium of war and crime, of filth and wretchedness—I encountered a scene of which only Western civilization can boast, which was Oriental only in the accident of its locality. A few dissolute women who spoke the language of Victoria, but in whose persons Venus and Bacchus had united their worst attractions, were engaged in a drunken brawl in the open street with a number of Scotch and Irish dragoons. The French police were attempting to abate the nuisance, and their elegant 'Ecoutez, Mademoiselles; venez chez nous,' seemed wasted when addressed to these abandoned courtesans following in the track of glorious war. A crowd of grave Mussulmen had collected to gaze on that strange apotheosis of Western civilization in their midst. I shall not soon forget how those turbaned philosophers did shake their heads and turn away in disgust, saying, 'O Allah, the Merciful, deliver us from the faults of these our friends. By the beard of the Prophet, one Musselman malden is worth more than seven of the most beautiful daughters of the Unbelievers.'

"The Koran forbids the use of intoxicating drinks. The law of Islam is capable, however, of an elastic interpretation, and there are those among the faithful who contend that the interdiction is for the abuse, rather than the use of alcohol. Notwithstanding modern innovations, however, the great majority of Moslems condemn it, even in the form of remedies applied internally or externally, believing with the Prophet that 'the sin committed in drinking wine is much greater than the advantage reaped from it.'"

Now we would not be understood as giving these degrading camp scenes as a fair specimen of Monogamy; but we must remember that the Turks were also in camp, and that these Moslems turned with disgust from the revolting scene, and expressed themselves as above; clearly evincing their views in relation to such degradation, and making comparisons that certainly were anything but flattering to our pride as Christians. Proceed we:

"Vienna is one of the most dissolute capitals of Europe. The low morality—the indecencies exhibited on every hand—the universal desecration of the Sabbath—half of the births in the city illegitimate—the troops of legalized prostitutes—a single lying-in hospital, to which a married female can scarcely procure admission, producing annually between four and five thousand bastards for death in infancy or prostitution and conscription in later years—would all these things be as they are if the Viennese were a temperate people?"

What a revolting picture for the seat of empire in Austria! We are not now in a camp; nor speaking of its disolute followers. Vienna is the capital of the Austrian empire, and boasts of its arts, its sciences, its refinement, its literature, its christianity, its morality, (!) save the mark. Its citizens talk of their statuary, their architecture, their palaces, their churches, their nobility and long line of royalty. But what are its sober realities! Here lasciviousness runs riot, and in the renowned city of the proud Hapsburg, troops of prostitutes unblushingly parade the streets; infanticide prevails to an alarming extent, and "one-half the births in the city are illegitimate." What a revolting picture, and what an index to the state of morals! If one-half of the children born are illegitimate, we need not inquire what the position of one-half or two-thirds of the remaining half are. In fact, morality, chastity and virtue are but hypocritical nicknames to cover up the vice, depravity, debauchery and lasciviousness that stalks forth unblushingly at mid-day. And yet these are Christians, Catholic Christians, and reformed Catholics, or Protestant Christians. Christian Monogamists, who, while wallowing in their stench and pollution, would hypocritically affect to turn up their nose at Polygamy, and profess to shudder at its contaminating influences. The above is a fair specimen of European society, with some few exceptions. The writer in the Tribune attributes it to an excessive use of intoxicating liquors; this may have had its influence. These lamentable results, however, may be more effectually traced to a false philosophy, a false religion, a false morality, an artificial state of society, an unnatural matrimonial restraint, a departure from the order of God, and a desire to improve upon laws instituted by the Almighty to govern the marriage relation. "They have sown to the flesh, and of the flesh they have reaped corruption." They have planted in unrighteousness and have gathered the apples of Sodom; they have reaped the reward of their own doings, and are festering in their iniquity. Christian depravity is abhorred by the Moslem, and the Monogamist has become the laughing-stock and by-word of the Polygamist. But to proceed. Our author says:

"The Eastern war is said to be a conflict between humanity and civilization on one side, and barbarism on the other. The present crusade of England and France against Russia may carry some of the blessings of civilization into the East, but evils innumerable, beside seas swept of their commerce and cities sacked, are the footprints in its path. The people of the East and the West are brought together on a gigantic scale, but it is a shame that the first and almost the only words they exchange should be concerning the prices of raki and virtue. Better leave the Turk to his fate than substitute wine for the water commanded by Allah; better leave him in his polygamy than give him French prostitution."

And he might have added Austrian, Prussian, Belgian, Swiss, Scandinavian, English, or American.

DURING the year 1854, one hundred and sixty-five men were hung in the United States. Of this number, only seven could read and write. What a lesson!

The Mormon.

To the Elders and Saints throughout the United States.

We wish to address a few words and to call your attention to the propriety of sustaining our own publications, and circulating them, as far as practicable, in the various regions where you reside. The toil, labor, and pecuniary responsibilities associated with publishing a paper, are only known by a few; and those things which may amuse and instruct you, are obtained only by unwearied diligence, perseverance and industry, by both mental and bodily labor, as well as at a heavy pecuniary expense. We need not here say anything about the MORMON, for the high encomiums that we are daily receiving from all parts of the world, give us sufficient evidence that our labors are accepted and appreciated by our readers. We wish, however, to inform our friends that these results are only obtained by a heavy outlay, consequent upon the labor necessarily employed in the enterprize. We could publish a paper for a good deal less money than we do, but it would not be THE MORMON. Now, we are wishful to advance instead of retrograding; we have various suggestions and improvements to make, in relation to the MORMON, so soon as we shall be in a condition to carry them out; but those improvements will require yet a further outlay, and we want to lay this subject calmly and dispassionately before our brethren. The question arises, shall we have as good a paper as is published in the United States? If so, will you sustain it? not in name or word, but in solid, sober reality. Our responsibilities are not theoretical, they have to be met every week and every day in dollars and cents. Now, if the paper is of any use to anybody, it is of use to the Elders and Saints of our own Church. It is at the present time one of the most powerful auxiliaries in spreading truth, repelling falsehood, and advancing the interests of the Kingdom of God in the United States; and we call upon all Elders and Saints to double what they have already done, that we may be delivered from all embarrassments on this subject, that the cause of truth may progress, and the principles advocated in the MORMON may float throughout these United States.

We appeal, too, to the Council, officers and Saints in the stake of St. Louis, to sustain us with that liberality with which they have heretofore sustained the Luminary. Brethren, let not your hands be feeble, nor your hearts faint; we are doing a good work—come to our help. We would here remark that we have incurred liabities, the which, if any of our brethren who have the means, feel it in their hearts to help us to liquidate, it will be thankfully received; and for the future, we wish the MORMON to stand on its own merits. Cannot we do it, brethren? Mormonism never started a thing yet but what it could accomplish. Let us unite with a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull altogether, and we will accomplish the object designed. We do not come before you with a poor mouth, or as supplicants, begging and pleading; we lay it before you as a duty—and if you can not, we can.

Etiquette.

We clip the following from the Peru (Ill.) Weekly Chronicle:

"Rev. John Taylor, (Ed. Mormon,) and Court Etiquette.

We observe, in all the writings of this distinguished gentleman when addressing the Executive of our nation, or when speaking in reference thereto, he invariably uses the PLURAL. This is, we believe, not to be met with in the writings of any other journalist of our country, and it evinces a courtesy which is either native to the gentleman, or the result of his polite French education. Whatever may be its source, we admire the practice, and would be happy to see it become the mode. The following is a sample of Mr. Taylor's manner:

COL. STEPTOE.

"We are informed that Col. Steptoe is now (Nov. 3d) in this city. It is reported also that he has again expressed to President Pierce a willingness to accept the Governorship of Utah, providing he can retain his commission in the army.

Col. Steptoe, as we have before remarked, is a gentleman much respected by the people of Utah for his urbanity and gentlemanly deportment while sojourning in that Territory; and if there is to be an appointment other than the present incumbent, no doubt, with none but that alternative left them, the choice of the people would be upon that gentleman. We cannot but express our conviction, however, that the Executive have, in the former appointment and non-acceptance of Col. Steptoe, done all in their power, and all that could be expected of them, consistent with official dignity, to meet and answer the religious and political prejudices of party."

Now we do not profess to be fastidious about terms, although we have at all times a strong desire that the form of expression used should convey our ideas correctly. We are not, therefore, particular about the use of the plural; but we have a regard, and at all times wish to manifest a proper respect, for those holding high official position in our nation, who, though disencumbered with court etiquette, and of the regalia and trappings of royalty, we consider none the less honorable for being dressed in plain republican garb; and if we dispense with the paraphernalia and regal pomp of the effete European nations, and are disgusted with the gilt, glitter and strut of many of their petty popinjays: yet, when these gewgaws are laid aside voluntarily, surely it ought not to be considered too much to pay proper respect to the incumbents of office, the unanimous choice of an enlightened and intelligent people.

If we editors, managing from the most ably and best conducted sheet, that is full of intelligence, and goes to the ends of the earth, down to a seven by nine, if only yclept a newspaper, take upon ourselves the euphoneous we, surely, it is not a stretch of etiquette to use the plural to the chief magistrate of one of the mightiest and most prosperous nations of the earth, particularly when we associate the Cabinet with him. Nations are all getting polite. The French have their vous, we have our you—both in the second person; the Germans use sie for the second person singular, which may be used as you, but more properly they.

We are not particular in regard to the formula of these matters, but we are in regard to the principle of respect to authority. "Honor to whom honor is due," is our motto.

Speaking of etiquette, the Chronicle calls us the Bey. Now, although his intentions were no doubt correct, yet we repudiate the name or appellation. We profess to be a plain, matter-of-fact man, and disclaim any association with, and respect for, that cognomen, as applied to man.

Gov. Young.

A fine looking stranger having recently put up at one of the principal hotels in Louisville, Ky., it got noised abroad that he was none other than Brigham Young, the great patriarch of the Utah Saints. The consequence was, that the ladies of Louisville had such an unconquerable desire to see the husband of ninety wives, and the father of three hundred children, that the hotel was literally besieged with them, till the discovery was made that the stranger was only a Judge from a neighboring State.—[N. Y. Sun.

THE Governor is a fine looking man, though he has not as many wives as David and Solomon had, and it is even probable, that the ninety wives and three hundred children may be slightly exaggerated; still, no doubt, there would be a great wonder and curiosity among the fair sex to see a man that has the reputation of having so many wives and children, and yet able to conduct so thoroughly the business of a large and thriving Territory, and one, too, that attracts so much of public attention, added to which, his high reputation as a man of business, displayed in the unprecedented advancement and rapid improvement of an entire wilderness country in a few years. No wonder that the ladies have a curiosity to see his Excellency, when it is considered, in this part of the country, so difficult for a man to get along peaceably with one wife and no children, and no other business at all but to expend the interest of his capital to amuse her—to say nothing of the little intrigues of which the ladies are all undoubtedly aware, and which of course must be winked at. A great country is that Utah—wonder if our eastern ladies wouldn't vote for its admission into the Union; if they had a chance? we think so; wouldn't that be a stumper to some of these "gentlemen at large?" We fear some of these gentlemen will be found voting against Utah, under considerations of morality; they don't admire law, especially old scripture law; it brings too many responsibilities. Some of them have a great regard for the old patriarchs, but abominate their practices; pious souls, we feel for them. When they get to heaven, how annoyed they must be at such associations in that happy place; and how astonished the patriarchs, at the improvements of modern times? Then, their poor deluded wives, Sarah, Hagar, Rachel, Rebecca, Hannah, how mortified they'll feel at meeting the Rev. Mrs. A——, and Mrs. Deacon Q——, and the Missionary's lady; poor souls, how they are to be pitied. By the way, wouldn't it be a good idea, in this age of improvement, to get up a society to advocate a dissolution of the Union there, and set up a separate government on the highly approved modern monogamic principle, and admit none of those ancient or modern polygamists. Such improvements upon the old-fashioned laws of heaven would command admiration of the gods, and angels would feign veil their faces before the bright intelligence of its advocates.

We make this philanthropic suggestion for the benefit of the Herald, Sun, Times, and especially Putnam's Magazine, as their able advocacy of such a measure would, no doubt, have much weight in ameliorating the condition of many of our professors, who anticipate locating in that distant region. It would be rather annoying, though, when they got there, to see all their ladies running out to look at Abraham or Solomon, when they should happen to pass through that country. However, there might be a law enacted to restrain the "unconquerable desire" among females to see such interesting curiosities. We, however, only venture a surmise, and will leave it to abler hands to perfect. It is certainly necessary, in this age of wonderful improvements, that something should be done to civilize Utah, and at the same time to improve the condition of affairs in that distant region "beyond the bounds of time and space," in which all good people have so great an interest, and which is ultimately to be our homes for so many thousand years. We sincerely hope that this subject will meet with the most serious and deliberate consideration of all our gifted and philanthropic cotemporaries throughout the United States. And would it not be an invaluable suggestion to some of the presidential candidates. We call the attention of the wire-pullers at Washington particularly to this subject, previous to the next election to the White House.

Keokuck, Iowa, Correspondence.

FROM Keokuck, Iowa, we learn that things are moving on well. A correspondent writing from there says:

"It may not prove uninteresting to you to learn something concerning the affairs of this branch. Bros. Smith and Curtis came up to visit us on the 1st of July last; they roused us up and gave a little stimulus to the work here. They delivered the commandment from the valley for us to renew our covenants. Since their departure we have had Bro. Jas. Case in our midst, who has done a good work. We now number, of those who have obeyed the command, between fifty and sixty members; and I am happy to say that the spirit of Zion is resting down upon us in a goodly degree. I feel thankful to God, and my heart rejoices in this great and noble work.

"I appreciate the masterly manner in which the MORMON is conducted; it is felt to be a blessing to the Saints, and a terror to the adversaries.

"Praying God our Heavenly Father to continue to bless you with every needful blessing, and to support you in your arduous duty, I remain your brother in the covenant of peace,

"CHARLES CLARKE."

A TON OF COAL.—Judge Grier, of the U. S. Supreme Court, has decided, on a suit instituted in Pennsylvania, that the legal weight of a ton of coal is 2,240 lbs., and that no State law can be enacted altering the quantity.

Obituary.

We regret exceedingly that a note forwarded to this office from Hornerstown, N. J., during our absence, containing the following intelligence, was misplaced among other papers, and did not appear in due time:

HORNERSTOWN, Ocean Co., N. J., November 1, 1855.

To the Editor of the Mormon:

SIR—Please to find room in your valuable paper to insert the death of Elder James L. Curtis, which melancholy event took place October 31, 1855. His death was very sudden, which causes a gloom over this Branch.

POSTMASTER.

Brother Curtis has belonged to our Church for a number of years, and has been esteemed as a good brother, father, and friend. He was at Nauvoo with his family during the life of Joseph, and when the Saints left Nauvoo he, unable to go west, returned to Hornerstown, N. J., at which place he has resided ever since; he was President of the Hornerstown Branch at the time, and a number of years previous to his death. He leaves a wife and children to mourn a loss that cannot be made up to them this side of the resurrection of the just, when those of his friends who are faithful will meet him "with joy and not with grief." They have our sympathy and prayers that they may be enabled to follow the good example set by him whose decease we now have the painful duty to record, that they may finally reign with him in the Celestial Kingdom of God.

LIVERPOOL CORRESPONDENCE.

36 ISLINGTON, LIVERPOOL, Nov. 17, 1855.

ELDER JOHN TAYLOR—Dear Sir: I have great pleasure in informing you that I have chartered the "Emerald Isle" and "James J. Boyd," to sail from this port for New York on the 27th inst. and 7th December. The first will take about four hundred English Saints; the latter about four hundred Scandinavian. It is quite probable that a part of the Scandinavian emigrants may press through at once to St. Louis, as they contemplate going to Utah in the ensuing season. After these two vessels it is possible there will be nothing further until the last of January or first of February. Your co-worker in the gathering of Israel,

F. D. RICHARDS.

The Second Epistle of George, Surnamed Taylor, to them that dwell in Gotham.

THIS second epistle, beloved, I now write unto you; in which I stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance; that ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken by the Elder while sojourning in your midst; wherein he exhorted you to all diligence and faithfulness in publishing the word to them that dwell by the mountains of Pennsylvania. I know thy works, and thy labor, and thy perseverance, and thy poverty, (but thou art rich) and thy long sufferings. Nevertheless I have somewhat against thee, and though I testify of thy faithfulness what doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works?

If a brother or sister be destitute of intelligence concerning the things of the Kingdom, and one of you say unto them, remain in peace, be ye instructed and informed; notwithstanding ye give them not their papers in the season thereof, what doth it profit? "Was not Abraham our father justified by works, when he had offered his son Isaac upon the alter?" "Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only." "Go to ye that say to-morrow will do as well. Take heed that ye be not accounted evil beasts and slow bellies." What will ye? shall I come unto you with a rod, or in meekness, and in the spirit of love.

Now I exhort you to faithfulness in the performance of the duties that devolve upon you, that you may aquit yourselves honorably, even as I did when I dwelt among you, lest peradventure I be called to go among you and admonish you to the performance of the task that is required of you. Wherefore, be it known unto you our post cometh but twice in the seven days, namely on the second and on the sixth day of the week, and the murmurs and complainings of the disciples are great. Yet have I sent you this epistle lest our boasting of you should be in vain, for your fame is noised about from the "Black Corner" even unto "Thomastown" which is over against the North Mountain.

Now I beseech thee Nathaniel not as though I wrote a new commandment unto you, but that which we had from the begining that you fail not to send, (having written thereon my name) the Magazine called Harpers, and cause it to go to those that dwell in that benighted land, even Utah. And inscribe thereon the name of John, Sirnamed Taylor, (beginning with the eleventh month called November.) Now when I was present with you, I was chargeable to no man of you, for that which was lacking to me was supplied by the Apostle John, which came with me from the mountains of Ephraim. Howbeit, let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not. As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith.

Wherefore as thy reward "receive my instruction, and not silver; and knowledge rather than choice gold. For wisdom is better than rubies, and all the things that can be desired are not to be compared to it." "The liberal soul shall be made fat."

"There is that maketh himself rich, yet hath nothing; there is that maketh himself poor yet hath great riches."

"The liberal man deviseth liberal things, and by his liberality shall he stand."

Now I would that ye salute the brethren that dwell in the city; and they that dwell by the sea shore, and by the rivers of water.

Greet ye one another with a kiss of charity, not forgetting the young man Angus, who desired to be remembered. Likewise Sister Miller with whom we have taken up our abode, until the darkness shall have passed from us.

Now if I have reproved thee sharply be charitable, for charity covereth a multitude of sins. And remember that "whoso loveth instruction loveth knowledge; but he that hateth reproof is brutish." I myself am persuaded of you my brethren, that ye are full of goodness, filled with all knowledge, able also to admonish one another. Nevertheless, brethren, I have written the more boldly unto you in some sort, as putting you in mind, that ye forget not the things whereof I have written. Now I beseech you to bear with me in these things. For we know that the law is spiritual, and I am carnal. For that which I do, I allow not; for what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I. For I know that in me (that is in my flesh) dwelleth no good thing; for to will is present with me, but how to perform that which is good I find not.

Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it but sin that dwelleth in me. I find then a law that when I would do good evil is present with me my salutation, peace be upto you, so be it.

Written from the "Black Corner" to the GOTHAMITES.

First Epistle to George, Son of John, surnamed Taylor.

I, Nathaniel, to my Sons George and Angus;

GREETING:

We, Gothamites, having received the Epistle of George, surnamed Taylor, return the salutation. Thou hast done well, my son, in not forgetting thy covenants, in writing to us; albeit, in doing so, thou hast somewhat forgot thy position, although we reproach thee not, for we know thy faith, and thy diligence, and thy zeal, and how thou hast labor'd and hast not fainted, and that from thy youth thou hast been taught the holy commandments; yet hast thou forgotten that scripture, which saith "rebuke not an Elder, but entreat him as a father."

We have also attended to thy requests, nevertheless, to speak plainly, as is our wont, it becometh not you who live in the "Black Corner," over against the north mountain, to find fault with us Gothamites, without first inquiring diligently to know if there was, on our part, any deficiency; for be it known unto thee, and to the dwellers in Thomastown, that your papers are sent from the great city of Gotham with all fidelity; but we attribute thine over-zeal to thy youth and thy lack of experience. Nevertheless, in this, our epistle, we would give thee a word of comfort.

Thou knowest the Saints in the Church at Philadelphia: and now it so happens that the Philadelphians are about to make a feast, and to meet together to eat and drink, as is their wont, and thou knowest their ability in such matters, and their liberality towards all the Saints: Be it therefore known unto thee, that the feast will be held on the day called Christmas, after the manner of the Christians, and that thou, my son George and my son Angus, both of the Black Corner, and the presiding Elders from Delaware, Jersey, and the regions around, and such as may be accounted worthy, are invited by the Physician Jeter, whose dwellings are in the mountains of Ephraim, and his co-laborer, Samuel, of Philadelphia, to come and help us celebrate this feast, and that we may gaze upon your face and commune with you, in the notable city of Philadelphia, in the country of the Pennsylvanians, nigh unto Schuylkill.

Grace and peace be multiplied unto thee, until I see thee again in the flesh. Amen.

Kansas Affairs.

MR. DELAHAY has suggested to the Constitutional Convention in Kansas his determination to advocate, at the proper time, the adoption of a constitution without any clause on the slavery question, except a proviso leaving it to a vote of the people, after their admission into the Union, to decide whether the institution of slavery shall or shall not exist in Kansas.

Delahay is said to have been sent to Kansas by the Administration party, and obtained a seat in the Convention by conveying the idea that he was a free soiler; "hence this declaration," says the Kansas correspondent of the Missouri Democrat, "seemed to startle the delegates. Few of them ever dreamed of forming a non-committal constitution, and I believe that a very small minority will be found to favor the scheme."

The following resolution, introduced also by Delahay, was passed on the 9th Nov., under the operation of the previous question, by a vote of sixteen to fifteen:

Resolved, That this Convention approve the principle of Squatter Sovereignty, and non-intervention of the people of the State, as well as of Congress, in the local affairs of Territories and States.

A great deal of angry feeling was elicited, and notice was given by one of the delegates that he would move a reconsideration on the next day.

New York City Expenses.

THE following figures exhibit the expenditures of the present and the estimated outlay for next year—

Years.	Amount.
1855	$5,843,822 89
1856	6,475,855 43
Increase	$632,032 54

DESTRUCTION OF INDIAN GOODS.—About $26,000 worth of government goods, intended for the Sioux Indians, was destroyed by fire recently, a short distance below Red Wood, the Sioux Agency. The goods were despatched from St. Paul, for the agency, on the steamer Globe. The vessel getting aground, it was found necessary to take the goods ashore, where they were consumed by fire from the prairies which were burning in the vicinity.

Letter from Elder Orson Hyde.

The following interesting letter from Elder Orson Hyde, now in Carson Valley, to Col. Norton, we find in the columns of the Placerville American:

The Boundary Line—Organization of Carson County—Election of Township and County Officers—The Wagon Road—Selection of Carson County Site—Great Fall of Honey Dew—Manufacture of Sugar from Honey Dew, &c.

Genoa, Sept. 27, 1855.

Dear Sir:—I dropped you a line the other day in great haste, before our survey was fully completed. In that letter I stated to you that probably all that portion of the Valley south of Mr. Motts, was in California. But since then, on more fully and carefully reviewing the various peaks, angles and bearings, I am happy to be able to inform you that that note gave you an incorrect idea of the boundary line between Utah and California.

The line of the main angle passes over the summit nearly opposite Mr. Mott's house; thence along the base of the mountain as far as Mr. Therrington's, or "Lucky Bill's," (as he is often called,) crossing the road leading to Mr. Cary's mill, about three-fourths of a mile south of "Lucky Bill's," leaving the entire valley within the Territory of Utah, with the exception of Mr. Cary's, and a few miles of narrow desert on the river. When the line was thus determined, the citizens almost universally expressed their hearty acquiescence and cordial satisfaction that the long sought line was found, and that they were in Utah, thinking that their lands will become more valuable than they would if they had fallen on the California side. Time must determine, however, the correctness of their views.

As I informed you before, our election went off on the 20th inst. in a very lively and harmonious manner. J. C. Fain, Esq., was duly elected Sheriff of the County—a man deservedly, I believe, in high repute. Wm. P. Allen, James McMarlin and H. D. Sears, Selectmen or County Commissioners, who, I believe, are well qualified for the office. H. W. Niles is County Surveyor, G. W. Tyler, Recorder, and R. D. Sides, Treasurer. H. Van Sickle is Magistrate in the Upper Precinct, and H. M. Hodge, Constable. M. Winters is Magistrate at Gold Canon Precinct, and James Williams, Constable. These officers have mostly filed their bonds and taken the oath of office. The balance will do so when they come over the mountains from your side, whither they are gone on business. These men, I am sure, will all take pride in discharging their official duties—in fostering and encouraging this new county—in promoting good and in suppressing evil. And very soon I hope your already fine markets may be enriched by the beef, butter and cheese of Carson county.

Should the contemplated road across the mountains be vigorously prosecuted to completion, it will afford a means of communication and interchange of commodities that cannot fail to be reciprocally beneficial to both sections. I hope the measure will not fall through. I trust that Utah will be inclined to splice on to the road where California leaves it, and work it through to Salt Lake on her own responsibility, if she cannot get the general government to help her. A good stage road across the plains will greatly facilitate travel and the improvement of the country, and, perhaps, lead to an earlier location and establishment of a railroad near it.

Enoch Reese, Esq., was elected Representative from this county to the Legislature. He will try to accomplish something favorable to this Stage Road enterprise.

Our county is now organized, and our courts ready for business. But there is not a lawyer in the district, nor a case on the docket. If there are any suits to be brought, I think the people must be waiting for you to come and commence and carry them on. Your first appearance before the United States Court here, won for you the confidence of the citizens, the esteem of the court, and good will of its officers; and I think that no attorney would stand a better chance for business here than yourself. We should all be pleased to see you; yet I cannot promise what amount of business would be done if you were here. The feelings of the people do not seem quite so litigant as when I last saw you.

The Legislature gave me power to locate the county seat of this county; but knowing that there was a difference in the minds of the people about it, I concluded to submit the question to the vote of the people, which was done at the election. Mormon Station received the highest number of votes—just as many as four other places put together—and as it was a matter of no particular choice with me, I located it where the vote of the people placed it. It is the most natural centre.

The place is named "Genoa," after the birth place of Columbus, the pioneer across the stormy deep, and discoverer of a country in which Heaven designed that man should worship His maker according to the dictates of his own conscience.

News from Salt Lake is much more encouraging about crops and provisions than it was. Emigrants tell me here that they bought potatoes in August at 50 cents per bushel, flour from 6 to 8 cents, butter from 23 to 25 cents. Corn crops promising.

I learn by private letters, that in Provo, a town fifty miles south of Salt Lake City, where the wheat crop was mostly destroyed by grasshoppers, that a honey dew had fallen so bountifully on the small cotton woods along the river banks that the citizens were washing the leaves and boiling the syrup into sugar. One person will make ten pounds of beautiful sugar in a day. This would bring four dollars in ordinary times. The people there depended on their wheat to get groceries; but when the wheat failed, sugar fell from Heaven. In case of an entire failure of crops, it looks as though we might almost get manna, if not quite. The honey dew approximates very near to it. "And this be our motto: 'In God is our trust.'"

I have already trespassed upon your time, and perhaps wearied your patience, so I will close. Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Orson Hyde

Ex-Governor Reeder and Kansas.

We extract a portion of the speech of Ex-Governor Reeder, at Trenton, N. J., on the 29th of Nov., as published by the Trenton Gazette:

"A large number of our citizens, of all political parties, assembled at Temperance Hall, on Thursday night, to listen to an exposition of Kansas affairs by Ex-Governor Reeder. Hon. Joseph F. Randolph was called to the chair, and in a few appropriate remarks welcomed Gov. Reeder, whose address was exceedingly eloquent and effective. One important fact was disclosed, which destroys the efficacy of all the miserable apologies that have been offered for the outrages in Kansas, and exhibits not only the designs entertained by the Missourians to subvert popular sovereignty in Kansas, but also the direct concurrence of the administration in it. Gov. Reeder stated that before he went to his post he received information that a secret society had been organized in Missouri for the purpose of transferring votes into the Territory, and by violence, if necessary, to secure the control of it for the purpose of establishing the institution of slavery. This information, it was intimated, was conveyed by Gov. Reeder to the national executive, but no measures were undertaken to avert the impending outrages. After their perpetration, the executive treated those who complained of them with neglect and contumely. The relation shows also conclusively the speciousness of the reason assigned for Gov. Reeder's removal, and that his refusal, after promises and threats, to participate in the frauds on the settlers of Kansas, was the only motive for that act. For the true heroism displayed by him in the discharge of his duty, he deserves the highest commendation. The account given of parties and politics in the Territory, and of the manner in which the border marauders accomplished their undertakings, will be found interesting. Below we give a synopsis of the principal statements in the address, which was listened to with the most earnest attention, and was frequently interrupted by bursts of sympathetic applause:

After alluding to the pleasure he experienced in meeting the citizens of Trenton, and his personal feeling that he was discharging an important duty in addressing them on the affairs of Kansas, he proceeded to remark on the agricultural resources of the Territory. He had never seen a land which held out such hopes to the agriculturist. It is a land of undulating plains—not flat and monotonous like the prairies, but diversified with hills, woods, river bottoms, &c., with a rich alluvial soil of from two to thirty feet deep. It has every variety of soil, and is capable of raising almost every variety of production. He described the physical features of the country as being exceedingly beautiful. The climate for salubriousness cannot be surpassed. In summer it is pleasant and delightful, beyond improvement, from the time the spring rains end until the winter. The heat of the sun is tempered by a constant fresh breeze. In winter it is so mild, that the agriculturist can almost feed his stock without grain. For healthiness, soil and beauty, the country cannot be surpassed. But these are not the only recommendations. The Territory is in the direct route to the Pacific. It lies between the frigid Nebraska, on the north, and the sickly Indian Territory on the south; it has a river well adapted to commerce; it contains undoubtedly the best route for the Pacific railroad—a direct air line from the mouth of the Kansas river to Salt Lake City, in the valley of the only river along which timber can be procured in quantities sufficient to build and operate the road, a plain already graded for the work of the engineer, and the best opening through the Rocky Mountains, seventy or eighty miles south of South Pass. He repeated that this route is the only one in which a capitalist, after a personal examination, would invest his money. He spoke also of the amount of trade which already crosses the Plains. All of the trade to Salt Lake, and the overland emigration to California and Oregon, goes over them. The natural advantages of the country are so great, that travel took this route even before it was opened to settlement. There are some 12,000 or 15,000 mules and oxen engaged in transportation annually. Besides, from the nature of the country, Kansas, or the eastern portion of it, when formed into a State, must be the only great agricultural State between Missouri and Salt Lake, and consequently will furnish supplies to the latter. He then proceeded to speak of the political affairs of Kansas." * * * *

Anti-Capital Punishment Repudiated.

A year or two ago the people of Wisconsin abolished the penalty of death. Since then murders and assassinations have increased to a fearful extent in the State, and what is strange, some of the populace who held up their hands in holy horror at the idea of executing a criminal according to law, did not hesitate, in two cases recently to hang them, in violation of the express statute of the State, by a resort to Judge Lynch. The deliberate murder, however, of Mr. Adams, the banker at Milwaukee, is likely to be the final end of anti-hanging-ism. The papers of the State are demanding that the ensuing Legislature shall restore the death penalty. If the end should justify the means, let the rope do its work, but if not, then let there be a punishment more salutary in its influence and power.

Fatal Railroad Accident.

Troy, Dec. 1, 1855.

The engine attached to the down train on the Grand Trunk River Railroad, to-day, when three miles east of Cornwall, ran off the track and plunged down an embankment, turning a complete somerset. The engine was completely shattered, the engineer killed, and the fireman badly hurt. None of the passengers were injured.

From Washington.

Washington, Dec. 2, 1855.

The Secretary of the Russian Legation, who came passenger in the steamer Washington, was robbed here yesterday of five hundred Holland ducats, valued at about one thousand dollars.

Further from Mexico.

Baltimore, Dec. 2, 1855.

The New Orleans mails of Sunday and Monday last are received. The papers contain Mexican dates to the 22d ult. The condition of that country had not improved, and disagreements still prevailed among the ministers. The Ministry of War was still vacant. Senor Priete, Minister of Finance, had also resigned.

Thirty-Fourth Congress.

FIRST SESSIONS.

Washington, Dec. 3, 1855.

We were favored with beautiful weather today, and our streets presented quite a holiday appearance. At an early hour crowds wended their way to the Capitol, and the galleries, particularly that of the House, were crowded to excess; many were not able to find accommodation.

SENATE.

The Senate was called to order at noon, the new members were sworn in, and, after fixing upon 12 o'clock as the regular hour of meeting, an adjournment was made and carried.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. Forney, the Clerk, called the House of Representatives to order at noon. The confusion which existed up to this time abruptly terminated. Two hundred and twenty-five members answered to their names.

On motion of Mr. Jones (dem.) of Tenn., the House proceeded to the election of a Speaker.

No election—113 being necessary to a choice. The House, upon the declaration of the result of the fourth vote, adjourned.

Strike of the New Orleans Fire Department.

New Orleans, Dec. 1, 1855.

Twenty-nine out of our thirty fire companies marched in procession to Lafayette Square at noon to-day, and surrendered the city apperatus, in consequence of the non-payment of appropriations, and other slights from the city government.

Health of Judge Douglas.

Terre Haute, Dec. 1, 1855.

Judge Douglas is now out o' danger, and is improving rapidly. He will leave for Washington within the next two weeks.

Washington, Dec. 3, 1855.

Dispatches by the Atlantic represent our affairs with England as wholly unchanged since the departure of the Canada. Mr. Buchanan says that Lord Clarendon and the British Cabinet are endeavoring to patch up a reply to our Government's communication in reference to the violation of our Neutrality laws by British agents, in order, if possible, not to wound our sentiments, and at the same time shield Mr. Crampton.

Our Government has formally acted on the memorial of Denmark, proposing a capitalization or a tax according to the value of the cargo, in lieu of the present Sound dues, and rejected the proposition.

Caucuses are being held to-night. It is generally understood that the Black "Republicans" and Free Soilers will concentrate tomorrow on Banks, and numbering one hundred and twenty-three they will be sufficient to elect him.

A caucus of Southern Know Nothings and National Democrats and Whigs, numbering seventy-three, resolved to reject all fusion with the Free Soil factions, but have no hope of defeating them.

Messrs. Greeley, Weed, and Seward have been working all day to fuse the factions, and are understood to have succeeded.

We may look for the organization of the House to-morrow, and the President's Message on Wednesday.

Shocking Casualties.

Albany, Dec. 4, 1855.

Four young men were drowned on Friday last, below Long Point light house, on Lake Ontario, in attempting to take in a gill net.

The house of Mrs. Spelman, on Palmer Hill, Essex county, was burned down on Sunday morning, burning to death three children, from one to nine years old.

Decision on the Liquor Law.

Detroit, Dec. 4, 1855.

A Police Justice of this city to-day delivered an opinion declaring the prohibitory liquor law unconstitutional in every important respect.

Canal Navigation—Weather, &c.

Rochester, Dec. 4, 1855.

There is no ice in the canal here, and boats are moving briskly. The water will probably be drawn off to-morrow, unless it it otherwise ordered. Weather delightful.

The Sear and Yellow Leaf of a Statesman.

The correspondent of the New York Journal of Commerce, writing from Buffalo, says: "I spent a forenoon with Gen. Cass. The old man 'still lives' in the autumnal glories of a well spent life; is hale, hearty, and worth four millions. His career has indeed been very successful. He speaks in foreboding language of our national prospects, and is strong in the belief that disunion will yet carry its banner over the Republic. He doubtless prays that his eyes may 'never be turned to behold for the last time the sun in heaven shining on the broken and dishonored fragments of once a glorious Union.'"

Shipping of the World.

NAVAL VESSELS.

Great Britain is said to have 800 vessels, of every size, in her navy; the French, 300; and the United States not more than 80.

COMMERCIAL VESSELS.

The following table shows the comparative strength of the commercial marine of the principal nations of the world in 1854:

	Vessels.	Ton'ge.
United States	40,500	5,661,418
Great Britain and Colonies	35,960	5,043,270
France	14,354	716,230
Spain	7,986	379,921
Sardinia, Tuscany, Naples, Sicily and Papal States	17,097	546,021
Austria	7,708	324,447
Greece	3,970	264,981
Turkey	2,220	882,000
Holland	2,790	264,984
Hamburg	869	119,881
Bremen	500	180,000
Prussia	1,990	368,729
Denmark	4,789	208,109
Norway	852	388,632
Sweden	386	147,928
Mexico and the States of South America	1,580	193,735
Russia	—	105,509

The shipping of the world is estimated at 155,000 vessels, and the aggregate tonnage at 15,500,000.

Hunt's Magazine estimates that at fifty dollars the ton, the shipping of the world is worth the enormous amount of $775,000,000; of this fifteen and a half millions of tonnage, more than ten and a half millions belong to the English race.

Tunnel Under the Bristish Channel.

The feasibility of constructing a tunnel under the British Channel, between Dover and Boulogne, a distance of about nineteen miles, has been determined by a French engineer, who has recently completed the survey.

The estimated cost is $20,000,000. The following is a description of the plan of the tunnel:

"The distance between the top of the arch of the tunnel and the water will never be less than 27 1-2 yards, so that all danger of the ocean breaking through will be avoided by this enormous thickness of what may be called the wall of the tunnel. This tunnel will be lined with a double arch, the first of granite and of impermeable cement, and the second of thin iron plates, pierced like a collander with small holes, so that the slightest leakage will be instantly discovered.

"Through this tunnel it is intended that an atmospheric railroad shall be established, thereby avoiding the smoke consequent on the use of an ordinary locomotive, by which the transit from end to end will be performed in twenty-five minutes, and all the terrible sea-sickness so awful to the continent-seeking cockny entirely avoided.

"The natural objection that arises to the practicability of this stupendous work, is the difficulty of getting rid of the earth and stone quarried out of the bowels of the subterranean chamber. In the ordinary course of engineering, every barrow load of earth would have to be brought to one of the mouths of the tunnel, which operation would consume so much time and labor as to add enormously to the expenses. This difficulty Mr. Favre proposes to surmount by sinking along the course of the tunnel what he calls 'maritime wells,' which will divide this subterranean gallery into sections of about eleven thousand yards each in length. By these wells, all the encumbering earth will be thrown into the sea, forming islands about the wells themselves, and strengthening them. These wells will serve the purpose of ventilating the tunnel."

Abolitionism Rebuked.

The Burlington (Vt.) Sentinel administers the following rebuke to the hot-headed Abolitionists:

Rev. Dr. Adams, of Boston, in his "South Side View of Slavery"—one of the most candid books that appeared on this interesting topic—says:

"What had the South done to injure us, except through our sensibilities on the subject of slavery? What have we done to her, but admonish, threaten, excommunicate her, stir up insurrection among her slaves, endanger her homes, make her Christians and ministers odious in other lands?"

* * * * *

"What has she ever done, except in self-defence, in our long quarrel, which, upon reconciliation, would rankle in our memories, and make it hard for us to forgive and forget? Positively not one thing. We have been the assailants, she the mark; we the prosecutors, she the defendant; we the accusers, she the self-denying respondent."

The South is not responsible for the existence of Slavery in this country. This fact is as well known to every Northern fanatic as the commonest event in our national history. Yet the abolitionists of the North have borne themselves towards the South as if it was accountable for its existence and its evils. Their conduct has been marked by injustice and intolerance, and their measures of aggression have been pushed with all the boldness and ferocity of frenzied zeal. All the South asks of the North is to be let alone. "Leave us," they say, "to regulate our own domestic institutions." The South have never been the aggressors, and have only retaliated when pushed to the wall by Northern insolence and injustice. A few weeks ago, we showed that during the labor of twenty years, the abolitionists had not reclaimed one foot of slave territory, or legally or honestly freed one slave from bondage. During this time they have spent money enough, according to Daniel Webster's calculation, to purchase the liberty of every slave in Maryland. Yet the free soil element insists upon agitation—insists upon intermedling with the institutions of slavery, with the effect of their mischievous interference staring them in the face—insists upon enforcing a policy that would rend the Union asunder and spread the blight of desolation over our political fields.

"How the lofty spirit of other days towers above this modern disunion spirit, and makes it shrink into a thing of loathing! Down with the principles, the measures, and the parties that would tear asunder the bonds that unite this great country. They war against interests of human freedom; they violate the noblest instincts of American patriotism; they would blight forever the fair tree of American liberty. Patriots, friends of one common country, did not Washington speak the words of truth, when he said in his immortal Farewell Address, 'there will always be reason to distrust the patriotism of those who, in any quarter, may endeavor to weaken the bonds of our Union!' Listen to his last words, and indignantly frown upon these attempts to alienate one portion of the country from the rest."—[N. Y. Sunday Dispatch.

Foreign Immigration and Slavery.

The Charleston Standard attributes the greater prosperity and increase of the population of the North to foreign immigration. The argument is, that in the South labor is confined to a servile class, whose numbers cannot be artificially increased, because of the law prohibiting the foreign slave trade; whereas at the North, the tide of immigration continually furnishes, in addition to the natural increase, thousands of stout arms to dig the canals, the railroads, cultivate the soil, and develope the country generally. This is true enough, as far as it goes. But would not the South be equally benefited by foreign immigration, if it had not been for its servile institutions? Undoubtedly it would–for the soil and climate of the South are quite as inviting as those of the North. Our friends see the evils that retard their progress, and seek to remove the "peculiar institution" in a mild and rational way, instead of looking upon it as something that must eternally exist. Slavery of all kinds must ultimately be done away with; and our opposition to the abolition fanatics of the North is not because of our love of negro slavery, but because the spirit of fanaticism they manifest has the effect to blind the South to its true interests, and postpone the day when slavery shall be known no more forever. Had it not been for Northern fanatics, there would now be more free States in the Union than there are, and the cause of emancipation would be rapidly advancing. From an article on foreign immigration, recently published in Hunt's Merchants' Magazine, it appears that, had foreign immigration been stopped in 1750, the population of these United States would have only been seven millions and a third, in 1850, instead of twenty millions, the actual population, in round numbers, as declared by the census. This calculation is based on the population in 1790, and its increase, by natural causes, in sixty years. It is corroborated by a calculation, based on the number of immigrants and their descendants, showing that, since 1820, these amount to more than eight millions and a half, and since 1790 to nearly twelve millions and a half.—[N. Y. Sunday Dispatch.

A Remarkable Man.

A Correspondent of the Kentucky Statesman gives the following account of an old citizen of Pulaski county, named Elijah Deny, who is perhaps the oldest man in Kentucky. He was one hundred and eighteen years of age on the 10th of September, and is as active as any man of forty. He works daily upon a farm, and throughout his whole life he has been an early riser. He informed the writer that he had never drank but one cup of coffee, and that was in the year 1848. He served seven years in the war of the Revolution, and was wounded at the siege of Charleston; he was also at the siege of Savannah and the battle of Eutaw Springs; he was also present at the battles of Camden, King's Mountain, and Monk's Corner. He served under Col. Horry and Col. Marion, and was an eye-witness of the sufferings and death of Col. Isaac Hayne, of South Carolina, an early victim of the Revolution. He is sprightly and active, and would be taken at any time to be a man of middle age. He is a strict member of the Baptist Church and rides six miles to every meeting of his Church. He has four sons and five daughters, all living, the oldest being now in his seventy-eighth, and the youngest in his fifty-first year. Such is a brief sketch of this aged soldier and republican, who is perhaps the only surviving soldier of Francis Marion, Sumpter, and Horry.

Sharpening Edge Tools.

We translate the following from a German scientific journal for the benefit of our mechanics and agricultural laborers: "It has long been known that the simplest method of sharpening a razor is to put it for half an hour into water into which has been added one-twentieth of its weight of muriatic or sulphuric acid, then lightly wipe it off, and after a few hours set it on a hone. The acid here supplies the place of a whetstone by corroding the whole surface uniformly, so that nothing further but a smooth polish is necessary. The process never injures good blades, while badly hardened ones are frequently improved by it, although the cause of such improvement remains unexplained. Of late this process has been applied to many other cutting implements. The workman at the beginning of his noon spell, or when he leaves off in the evening, moistens the blades of his tools with water acidified as above, the cost of which is almost nothing. This saves the consumption of time and labor in whetting, which moreover speedily wears out the blades. The mode of sharpening here indicated would be found especially advantageous for sickles and scythes."—[Ex.

On the 31st Oct., Samuel Collins, a member of the Kansas Legion, met Pat Laughlin (who was said to have belonged to the same association, and to have made public their designs), and tried to shoot him, but his gun missed fire, whereupon Laughlin drew a revolver and shot him through the heart, Laughlin receiving a dangerous stab in the abdomen. The fight took place at Doniphan, Missouri

Corn and Cob Meal for Horses.

The editor of the Michigan Farmer has been experimenting on corn and cob meal for horse feed, for a couple of months exclusively, and with the following results:

After one month's feeding, febrile symptoms were occasionally observed in one of the horses, such as short and quick breathing, and other symptoms.

On stating the case to Dr. Dadd, the celebrated veterinary surgeon of Boston, it elicited the following valuable letter. The importance of occasional change of food, which it recommends, is not sufficiently attended to by the farmers in feeding their stock:

"As regards your horse, (it he is better,) I would change the diet immediately. He is probably suffering from acute, perhaps chronic indigestion, which is very apt to occur in animals when kept too long on one kind of diet. No fact in dietetics is better established than that of the impossibility of long sustaining health or even life on one kind of diet. It fails to support nutrition. (See Liebig and Carpenter.) The animals experimented upon, after a certain length of time, seemed willing to endure starvation rather than live on one kind of diet. As regards the adult horse, however, he will exist for some time on highly nutritious articles, such as oats, barley, corn, &c., but finally induce diseases such as laminitis, rheumatism, founder, &c. They do not require so much of the flesh-making principle as the young and growing animal, which not only requires sufficient carbon in the form of food to renovate the tissues, but also enough for growth and development.

The adult, however, requires a greater variety of food than the latter to support the integrity of his organization; consequently, as you have fed your horse on corn and cob meal all winter, there may be a disproportion between the amount of carbon (in the form of food) and the oxygen respired; hence his digestion must be deranged, or carbon (in the form of fat) is deposited in the various tissues. A fat horse, of course you are aware, is not the one for fast work or fatigue, and, the emaciated excepted, is more likely to become sick from the least exciting cause. On the other hand, an excess of carbonaceous material deranging the stomach—it holding sympathetic relation with the brain—is apt to terminate in staggers, &c.

It should be known to horsemen that an adult horse ought not to increase in weight from year to year; the food may be proportioned to work; any increase in flesh or fat is a signal to dip a lighter hand into the meal bag—that is, if you want to keep disease and death at bay. It pays to fatten cattle, sheep and swine, because the result is dollars and cents; but you may depend that it is a losing spec to fatten horses; for among such I have the most practice, their diseases being more difficult to control than when occurring in others, in fair working order. In the first place, they do not always masticate it properly; it being soft and easily salivated, they are apt to bolt it, as the saying is. In order to obviate the difficulty, the meal ought to be mixed with cut hay or straw, articles that must be masticated ere swallowed. Should the digestive organs be deranged, meal ferments very rapidly, inducing flatulency.

I should not object to giving a horse a feed of corn and cob meal occasionally, mixing it with cut hay and a little salt. Salt is a good antiseptic; prevents fermentation; affords, by the decomposition in the stomach, muriatic acid and soda; aids digestion, and prevents the generating of worms.

The best remedies for restoring digestive functions are: Powdered salt, three ounces; powdered ginger, one quarter ounce; powdered charcoal, one ounce. Mix, divide into eight parts, and give one with the food night and morning.—[Western Agriculturist.

Romance of Life.

The Cincinnati Enquirer furnishes the following touching incident: We heard the particulars of one of those strange episodes in life in which the old adage of "truth is stranger than fiction" was fully illustrated. About six years since a lady named Mrs. Martha Wood, accompanied by her son, his wife and two children, arrived in this city from New Bedford, Mass. She stated that she was a widow of some twenty-four years standing, her husband having been mate of a whaler, which had been lost at sea. The family resided for the greater portion of the time on Liberty street, Mr. Wood, the son, working at his trade, which is that of a cooper. A gray-headed and toil-worn man called at the residence of the family, and seeing Mr. Wood, inquired for the widow, who, being called into the room, while gazing intently at the stranger, whose eyes were fixed mournfully upon her, requested to know his business. "Do you not know me, Martha?" said he, and as the sound of his voice, like the memory of an olden melody, met her ear, she gave vent to a hysterical cry and fainted in the arms which were opened to receive her. The tale is soon told. The ship in which he had made his last voyage from New Bedford was cast away in the South Sea Islands, and he was one of the few who escaped a watery grave. After enduring almost unheard of privations, he succeeded, after thirty years' absence, in reaching his native city. From a brother of his wife he learned their present location, and arrived here to find her whom he had left a young and blooming bride far advanced in the evening of life, while the infant, upon whose lips, when he last saw him, he had imprinted a father's kiss, and who could then scarcely lisp his name, was now a stalwart man and the head of a family. How many hopes and fears must have agitated the heart of the old mariner as he again set foot, after his long pilgrimage, upon his native soil.

A Female Volunteer.

The British steam troop-ship Simoon, Capt. Sullivan, left Spithead on Tuesday, the 30th ult., for Balaklava, with the First Light Infantry Regiment of the British German Legion. A rather romantic circumstance attended the departure of these troops. On Monday night, one of the privates was discovered to be a woman, and a very fine, handsome young woman, too—French, the wife of a soldier of the reigment, who is a Swiss. This gallant wife regularly enlisted and passed muster, it would appear, afterwards. On the discovery of her sex, the fact was reported to the colonel, who ordered her to be landed, but she begged so hard, and her appeal was so heartily and generally supported by the comrades of her husband, that she has been allowed to accompany him in her capacity as a soldier, pro tem., as she expressed her determination to fight and die in the same service as her husband. The enthusiasm of the regiment was universal at this unlooked-for episode in the outset of their martial career. So pleased were a number of visitors to the ship, officers and men, with her spirit and prepossessing appearance, that a subscription was speedily raised of upwards of £50 for her. She shoulders her rifle, and has performed her military evolutions admirably.

The latest estimates of the population of the world make it eleven hundred and fifty millions, viz: Pagans, 676,000,000; Christians, 320,000,000; Mohammedans, 140,000,000; Jews, 14,000,000. Of Christians, the Church of Rome numbers 170,000,000; the Greek and Eastern Churches, 60,000,000; Protestants, 90,000,000.

A matrimonial alliance of an uncommon character has lately been effected in Fluvana county, Va. Mr. Robert Grey, the gallant groom, is 95 years of age, and the late Mrs. Catharine Riley (now Mrs. Grey) 92 years of age.

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the trangression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The fourth is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and tha, when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the 'laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Bien-aimés frères, je désire, en commencant cette publication, vous adresser quelques paroles. Le Seigneur, dans sa bonté et sa miséricorde, a jugé convenable de restaurer au monde l'Evangile primitif, dans toute la simplicité, la beauté et la pureté qu'il avait autrefois, parmi les chrétiens des premiers temps, aux jours de Jésus et de ses Apôtres.

La lumière de la vérité a éclaté au milieu des ténèbres et de la corruption des hommes, en ce temps où le monde est déchiré par mille opinions contradictoires.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Si nous suivons attentivement l'action de Dieu sur le genre humain, nous trouverons que tous ces maux proviennent de ce que les nations et les peuples se sont éloignés de Dieu; et rien moins qu'un retour à lui ne peut arrêter la terrible tempête, calmer la mer furieuse, tranquilliser les passions capricieuses des hommes, et rendre au monde moral, religieux et politique, cet ordre qui règne dans la création physique de Dieu.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui règle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

C'est la religion que vous croyez et que vous enseignez, qui est destinée à restaurer l'homme et la terre; c'est elle qui ramènera les peuples à Dieu, qui les retirera du chaos moral, religieux et politique du monde, et les rassemblera en un peuple qui sera conduit et reconnu de Dieu; qui sera honoré devant les hommes et les nations; et qui aidera à établir et à développer le royaume de Dieu dans ces derniers jours.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaitraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? Ou devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours?

Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconque demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Evangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés?" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit?" Nous le faisons aussi. Crurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains, par la foi en Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "l'espoir en la résurrection?" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.?" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.?" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions à son Eglise actuelle.

Nous demanderons ce qu'il y a d'inconséquent en tout cela? Lequel est le plus inconséquent, de croire et de pratiquer les Ecritures, ou de dire, nous les croyons et puis de les nier à notre organisation, à nos doctrines, à nos œuvres.

Mais des visions, des prophèties, des révélations n'ont-elles pas une tendance à conduire à l'enthousiasme et au fanatisme? Oui, les visions humaines et les délusions de Satan l'ont. Mais si le Seigneur eût pensé que ses visions et ses révélations fussent préjudiciables aux hommes, pourquoi les aurait-il données dans les anciens temps? Si elles doivent être préjudiciables de nos jours, certainement elles l'eussent été autrefois. L'enthousiasme, la folie et le fanatisme des hommes est une chose; autre chose est Dieu révélant sa volonté aux peuples pour leur organisation, leur stabilité, leur consolation, leur union, leur savoir, leur édification, et pour l'établissement de son royaume.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaître Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Les philosophes ont scruté l'homme, la terre, les œuvres e la création pour trouver un vrai système, Ils ont tous eu leur jour. Ils ont introduit beaucoup de bons principes, mais quant à l'amélioration du monde, là, ils ont fait défaut. Leurs systèmes, quelque bons que soient plusieurs d'entre eux, sont bien loin d'embrasser l'objet désiré: "Ils ont été pesés dans la balance, et trouvés trop légers."

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaître que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence, ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les excès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lascivité, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votro lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

To the Emigration and Our Readers Generally.

We shall endeavor to be always prepared to impart the latest information relative to the best course to be pursued by Emigrants on their arrival in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

Our emigration have heretofore, almost exclusively, gone by the way of New Orleans, but will hereafter land in the Eastern cities, and one of the principal objects of establishing "THE MORMON" is for their information, as well as all other emigration arriving in this country.

We shall take special interest in seeking out the cheapest, best and most convenient mode of conveyance from this and other points, as well as to observe the course pursued by agents in the accommodation for travelers on the routes, and make of "THE MORMON" a directory, to which all Emigrants and Travelers may refer with some degree of safety.

A Card to the Saints.

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "THE MORMON." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish, you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

ROUTE FROM LIVERPOOL
TO THE
GREAT SALT LAKE VALLEY:
ILLUSTRATED,
By a Series of splendid STEEL ENGRAVINGS and WOOD CUTS, from Sketches made on the spo from Life, in 1853, expressly for this work, by
FREDERICK PIERCY,
AND CONTAINING A MAP OF THE OVERLAND PORTION OF THE JOURNEY.
EDITED BY JAMES LINFORTH.
This highly and interesting Work will form a narrative of the Journey from Liverpool to Great Salt Lake Valley, and will give Historical, Descriptive, and Statistical Information respecting the places, and the Indian Tribes on the route, and in Utah Territory.
The mode in which the Latter Day Saints' emigration is conducted; a review o it from the commencement; and incidental instructions to emigrants, will constitute an early part of the Work.
The Statistical information will be drawn from the most authentic sources, and consequently may be relied upon. That portion of it which relates to the Latter Day Saints, will be particularly valuable, owing to the difficulty hitherto experienced by all classes in obtaining anything accurate, from the conflicting statements which have appeared from time to time, in a great portion of the public press.

Poetry.

Rejoice! Ye Scattered Saints.

BY JOHN JAQUES.

Rejoice! Rejoice! ye scattered Saints,
Be glad! Dry every tear;
The Lord has heard your cries for aid,
Deliverance is near.

Rejoice! all ye who've labored long
To make the Gospel known,
Who've toiled and struggled many years
To roll the "little stone."

Rejoice! ye who have fed, lodged, clothed
The Elders in their need,
Them money given, though scant your means;
You shall be blessed indeed.

Rejoice! all ye who've been oppressed
Full many a gloomy day,
Who've prayed the dark and lowering clouds
Would break and pass away.

Rejoice! ye who have had to leave,
For truth and for the Lord,
Friends, wealth, fair prospects; you shall have
Your hundred-fold reward.

Rejoice! Rejoice! ye weary ones,
Who patiently have borne
The heat and burden of the day,
Though weak and faint and worn.

A word of cheer you've waited for,
And now that word has come—
"Search through the land the faithful poor
To Zion bring them home."

Rejoice! that now your open door
To Zion's courts appears;
Rejoice! and to old Babylon
Bequeath your griefs and fears.

Rejoice! let Israel all rejoice,
And praise the Lord once more,
That Brigham sends the word, the power
To save the humble poor.

Emigration.

We have great pleasure in submitting to our readers the following letter:

OFFICE PERPETUAL EMIGRATING FUND COMPANY,
GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, Aug. 31, 1855.

DEAR BROTHER FRANKLIN—We send a few names, in another letter, whose passage through has been settled here in advance; which is the course we shall pursue in future if any are sent for from this office; this limits the number considerably, as payments are not quite so plenty as promises, and will give you a much greater chance to help on those in Britain who have been in the Church from the introduction of the Gospel on those lands; old members, many of whom have remained poor and unable to get away, or through infirmity are remaining, comparitively unnoticed in the Branches, and will soon lay down their bones in Babylon if not brought away. Brother Franklin, God requires us to help these out, and bring them to Zion, where they can be taken care of, and not suffered to want for the necessaries of life; hunt them out, they are not the most clamorous, and you will need to make a thorough investigation all through the Branches, that none of these old members be suffered to remain, who are longing for deliverance.

You may publish this letter, that they may read it, and know their privileges, and our feelings towards those who have in a measure proved their love to the Gospel.

Some of the brethren here have donated property to a large amount to the P. E. F. Co., and I alone have donated to the amount of upwards of $60,000, a description of which is forwarded to you, and we recommend the rich brethren to buy, that they may be located in pleasant places when they arrive, and we require of all the brethren who obey the Gospel in Europe, who are rich, to tithe their substance on becoming members of the Church, and it will be made available to gather Israel.

Yours in the Covenant,
BRIGHAM YOUNG,
President of the P. E. F. Co.

The above communication will cheer the hearts of those Saints who have long been waiting—how anxiously, they alone have realized—for their liberation from the confines of Babylon. Many, we doubt not, have hoped on so long, that fond anticipation had given way a little to the shades of despair. The favor of the Lord and His servants seems now especially turning towards such, and we say, hope on still, and let not your faith falter.

The first great object to accomplish, after the Church was driven into the wilderness, was to prepare, as fast as possible, a place to which the poor could be gathered in safety, and find the means of subsistence.

The P. E. Fund Company was organized for the especial object of gathering the poor. In order to accomplish this in the most efficient manner, it has been wisdom heretofore to use the limited means at its disposal, in a way best calculated to strengthen as fast as possible the infant settlements of the Church. This has been done to a considerable extent by assisting many who were able to furnish in part the funds necessary for their emigration. The Lord has sanctioned the efforts of His people by abundantly pouring out His blessing upon them. The borders of Zion have become enlarged, and her stakes strong. Numerous sources of productive labor are now open, through which those who are dependent on their hands alone, may readily obtain the necessaries of life, and in a few years be able to extend assistance to others. Cities are rapidly rising on every side, in which the houseless poor on their arrival can find shelter from the inclemencies of the first winter, instead of living in wagons or in rooms made in the earth, as thousands have done heretofore, because there had not been time to build a supply of houses. Farms have multiplied, and consequently the means for producing an abundant supply of food have greatly increased, so that the poor need not want, nor any person who will labor go hungry. Finally, the Lord has so abundantly blessed the faithful in Zion, that they are able, and, what is quite as essential, willing to practically manifest the anxiety they have ever felt for the gathering of Israel, by offering their fine houses, mills, and farms for that purpose. It now devolves on the brethren in this country, who have the means, to manifest a corresponding spirit in this glorious work, by coming forward and purchasing these pleasant places which have been prepared for them through the suffering and toils of their pioneer brethren.

The word of the Lord is to gather out the aged, the infirm, and the destitute, those who for years have struggled on true to their God and their brethren, and who have continually, with a free and liberal spirit, administered to the Elders, and used the little that the Lord had given them to build up His kingdom. He has thus opened the way for the wealthy to use their means for the benefit of the poor without detriment to themselves, and the responsibility of their not doing so now rests upon them.

The Saints who have property are also required to tithe their substance, that it may be used for gathering the poor. The question will naturally arise in the minds of such—"What will be the result if we should not do this?" We answer, that the Spirit of the Lord will forsake them and they will not enjoy the blessings of the Priesthood. They will go into darkness and be cut short in their salvation. This is all the compulsion that there is here or in Utah on the subject. It simply amounts to this—it determines which a man loves best, his wealth and its enjoyments, or the kingdom of God and its blessings; the good things of this life, or of that which is to come. The principle is not simply laid before the Saints, but the requirement is made, and those who profess to seek first the kingdom of God and its righteousness, are expected to live up to this law.

A list of the property donated to the P. E. Fund Company by President Young and others in Utah, has been forwarded to us. The object is to sell this property to such of the brethren in this country as have the money to pay for it, and then use the money to emigrate the poor the coming year, agreeable to the spirit and instructions of President Young's letter. Much of this property we personally know can be classed with the best in Utah. A large flouring mill on Big Kanyon Creek, about six miles from the Temple Block in G. S. L. City, we are informed paid for itself in three years. A fine house and lot in a good location, fronting Union Square, and offered at $12,000, is now renting at $2,000 in cash per annum, or at 16 2-3 per cent. on estimated value. President Young's white house, with barn, carriage house, and other buildings appertaining to it, is considered by many as occupying the finest location in G. S. L. Valley, and overlooks nearly the whole of G. S. L. City. It is a desirable place for any person who might wish to have a comfortable and convenient home ready on his arrival in the Mountains. The conditions on which this property is offered, it would seem, might meet the views of the most fastidious. Should any portion of the property be sold there, before President Young is advised of a sale of it here, the money paid here will be refunded on presentation of our draft in Utah, or property of equal value given in lieu of it. If the property purchased does not suit the purchaser, they can have the use of it for the use of the money until it is refunded. In some one of these ways it is presumed that the views of purchasers can be met. In addition to the property here mentioned, there is offered quite a variety of houses, city lots, and farming land, concerning which we will give all the information in our possession to persons who are desirous to purchase. The great object is to obtain the means to assist the poor Saints to enjoy the blessings of the gathering. We hope that this feeling will find a warm response in the hearts of all Latter-day Saints throughout the length and breadth of this country who have surplus means at their disposal. We trust that the Lord will give them no rest in spirit until they have come up to the help of the poor in Israel, and, in blessing them, also bless themselves. It is required of the rich to use their thousands of pounds to do good with, just as much as it is of the poor to use their pennies, and they cannot reap equal blessings without doing so.

We now call upon the Pastors and Presidents in the various fields of labor to go to, and diligently search out all those brethren and sisters who joined the Church in an early day, say from ten to eighteen years ago, and who have been faithful in the cause of truth. We wish a report of such forwarded to this Office, embracing the following items—the number of years they have been in the Church, their age, country of nativity, and probable amount of means that they can furnish towards their emigration, that so soon as we are enabled to turn the property placed at our disposal into cash, we may have the proper information before us to act upon, and be able to take such measures as will most efficiently carry out the designs of the First Presidency. The number emigrated by the P. E. F. Company the coming season will of course depend upon the amount of means which can thus be obtained. The P. E. Fund monies can not be used to assist any except those who go directly through to Utah, and in charge of the Company's agents.

The world around us have much to say about favoritism in their operations. They generally bestow their patronage from personal regard and attachment, without paying much attention to correct principles in the matter, or to the real worthiness of the object of their favor. This is not the favoritism which is now called for, but we wish the Elders to be diligent in searching out more particularly those who have patiently and perhaps silently endured all things for the Gospel's sake. It is the Lord's poor that we are so emphatically called upon to help, and length of service, faithfulness, age, and destitution should be the special, prominent reasons for bestowing favor and the blessings of the gathering.—[Millennial Star, Nov. 24.

Equality of the States.

THE Washington Union has received the following from the Attorney General's Office:

It has been adjudged by a long series of decisions of the Supreme Court, that the United States never held any municipal sovereignty, jurisdiction, or right of soil in the territory of which any of the new States are formed, except for temporary purposes, viz: to execute trusts created by deeds of cession of Virginia, Massachusetts, Georgia, and other States in the original common territory of the Union, or by treaties with France, Spain, and the Mexican Republic, in the Territories of Louisiana, the Floridas, New Mexico and California.

It has been adjudged by the same series of decisions that the provisions of the ordinance for the organization of the Northwest Territory were extinguished by the Constitution; or if any of them retain continuing validity, it is only so far as they may have authority derived from some other source, either the compacts of cession or acts of Congress under the Constitution.

This doctrine has been applied in leading cases to questions touching the property in public lands, the relation of master and slave, religion, navigable waters, and the eminent domain, and may be taken as the established legal truth.

In obedience to the same principle, and proceeding in the same line of adjudications, it must have been held, if the question had come up for judicial determination, that the provision of the Act of March 6th, 1820, which undertakes to determine in advance a perpetual rule of municipal law for all that portion of the province of Louisiana which lies North of the parallel of 36 deg. 30 min. North latitude, was null and void ab incepto, because incompatible with the organic fact of equality of internal right, in all respects, between the old and new States.

SURROUNDED BY DELICATE CIRCUMSTANCES.—The Hartford Times tells us that, a few days ago, while a mechanic of that city was at work among a shop full of companions, of both sexes, a young woman entered with an infant in her arms, and marching straight up to him, deposited the baby on the table before him, with the remark, "Here's your child—I shan't take care of it any longer"—and vanished, leaving him the unexpected possessor of an interesting piece of property. The girls laughed at the poor fellow, but he put on the best face he could, and provided accommodations for the smiling little cherub.

Political.

* * * The vote of the State of New York counts thirty-five in an aggregate of two hundred and ninety-two electorial votes. Her vote, by common consent, decides the election. Since 1812, New York's vote has always been given to the successful Presidential candidate. No other State comes near her in strength and importance. Pennsylvania, the next highest, has but twenty-seven votes. Ohio and Virginia but twenty-three and fifteen. The rest are away behind. New York is the Empire State.

* * * * New York, with the united Southern States, can elect a President without the aid of any other Nothern State! And New York can be carried by the Democracy, by the nomination of the sort of candidate we have described. If the Democrats do not put one up, the Know Nothings may.

That we may not be misunderstood we should perhaps add that no Democratic candidate should be tinctured in any manner with Know Nothingism. We do not ask, nor expect to support, one whose "faith has been modified by the essential portions of the creed of the American party." No such thing. Let him be the unbending and determined opponent of Nativism. New York is not Nativist; but it is National. It will not approve Free Soilism, Softism or any leaning toward that heresy, come in what shape it will. National men have gone into the secret "Order" because they thought they saw no where else to go. They wanted to strike down the Van Buren Softs and the Sewardites both at once. These men form the bulk of the Know Nothing organization—and direct and control it moreover. They do not care that the next President shall be a Nativist; but they do care that he shall be a National man.—[N. Y. Daily News, Dec. 5th.

Fillmore and Stuart.

MUCH has been said and written recently about the probable candidates of the democratic party for the offices of President and Vice President. We must confess that we are almost entirely indifferent as to the selections the democrats may make. We, however, have a little partiality for Wise, the letter writer of Onaly, near Onancock; for we would like to have him stump the Union, tell the abolitionists of their sins face to face, and fight if he must. Wise is a brave man, and can talk bravely at long taw; we would, therefore, like to see him test his spunk, by meeting our enemies, and giving some real evidence of his superior courage. We are for Wise. But we are more interested about the probable candidates of our own party than those of another party. We believe that if the proper selections are made, the "American party" can triumphantly elect the next President and Vice President of the United States.

The signs of the times indicate that with the Hon. Millard Fillmore for the Presidency and the Hon. A. H. H. Stuart for the Vice Presidency, we could rout the democratic foreign Catholic party, horse, foot and dragoons, and rid ourselves of democratic misrule. Mr. Fillmore, during his entire administration, did nothing that was not worthy of Washington himself. He has secured the confidence of the whole American people, and his re-election to the Presidency would be hailed as the harbinger of better days for the republic. We are sure that a generous people would delight to honor him.

Mr. Stuart is a man of whom we need say nothing. He, no less than Mr. Fillmore, deserves the support and confidence of the people of the republic, and we are confident that our party could not select a man upon whom they could bestow their suffrages with more credit to themselves or with better chances of success.

If these men are nominated by the American party, we shall support them willingly, heartily and with all the ability we possess.—[Harrisburg (Va.) American.

IN the Lutheran established church of Sweden, every child must be baptized within eight days after it is born, whether the parents are drunkards or vagabonds, or no matter what they are. Should the parents refuse, as has been sometimes the case, the parents are sent for by the indignant pastor, with a civil commission, and by force of arms the little stranger is dragooned into the church!

Violin and Fiddles;

Or, How Jacob Lost his Money by not Going to School when he was a Boy.

NEAR Pittsburg, there lives an aged Dutchman, named Jacob Heineman, who has by his industry accumulated a large property. The old man is at all times ready to yield up his substance liberally to support schools. He deems it his duty to do this, feeling the want of early education in his own case.

A gentleman called upon Jacob, not long ago, to ask his aid in establishing an academy in an adjoining county, and in the course of an appeal to the old man's philanthrophy, he casually observed that there where many words in the English language which signify the same thing, and that it was necessary that boys should learn them from books.

"Schtop, schtop, I know dat," said Jacob. "Now I tell yer how I know dat. Some dwendy years ago, I goes down to Filadelfy mit mine vagon, to kit some koots for the Bittsburk merchants. Vell, I kits 'em, and up in de dop of de moundin mine vagon he sdicks fast in de moot. Den I takes of all mine koots, and puts 'em by the site of de road. Vell, misther schoolmaster, I, feels vun light parrel, and I say to mineself, 'Dere, dem poys in Macalester's shtore in Filadelfy blay on me anudder drick, dey send vun emdy parrel by me glear to Bittsburk.'

"Vell, I dakes de emdy parrel, and I puts him on his het up, and I sees him marked 'Violins.' Den I know it vas vun drick, pecause I knows dere vas no sich man in all Bittsburk as Mishter Violins. And I kits so mad mit mineself for being made sich a fool of, dat I shoost dakes mine axe and I prakes de emdy parrel all into leetle smashes. Now mishter schoolmaster, vit you dink vas in dat parrel marked to Mishter Violins? Fittles (fiddles), sur, all full of fittles! Vell, ven I kits to Bittsburk I have to bay doo hoontret dollars to vun Frenchman, shoost pecause I didn't know dat violins and fittles was de same dings. Now I gives you vun hoontret dollars for your pig school—here ish de money."—[Life Illustrated.

"A Little Ahead."

A GENTLEMAN in Maine, who wanted a hunting dog, heard that a farmer in a neighboring county had one for sale, which he recommended very highly. He called upon the farmer, saw the dog, and took a schedule of his merits, which were as numerous as the hairs on his body.

The purchaser was particularly anxious to have a good wolf dog, and upon that point, the assurances of the farmer were full and satisfactory. It was the best wolf dog in the State. Satisfied with his trade, the gentleman paid the price, which was by no means moderate, and took the dog home.

Not long after a light fall of snow furnished an opportunity to test the merits of his purchase. A wolf was started, and the probationer put on his track. Both animals were soon out of sight, and the owner or proprietor followed on as fast as he could. Presently he came up to a farm house, where he asked him if he had seen a dog and a wolf passing that way,

"Yes," was the reply.

"Well, how was it with them?"

"Well, it was about nip and tuck; but I think the dog was a leetle ahead."

A Yankee Trick.

At the late agricultural fair in Haverhill, a trial of the speed of horses was one of the performances contemplated; but an objection having been made to this taking place in the highway, a man by the name of Lee offered the committee and the competitors, and the lookers-on, free admission to his grounds, for the purpose. But when the game was over, and they were about to withdraw from the field, each of those who had entered were required to pay a quarter of a dollar before he could leave it. How many hundred dollars were collected, we are not advised; from the number about, we presume a considerable sum. We think it will be a long time before many of these spectators will again enter upon the grounds of this gentlemen, to witness a sport of this kind, in compliance with such an invitation.—[Salem Gazette.

THE St. Louis Intelligencer states that from thirty to forty dead men are taken out of the river opposite that city monthly.

Mormonism a Paradox.

ARTICLE I.

THERE is nothing, perhaps, that has transpired within the present century with which the human family have been more perplexed, than the subject of Mormonism. It came forth at first in weakness and feebleness, yet, at the same time, was it bold, fearless and independent. It claimed to be the offspring of heaven, the ushering in of a new dispensation; the restitution of pure principles, which had been perverted by idolatry and priestcraft: the ancient gospel restored; the revelations of God to man. It professed to be the church and kingdom of God; the Elias or restorer; a message of the Lord to the human family; a work preparatory to the second advent and glorious reign of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. It took a firm stand, and declaimed boldly against the corruptions of the age, religious, social, moral and political. It said that the heavens had been opened; that God had spoken; that angels had appeared; and that the ancient gospel had been restored in all its fullness, purity, richness, blessings, power and glory; with apostles and prophets, pastors, teachers and evangelists, (inspired men.) It claimed authority from heaven, a Melchizedec and Aaron priesthood, and a power to "bind on earth and in heaven," and to "loose on earth and in heaven." It professed all the revelations, gifts, tongues, interpretations, healings, miracles, prophesyings, and blessings, that were enjoyed by the primitive christians; and professed to be the restorer of everything good and pure that had emanated from the Lord, or been enjoyed by his people, in any and every age of the world. It professed to be the discoverer and translator of the records of the aboriginal inhabitants of this country, and ushered them forth to the world as the word of the Lord; of divine origin; professing to substantiate that claim by living testimony, and by ancient prophecy contained in the scriptures, which we had before. It professed authority to establish Zion, to call upon and gather the elect from all nations, to be empowered to teach them the ways of the Lord, and prepare them for the coming of the Messiah; with power to build temples and administer ordinances therein. Such were some of the leading items of its pretensions. It did not claim to be the mender or reformer of any of the old sects, but the restorer of ancient principles—of the primitive gospel of Jesus Christ. It professed not to obtain its authority from Protestant or Catholic; but from the revelations of Jesus Christ and holy angels commissioned of heaven. It did not profess to be "a new patch put on an old garment," but a new and everlasting gospel, an eternal, unchangeable principle—with eternal laws, covenants and priesthood, emanating from, and appointed and sustained by the Lord for the salvation of the human family.

The above principles at first assumed simply a religious form; but their proclamation and adoption naturally involved other principles than those that are generally looked upon as religious. In the first place, it is true we had church organization, which implied consolidation, order, arrangement, officers, councils, government and gathering; but that very church government and gathering produced an assemblage or consolidation of people, who, possessing bodies as well as spirits, assumed a political shape; whose wants had to be provided for socially, morally and politically, as well as religiously.

Whilst we were small and in our infancy, our votes were sought after by selectmen, constables, corporals, and pedagogues, whose necessities or pride of place prompted them to seek the suffrages of the Mormons as a stepping-stone to their humble aspirations for emolument or power. As we progressed, and from an integral part of a town became its sole possessors, we found it necessary to assume the functions of that town or towns; to order ourselves as good citizens of the commonwealth; to make provisions for the town officers; to regulate its police; and to attend to all duties, civil and military, that the law required at our hands. When, in the natural course of events, as we continued to increase, we built up a city and obtained a charter; it then became incumbent upon us to carry out the provisions of that charter; to elect a mayor, aldermen, and council; to organize a city council and municipal court; to make and execute laws; and to perform all the functions required of us and stipulated by our charter, in the capacity of a municipality. Furthermore, in our relations with a county, we have been called upon to vote for county and State officers, both civil and military, including members of the State Legislatures and Governors. And when, through a train of circumstances over which we had no control, we found ourselves in Mexican territory in the Far West, and that territory becoming a part of the United States, we, as Americans, following the example of Oregon, organized a provisional government—"Deseret"—and sought for admission into the Union; our organization was sanctioned by the Federal Government, our delegate admitted to Congress, the Territory of Utah organized, and in its "organic act" provision made for State and Federal officers; its legislative, judicial, and executive functions provided for, with all the civil and military, as well as Indian arrangement of a well ordered territorial government. We are now, necessarily, through a train of circumstances over which we have no control further than our religious faith, in the political position which we now occupy. These moves that we have made from time to time on the political mosaic, or chess-board of our nation, have not been with us solely a matter of choice, but of absolute necessity; and that not only in self-defence, bnt as a duty required of us by the institutions of our country, and as a requirement made of us as an integral part of this great commonwealth, and the which we are bound to perform, or become recreant to our duty as citizens of the United States. Our religion is the first moving cause in all these matters; the promulgation and adoption of that has caused all these others to flow in its train. This to many is an enigma.

Nor is the above confined to politics alone, but enters into all the relations of life; for the same reasons that we are bound to attend to our national affairs are we obliged to attend to the moral and social condition of our people; our religion implies gathering; that gathering imposes political obligations upon us, and our isolated position renders it necessary that we should attend to the moral and social condition of the community; and while we have our tabernacles and temples for religious instruction and ordinances, and our state and court-houses for the making and administration of law; that we have also our schools and seminaries; our codes, moral and social, for the instruction and guide of youth; for the advancement of art, science, and literature, and for the regulating of social life and the guardianship of our virtue and morals. Our religion has taught us to be free; it has taught us to reason, to reflect, to investigate; to test severely everything that we receive; to prove all things, and to hold fast that which is good; and believing in a living religion and a living God, that which is deficient in our own wisdom is made up to us by the Lord in the development of principle, in prophecy and visions, in "bringing the past to our remembrance, leading us into all truth and showing us things to come." These are our feelings; to many they are an enigma—to us they are straightforward matters of fact and duty, which we are religiously conscientious in observing.

Unlike most professions, Mormonism is not exclusively spiritual, but enters into all the ramifications of life. Many suppose they must separate religion from secular affairs; hence they have their churches and ministers to attend solely to religious matters. If we wished to separate them we could not; it is out of our power; our religion teaches the people to gather to Zion; this very gathering implies an effort, not only of the spirit, but of the body—a moving—an emigration. Before a person can emigrate he must dispose of his property, be he elder, priest, teacher, deacon, apostle, or president. When a company or companies move it requires arrangements with the agents of railroads, steam or canal boats, ships, wagon makers, cattle and horse dealers, forwarding agents, and a regular mixing up with temporal affairs; and when large companies move they require temporal as well as spiritual guidance to preserve them from the snares and traps of those who might be called temporal men, who, perhaps, fear God neither week day nor Sunday; or who, if, peradventure, they worship God on Sunday, cheat all the week. We think that none are so competent for guides and the transaction of business as elders who are men of experience; and hence another enigma; a preaching, bargaining, cattle and horse-buying elder, superintending the temporal affairs of a travelling company or camp; and whilst he preaches to them salvation, he buys cattle and wagons; organizes camps; teaches the inexperienced either in driving horses or cattle; lectures on camp order, as well as morality and religion; who can lift a wagon wheel out of a mud hole, and deliver a lecture on morals or politics; who can make a bridge or road, ford a river, organize a camp, county, or church, and represent them either in the Church, Court, Legislature, or Congress; but as many of our elders were formerly tent-makers, fishermen, publicans, tax-gatherers, farmers, lawyers, doctors, merchants, and legislators, they have only to learn theology; they were acquainted with these other matters before, and therefore have the advantage of other theologians who know nothing else. This is to many an enigma; but as our religion has placed us in that position we have been obliged to do it; nor can we help ourselves and carry out our religion; our religion is temporal and spiritual; it affects body and spirit; it relates to both time and eternity.

There are other peculiarities about our religion. It professes to be a revelation from God, and is either true or false; if true, as Mormons believe, they are bound to obey its precepts, not as a part, but as a whole; it cannot be changed or altered to suit the whims and caprices of men; it comes to us with the unflinching, inflexible, "Thus saith the Lord." We did not make it—it made us; it found us, and moulded and made us what we are. Mormons consider they have no right to change, or alter their religion at pleasure, as others do; they cannot lop off one branch here, and another there, and call it Mormonism and the gospel; they believe, if mutilated, it would be neither; they believe God is the author of religion—that his precepts, and not man's, lead to salvation; they don't think that fifty or five hundred different roads, leading in different directions, all go to the same place; they are not latitudinarian in their principles, and are called uncharitable; they can't help it, it is their religion. If they saw a man on the water, in a boat with a hole in it, they would tell him to stop it up or he would sink.

Mormonism has been called a delusion; its followers hypocrites, deceivers and deceived, ignorant dotards and fools. It originated with a young unlettered man, a farmer—without education; and yet it has met and grappled with the learning, talent and intelligence of the present day. It has been unsuccessfully combatted by the divine, the philosopher, the statesman, and the literati. It has survived mobs, sword, proscription, plunder, banishment and exile. It has penetrated into Europe, Asia, Africa, and Australia, and has made its converts by tens of thousands. In America it has organized villages, towns, counties, cities, and a Territory. It is now represented in towns' meetings, municipalities, legislatures, and Congress. It has become a matter of history, and is found in our histories and geographies. It meets us in our newspapers, hotels and dining saloons, scientific, literary and religious institutions. In our offices and public halls we see, in looking over the territory of the United States, a large tract of that Territory called UTAH. It professes a scriptural theology, sound morals, true philosophy, an enlightened literature, good sound common sense, and a strict adherence to the Constitution and institutions of our country. It is an enigma.

The Chicago Tribune, in trying to unravel the ensgma, makes out the following:

What is a Mormon?

A MORMON is a living paradox; he says grace before a cotillion, swears in his sermons, selects his texts indifferently from the Bible, the Books of Mormon, an Almanac, or the President's Message, and is perpetually quarrelling for the sake of peace. His religion is a joke, and he makes the best story teller the chief of the quorum. He assumes dignities, but has not the slightest respect for them; and the effect of his piety is apparently to put him on a level with the greatest reprobates of the time. In short, he is the Latter Day Saint, or in other words, the last one you would think of calling a saint.—[Chicago Tribune.

That a Mormon is a living paradox we do not hesitate to admit. Webster says a paradox is something contrary to received opinion, or seemingly absurd, yet true in fact. In this the writer admits all we ask for ourselves. We realize that public opinion is against us, yet our teachings, principles, and all that constitutes us what the world call Mormons, are in accordance with truth, are tangible facts.

That our religion is a joke, we shall not admit, nor very little of the above, which we consider merely a squib, yet we will admit, that as a people, we are cheerful and even jocose; hence we are the last that long-faced hypocrites would call christians, a term which they erroneously hold to be synonomous with "Sainta."

We are aware that there is nothing perhaps in this world so little understood as Mormonism: we think, however, that we can unravel the mystery, and can show that although a paradox, it agrees perfectly with scripture, reason, and common sense, and propose, in a few articles, to investigate its claims, religiously, morally, socially, politically, and philosophically.

Congress.

THE Senate and House of Representatives met in their appropriate halls on the 3d inst., and the House proceeded to elect a Speaker. They have voted and adjourned from day to day, up to the present, December 12th, without effecting an election. Hon. Mr. Banks, of Massachusetts, has at present the highest vote, 107, lacking on the last vote of yesterday six of a majority. Hon. Mr. Richardson, of Illinois, is the next highest on the roll of candidates. The strength of his vote has run from seventy-two to seventy-six during the last six or eight days. Hon. Mr. Fuller, from Pa., has received between twenty-five and thirty, and others less—the whole vote averaging about two hundred and twenty-five, requiring a hundred and thirteen for a majoity election.

An attempt has been made to institute the plurality vote without success as yet, and the prospect for an election of Speaker is as unfavorable as at any time since the commencement. The account in the different political papers, however, give evidence of powerful wire-pulling in the lobby sufficient to elect a dozen speakers, if all the power could be sufficiently concentrated.

The Senate has met, and adjourned from time to time, awaiting the organization of the House. The President's Message lies on the shelf, nearly cold, and will be quite, if the House fails to organize soon. In fact, the recent news from Nicaragua may suggest quite an alteration in that portion that refers to "our peaceable relations with all the world."

On the whole, we wait with no little anxiety for the organization of the House, the publication of the President's Message, and the general movement of the deliberative machinery of both Houses on many important questions that will probably be brought before those honorable bodies.

The Eudora Massacre.

THE schooner Eudora, of which we gave an account last week, has been raised, but the bodies of those supposed to have been murdered by the Negro cook, Wilson, have not been found. Bloody clothing, and even flesh, said to be human, have been found, and other evidences sufficient to justify in the public mind the belief that Wilson murdered the captain and crew. Yet the evidence is not such as will be necessary to convict him, and the impression is that he will have to be set free.

Views upon Cotton and Slavery, with Hints upon Polygamy.

IT is probable that slavery will in due time secure a firm foothold in Utah as in Kansas and New Mexico. The Mormons in Utah have already raised cotton—the meat on which slavery feeds—in the valley of the Santa Clara, in South Utah, and a sample submitted to E. R. Young, a cotton manufacturer, in Westport, Conn., was considered by him as equal to the best Georgia upland, so that he could spin No. 60 yarn from it. The representatives of the slave oligarchy in Congress have always dealt tenderly with the Mormons, winking at their polygamy, because they desire to keep on good terms with the "Saints," as hopeful supporters of the slave power, when slavery becomes common in Utah.—[Salem Observer.

We cry you mercy, friend L.—pray not so fast—Utah is not Slave Territory yet; and, moreover, its irrigation and altitude would be arguments sufficiently strong to answer the purposes of abolitionism's most firy advocates. Had you visited those sterile mountainous regions, we think you would be inclined to agree with us; our individual proclivities, from youth up, were favorable to the free labor policy, nor have we seen good reasons for changing our minds yet; still, there are views of higher import, affecting us all, that reasonably forbid the agitation of such a subject at the present crisis. Nor, indeed, as honorable men, can we, in view of the solemn national compact, which we each have virtually sworn to abide by and sustain, at least until it is properly and legally altered, any more consistently mar that cherished instrument, than the acutely sensitive apple of our own eye. That compact—the Constitution of the United States—guarantees specific rights to the States north of Mason and Dixon's line; it also guarantees rights to States south of that line; and when those rights are infringed upon by either, the interests of both are materially affected. It is the bulwark of our dearest and most sacred rights, and when a breach shall have been once made over it by one party, who can tell how long it might be before we all would be engulphed in devastation, war and bloodshed? Who would dare be responsible for such a deed? Our covenants once broken, will good men have confidence in us, or God himself stand by us in the hour of peril?

You say the slave oligarchy in Congress have always "dealt tenderly with the Mormons, winking at their polygamy." When or how the South have done this, more than the North, we are at loss to know. If in allowing us individually to live, we think the North and the South have been equally generous; if in relation to our existence as a Territory, then much is due to members from the North, in hurrying that far-famed "Omnibus Bill" through Congress, in which is included the Territory of Utah; so that really, friend L, you must assume a part of the responsibility of dealing "tenderly with the Mormons" and "winking at polygamy." But seriously, you would not think of exterminating us because of our belief, or because good "cotton" is raised on the Santa Clara. If such is to be the fate of the raisers of good cotton "the meat on which slavery feeds"—what shall be done with the consumers of good cotton? Why every clean, Sunday morning shirt, (we presume editors don't change but once a week,) and every unwashed collar, like the "Danish Ghost," would be a standing reproach to such hard-heartedness. "Dealt tenderly with!" why, my dear sir, some of us are Americans—some of us from old Massachusetts. Gov. Young, H. C. Kimball and Dr. J. M. Bernhisel are real live Yankees; besides, Jos. Smith and Hiram Smith, who were slaughtered in Carthage Jail for their religion, were natives of New England. We are not all outside barbarians. Certainly a parent should deal tenderly with their own offspring. But Mormonism includes polygamy—truly it does, and just as honestly too, as the last, best, charitable association of the liberal-hearted Unitarians, or our good old friends the Quakers, or Methodists, or Presbyterians. They want to do good, so do we; they are content with morality in their own family circle; we desire to see it prevail over all society. They are content to look calmly out upon the troubled ocean of life as long as their own little pond is unruffled, without enquiring the cause of outer commotion, not even how far their own may be impregnated, nor how soon submerged in the swelling ocean around them. They conscientiously take a part of the scriptures for their guide; we take them entire "as the man of our council," and Abraham as the Father of the faithful, without fear or doubting, believing God's ways are better than man's ways, with all their boasted advancement. Thus, we are termed polygamists, in the same sense in which it is applied to the patriarchs of old. You'll say our motto is, "similia similibus curantur."

Not so; the recipe was long before the disease prevailed so universally, and was given of God, but through the wisdom of man—long since distured, and almost forgotten—and the prevalence of the disease, is the consequence. But notwithstanding the horror expressed by the modern children of Abraham towards the practices of their Father, (for He is said to be the father of all the faithful,) we believing Abraham justified (honorably) before God; and not finding any command of God in the holy scriptures repudiating the deeds of Abraham, Isaac or Jacob, nor casting reflections on the God that permitted them: we therefore believe Abraham, Issac and Jacob to be "justified" in their polygamous faith, and their children, in the words of Jesus, "If ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham." We are willing to endure the stigma attached to the faith and works of such men as God is not ashamed to own, although men may repudiate their principles. But, aside from this, friend L, as good law and order (constitutional) christians, we claim of you at the "North" also to "deal tenderly with the Mormons," because of their belief in Father Abraham, and an indisposition on their part to cast reflections upon our Orestor for permitting the "abominable practice of polygamy" for so many centuries among his most faithful children; and "tenderly" also, for raising a specimen of "cotton" on the Santa Clara—for calico is high there, and the climates cool, and the "Saints" have a commendable desire to be well dressed; and, above all, though Mormons, we desire to be on good terms with our northern friends, for whom we have always cherished the highest respect, as well as for many of the warm-hearted, high-minded gentlemen of the "slave oligarchy" of the South.

Gov. Young and his Sermons.

SOME of our cotemporaries are inclined to be a little facetious, and amuse their readers with some of Brigham's plain spoken-every-day sort of sermons, as a kind of "eloquent eccentricities," under the heads of "One eye open, and one leg out of bed," "Fret not thy gizzards," "Devil's poor, and poor devils," "Robbing a contribution box," "Stealing bake kettles;" and to make it a little more comic, a Negro worthy is brought in by some of them just to make a bold relief, and fill up the picture.

Now, looking through the golden spectacles of modern propriety, it is, indeed, quite unpardonable in Governor Young to outrage, and break over the established rules of polished society, by calling things by their proper names—such unwarrantable plainness, such unrefined simplicity, will never do in this enlightened day, and would almost disqualify the Territory, governed by a man so plain in his language, for admission into the Union. It displays in the Governor a fondness for going straight ahead in what is right, quite inadmissible in our times, a sort of inveterate determination to establish justice among the people, and an unaccountable aversion to, and unmistakable propensity for shaking off popular humbugs, rascally officials, polite debauchees, gentlemanly swindlers, and hypocritical religionists. All of such fancies are but relics of ages past, and as strange and uncouth to the New Yorkers, as the appearance of Rip Van Winkle or John the Baptist in our streets.

These euphuistic gentlemen discover nothing in the Governor's remarks but singularity and their remarkable properties to amuse the public; forgetting that while its truths meet the discerning eye of the few, the terms which they apply to him, embody their acknowledgment, that simplicity and straight-forward honesty has long since vanished from their remembrance, and really implies an imputation upon the public, that they, too, have so long been merged in the deceptive mists of modern refinement, that it would require a lexicographer to muster up the almost obsolete terms, truth, virtue, and honesty. Why, to name them now, without the usual sanctimonious twang would be to endanger the reputation of a man at once, especially an editor.

But who is going to correct public taste—not the editors, certainly—they must follow the current, or, "Othello's occupation's gone." Well, never mind, Brigham will do it; he is not the first reformer that has caused the polished ear to tingle, and the delicate frame to quake under the electric shocks of Truth. Perhaps, like Martin Luther, he will hammer away until the long established "sale of indulgences" shall finally be done away, and the market throughout Christendom closed for ever. It is singular that history records none of these reformers, as quietly chiming in, like good men, to the time-honored customs and traditions of the age in which they figured—unfortunately, they always came in contact with the pets of their time, and were sure to ruffle some of their beautiful plumage.

A New Patent Chicken Hatcher,

Or Nouvelle System pour le Production de la Poula.

THE attention of the public has frequently been arrested by various artificial measures which have been brought into requisition by various experimentalists, for the production of chickens without the hen. Among others, it is well known that in Egypt a species of oven is made use of, in which thousands of eggs are deposited, and which is kept at a given temperature by artificial heat until the chickens are hatched. This system had been sought to be introduced both in England and the United States some years ago. This, of course, made no little noise in its day, which was before the epoch of Shanghaism. A gentleman of our acquaintance in Tennessee related to us the following amusing anecdote:

"A neighbor of his, Mr. ——, having read the reports in the newspapers in relation to this matter, was continually talking to him about the new system, and thought that a very profitable investment might be made, and an extensive business carried on in this new process, he expatiated upon the extensive operations that might be entered into, that sales might be made in Nashville, Cincinnati, Louisville, and even extended to New York. This was his hobby and theme, and the sine que non of his expectations—being a man that never had any money of his own, he wanted Mr. —— to go into partnership with him, and all he wanted with him, of course, was to furnish the capital. Mr. —— not being so well versed in counting chickens before they were hatched, declined this very modest request. However, being rather waggishly inclined, he told him that a new system had recently been invented, the which he thought was more profitable than the old one, which was to get a deep basket bee gun or tub, sufficient to contain one or two bushels of eggs, and that the natural heat of the body being like that of the hen, there would be no difficulty whatever in producing the chickens, that he would furnish the eggs and basket, and that Mr. —— was to do the sitting, and that if on experiment they found it to answer, that he could continue it, and get negroes also to assist him. Mr. —— was carried away with the idea at once, and soon became as zealous an advocate of this new system as he before had been of the Egyptian. Thinking, however, that he could raise the eggs himself, and borrow a basket, and that then he would not have to divide his profits, he declined to have any association with his former friend, and set to work in good earnest to hatch chickens on his own hook—how far he succeeded our friend did not inform us. Some weeks after, careworn and fatigued, he was walking barefoot out of the country, Mr. —— asked him where he was going! he said to Texas. The chickens never chirped, but the people did. The story of the chicken-hatcher was circulated, and he sought refuge in another country where there was more intelligence, and where it was to be hoped the people would better appreciate his invaluable discovery.

Walker and Nicaragua.

WHOEVER has taken cognisance of the "Stately stepings" of Col., Gen., or Fillibuster Walker, for the past few years, can have but little confidence in his professed sympathy for the poor Nicaraguans. His course has been from the start, on the principle of "might is right," and strange to say, there are hundreds and thousands in this our boasted land of liberty, freedom, and equal rights, that acquiesce in the barbarous principle.

Who believes Walker to be an honorable man, or dictated by any other than the principle of selfishness and sustained at the expense of blood? How is it then, that we hear so little from the philantropic press of our country, against the high-handed course of this Fillibuster in the inoffensive Province of Nicaragua? Is it because it has become popular, in consequence of our having become strong as a Nation, to exercise our strength like the old trans-Atlantic Dynasties before us, to subjugate the weaker powers contiguous to us, and appropriate them to our own aggrandizement? It really has this appearance, and no Nation looking on, can be blamed for placing such a construction on the Kinney and Walker movement. It may be argued, by some that, it is entirely an individual or party movement, and the general Government are presumed to know nothing about it; but is this the fact? has not Mr. Wheeler, the U. S. Minister to that Country, not only failed to protest against this wholesale theft and robbery, but actually given "aid and comfort" to the lawless banditti? We do not believe it to be a part of the policy of the present administration to approve of such things, yet there has seemed to be a want of promptitude somewhere in our political machinery to nip in the bud, and prevent such an outrage upon the genius of the institution which has made us what we are—a great Nation in the scale of Nations.

If we have misjudged however, and this gross outrage upon justice and humanity, has occured against the utmost endeavors of those whose business it is to see that national justice and honor he maintained in accordance with our high profession of equal rights and justice to all, we trust that the act will never be sanctioned by them, and that immediate steps will be taken to wipe from our National escutchion this degrading stain.

It is an old adage that "partakers are as bad as the thieves," and those journals which have suggested the annexation of Nicaragua to this Government under existing circumstances, have only shown an unenviable proclivity. If a majority of the inhabitants of Nicaragua are desirous of becoming attached to the United States, all right. The same of any other power that desires annexation of its own free will: but when such desire proceeds from the same cause that extorted acquiesence to the dictation of Walker, from Gen. Corral, in order to save himself and fellows from assassination, may it be to some Government less professedly humane than that of the United States.

The course taken by some of the, we may say, popular journals, in this country, in favor of the Fillibustering movements so common of late, show a recklessness and departure from the Republican Orthodoxy of those who framed the Constitution, ominous of anything but a future growing prosperity. Whether wittingly or unwittingly men write or speak in favor of injustice, National or individual, the effect is to lower the standard of justice, just in proportion to the amount of influence they wield in the community; and few there are who hold so great a responsibility, as those who wield the public press; and we must say, that it has been a matter of surprise to us to see with what carelessness, and indifference the subject before us has been treated—that so few have raised their voices against such outrageous offences.

FURTHER FROM NICARAGUA.

Since writing the above, the arrival of the Northern Light, has placed us in possession of further information on the Walker affair, as will be seen in another column. The following letter appeared in print in this city, the morning after the arrival of the Nicaragua Steamer. It repudiates as it should do, the movements of Walker and uses the appropriate term "invasion of the State of Nicaragua."

OFFICE OF THE U. S. DISTRICT ATTORNEY,
Southern District, Dec. 11, 1855.

To A. T. Hillyer, Esq., U. S. M.:

SIR: Information has been received by the President of the United States that preparations are being made in various parts of the United States to receive men for the invasion of the State of Nicaragua, or otherwise to take part in military operations there, and I call your attention specially to the subject.

The President desires that measures be taken to detect and defeat all such enterprises, to bring the guilty parties to punishment and to detain every vessel fitted out to carry on the undertaking. If occasion should arise, the President will exercise the direct authority vested in him for the protection of all such violations of the neutrality laws.

With the force of your office you can undoubtedly make inquiries and take such measures as will carry out the circumspection and the views of the President. I feel assured of your desire to uphold the law and promise you my most active co-operation.

I am, very respectfully,
JOHN MCKNOX, U. S. D. A.

What reception Col. Parker H. French, Walker's minister plenipotentiary to Washington, will meet with remains to be seen. We trust it will be with the contempt that all fillibustering schemes and schemers should meet with from a wise and judicitious Administration, that the laws of neutrality and of justice may not suffer in its hands. The eyes of the world are upon us, as a Nation, to see what disposition our Government will make of this world-wide apparent outrage on our neutrality laws; and on the position assumed at the present time, depends much the future honor or dishonor of the country.

Wheat from India.

THE Manchester (England) Guardian says that vast quantities of wheat is being shipped from Calcutta to Great Britain; that during the month ending September 17th, 22,654 quarters had been sent at the rate of 60 lb. to the bushel; that the shipment was going on with great rapidity, and was yielding a handsome profit to the exporters.

Steamship Vanderbilt.

THIS steamship was launched from the yard of Mr. Simmonson, at Greenpoint, on the 4th of December. She is the largest American steamer afloat, and prodigally strong. She went from the yard to the new Balance Dock, foot of Market-street, to be coppered, and from thence to the Allaire Works, where her machinery was waiting for her. It is reported that when complete she will probably visit Washington, to be inspected by public functionaries.

Her dimensions are 235 feet in length on deck, 230 feet on the load line, 48 feet beam, and 32 feet 6 inches hold. Weight of hull, 2300 tons. She will be propelled by two powerful engines, with cylinders 90 inches in diameter, and 12 feet stroke; her four boilers weigh 60 tons each. She is registered at 3900 tons, but her actual capacity is 5,100.

THE Kickapoo City Pioneer (pro-slavery,) of the 38th ult., publishes the following appeal to the border ruffians:

To Arms!! To Arms!!!—The Enemy is in the Field!—Up Citizens!—Up Pro-slavery Men!—Up Southerners!—Up Law and Order Men!

We stop the press to annouuce the fact that about 1,000 abolition fanatics have taken the field in Douglas county denouncing law and order, burning houses and declaring themselves independent of all things appertaining to obedience to the constituted authorities.

Gov. Shannon has ordered out the militia to oppose them, and he calls upon all good citizens lo rally to the rescue.

The Kickap o Rangers and all other law abiding citizens are requested to meet in this city on next Saturday, to march to Lecompton as per order of the Governor; so once more—to arms!! to arms!! Raise your voices, and let your shouts be heard on every hill top and in every valley, in the name of the law, and let one and all, old and young, shoulder their rifles and be at Lecompton on the third day of December, to march to meet the enemies of our country.

HORRIBLE DESTITUTION AMONG THE INDIANS.—The Bois Torte Indians, living on the north shore of Lake Superior, were driven to such straits last year that they ate their own children almost to extermination. Their usual food is wild rice, which grows in great abundance where they are. Our Government Agent, G. D. Williams, of Saganaw, recently there to pay off 700 Chippewas near the Grand Portage, saw and conversed with two women of the tribe, one of whom had given up two and another three children, successively, to be slain and eaten.

THE ship Adelaide arrived here on the 14th of October from San Francisco, says the N. Y. Journal of Commerce, bringing a cargo of California wheat, barley, &c., which paid a profit to the shipper of nearly 50 per cent, clear of expenses, the wheat selling at an average of two dollars a bushel. The same vessel is now up for California with 1500 barrels of flour on board, to go back to the same port from which she brought the wheat.

THE Chicago Democrat says that a woman arrived in that place a few days previous with the dead body of her husband, which she was taken east for burial. On the rout she fell in with a young man, and on the arrival of the cars at Chicago, they went off together, leaving the dead body of her husband in the depot, where it has remained ever since.

INHUMAN.—We saw, says an exchange, on a cold day recently, in one of our cars, a lady dressed very warmly in shawl and furs, with a babe of perhaps two years old, dressed in only slip and apron and a small handkerchief tied around its neck, with arms entirely bare and looking as red as a boiled lobster. It was observed by a passenger that she was placing the child on the express line for Heaven.—[Ex.

CANNIBALISM.—The ship John Williams, recently arrived from a voyage among the South Sea islands, brings intelligence that, nineteen days after the landing of some teachers on the Island of Fate, two of them and their wives were murdered to furnish materials for a cannibal banquet.

BARNUM has sold the American Museum to Greenwood & Butler and is making arrangements to build a large dramatic establishment on the plan of Astley's in London, with a Zoological garden attached.

A LETTER-WRITER says that the contributions for yellow fever sufferers in Norfolk and Portsmouth, have amounted to $310,000, of which Portsmouth received $80,000.

IT is stated that the wife of ex-President Tyler has lately fallen heir to an estate of $500,000, left by a deceased relative in England.

APPLES are so plenty on the Western Reserve, Ohio, that they are sold on the trees for ten cents per bushel.

THE Boston Atlas say that the sales of boots and shoes by jobbing houses in that city alone, amount to $200,000,000 annually.

THE MORMON.

Telegraphic.

Thirty-Fourth Congress.
FIRST SESSION.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 6, 1855.
SENATE.

Mr. Hale's resolution, calling on the President of the United States to inform the Senate whether he has received any evidence of such resistance to the laws in Kansas as to require the interposition of military force in the preservation or restoration of law and order in that Territory, and if so, to lay the same before the Senate, was taken up.

Mr. Hunter remarked it was unusual to take up such calls before receiving the annual message, which might contain the information desired.

Mr. Hale consented the resolution should lie over, and moved that when the Senate adjourns it adjourns until Monday.

Mr. Hunter hoped not, as the House might organize to-day.

Mr. Clayton remarked that such an adjournment would delay the reception of the Message, which the country is anxious to see.

Several Senators urged Mr. Hale to withdraw his motion.

Mr. Hale—In view of the fact stated by the Senator from Delaware, (Mr. Clayton,) of which I was entirely ignorant, that the country is waiting with great anxiety for the Message, I withdraw the motion. [Laughter.]

Adjourned.

Important from Washington.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 6, 1855.

It has been ascertained beyond the possibility of cavil that a dispatch has been received from Mr. Buchanan relative to the Crampton difficulty, the tenor of which is that the British Government, in a courteous but positive manner, decline giving such explanations as have been demanded by our Government regarding the alleged violation of our neutrality laws by British agents.

This aspect of affairs imposes on our Government delicate obligations, and will require all its wisdom to extricate itself from the present dilemma.

The Governments of San Salvador, Honduras and Costa Rica have strongly protested to this Government against the recognition by Minister Wheeler of the present Nicaragua Government. He has probably thus acted with the concurrence of our Government, and in accordance with our uniform policy, whatever may be the objections on the part of the Central American States. The Goverments first named predict that the present order of things in Nicaragua will not long continue, for reasons stated, and declare themselves resolved to exterminate foreign adventurers who may invade, their soil for revolutionary purposes.

The Union of this morning contains the correspondence between the President and Gov. Shannon.

Shannon's dispatch says: "I desire you to call on the United States forces at Leavenworth to preserve the peace of the Territory, and to protect the Sheriff of Douglas County, and enable him to execute the legal process in his hands. If the law is not executed civil war is inevitable. An armed force, one thousand strong, with all the implements of war, it is said, are at Lawrence. They have rescued a prisoner from the Sheriff, burned houses, and threatened the lives of citizens. Immediate assistance is desired, as this is the only way to save bloodshed. Particulars by mail."

The President replies as follows: "All the power vested in the Executive will be exerted to preserve order and enforce laws. On receipt of your letter the preliminary measures to be taken before calling out the troops will be promptly executed, and you will then be fully advised."

The Kansas Troubles.
ST. LOUIS, Dec. 6, 1855.

The latest accounts from Kansas represent that 800 men armed with Sharp's rifles were assembled at Lawrence. They declared that they were willing the Sheriff should peaceably search the escaped prisoners, and that they would not commence hostilities but would act on the defensive to the last.

Pomeroy, who escaped from his captors, is now in Lawrence. It is said the pro-slavery party have 300 men in Franklin and 200 in Lecompton and Douglas. If resistance is offered to the execution of the writs, the Sheriff declares his intention to await the further orders of the Governor. It is thought a fight will ensue before the matter is settled.

Later from Texas
NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 6, 1855.

We have received Galveston dates to the 1st inst. A bill was before the Legislature proposing a loan of $5,000 for each mile of railroad built in the State—the State to retain a mortgage on the road.

Several papers are urging the Legislature to instruct Senator Houston to resign on account of his anti-southern sentiments.

The weather was favorable for securing the cotton and sugar crops.

Municipal Elections in Massachusetts.
BOSTON, Dec. 10, 1854.

OUR Municipal election to-day resulted in the triumph of the Citizens' ticket for Mayor, with a large majority of the Aldermen and Common Council. The vote for Mayor stands—Alexander H. Rice, (Citizens' candidate,) 7,386. Dr. N. B. Shurtleff, (American,) 5,456. This evening the triumph of the Citizens' ticket is signalized by a procession, music, banners, &c.

LOWELL, Dec. 10, 1855.

DR. ELISHA HUNTINGTON, the Citizens' candidate for Mayor, is elected by 800 plurality. The entire Citizens' ticket for Aldermen, Councilmen and School Commissioners is elected.

WORCESTER, Dec. 19, 1855.

THE Citizens' ticket for Mayor and Aldermen is elected by 170 plurality. Hon. Isaac Davis is the Mayor elect.

NEWBURYPORT, Dec. 10, 1855.

THE anti-Americans have elected Cushing for Mayor by about 85 pluarlity, together with four of the six Aldermen and two-thirds of the Common Council. About 1,600 votes were polled.

The Weather in Boston.
BOSTON, Dec. 10, 1855.

THE storm and gale of yesterday was very severe here, but, as yet, we hear of no serious damage to the shipping on the coast.

From Washington.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 11, 1855.

THE conferences to-night were unsuccessful in securing additional votes for Banks. The impression prevails that he has reached his highest point of support for Speaker, and that Pennington or Fuller will loom up in large proportions.

Twelve or more Pennsylvania members hold a meeting to-night to arrange their programme for to-morrow.

Matters relating to the Speakership are as confused as ever, nor can the most distant idea be now formed respecting the result.

Joshua Vansant has served on Mr. Harris from Baltimore a notice of his intention to contest his seat in the House of Representives.

Missouri Legislature.
ST. LOUIS, Dec. 11, 1855.

THE bill making large appropriations for the completion of railroads in the State, recently passed by the Legislature, and vetoed by the Governor, was passed to-day over the veto by a two-thirds vote.

Arrival of the Baltic.

One Week Later from Europe.

THE Collins mail steamship Baltic, Captain Comstock, arrived off Sandy Hook last night. She left Liverpool on Saturday, the 1st instant.

The mails and several of the passengers of the Baltic were brought up to the city by the steam-tug Titan, Capt. Parks.

The news is of no political importance. Financially, it is interesting. Consols had gone up to 89 1-4.

The London Times of the 1st inst. is gratified that the war excitement in the United States has subsided.

Nineteen merchant ships had succeeded in escaping the Allied blockade in the White Sea, and had sailed with full cargoes of rye and rye flour.

The American ship Telegraph, with 1,760 boxes of linseed, 50 tons of flax, and 25 tons of hemp, had left Archangel for Amsterdam. The White Cloud, with a similar cargo, had been detained by ice, and would have to remain there for the winter.

Admiral Brant, commander of the French fleet in the Black Sea, died of cholera.

Count Mole is also dead.

The return from the Bank of England for the week ending the 24th November gives the following results, when compared with the previous week:

Public deposits	£4,798,954	Increase	£688,824
Other deposits	18,529,885	Increase	642,639
Rest	3,236,502	Increase	15,605

On the other side of the account:

Govern't securities	£10,339,848	Increase	£215,000
Other securities	18,651,439	Increase	864,289
Notes unemployed	5,492,645	Increase	253,115

The amount of notes in circulation is £19,050,000, being a decrease of £372,330, and the stock of bullion in both departments is £11,139,937, showing a decrease of £123,287, when compared with the preceding return.

Conflagration at the State Prison.

A FIRE occurring in a State Prison is a fearful thing. Not only does it involve the destruction of the State property, but, if it cannot be subdued, there remains no alternative but to throw open the doors and trust to chance for securing a horde of convicts from escape—a matter which, in a town like Sing Sing, is morally impossible. The alarm, therefore which the people of that village entertained on Thursday last, when the workshops of the State Prison were wrapped in flames, can be readily understood. It seems that the cause of the fire is unknown, but its effects were quite disastrous, destroying buildings and property to the amount of $75,000, of which only $15,000 falls upon the State. The prison proper was uninjured, an escape owing, doubtless, to the contrary direction given to the flames by the wind. The firemen worked nobly with the dishonorable exception of one company, who belied the magnanimity usually attributed to their craft, by refusing to aid in extinguishing the fire unless they were paid for so doing. Their services, however, were contemptuously declined. Among the effects destroyed was the much-hated shower bath, which is the usual engine of punishment for the refractory, and when the fact was communicated to his fellows by a convict, who first made the discovery, their exultation was lavishly manifested. A dozen of the convicts who were taken from their cells for the purpose of assisting the firemen, worked manfully to subdue the flames. Indeed but for their aid the damage would have been much greater than it was. This, it is said, makes the eighth time Sing Sing Prison has been on fire.—[N. Y. Courier.

Popular Education

AT the last monthly meeting of the Connecticut Historical Society, Hon. Henry Barnard, the President, presented a paper relating to amount of donations, bequests, &c., made for educational, literary, and scientific purposes in the United States. The whole amount of land appropriated by the General Government, for Educational purposes, to the 1st of January, 1854, was stated to be 52,370,231 acres, which, at the minimum price of such lands when first brought into market, represented the magnificent sum of $66,000,000—but which at this time, could not be worth less than $200,000,000. The amount of the donations and subscriptions, by individuals, far exceeds all that had been given by State Legislatures. Mr. Barnard read from a table exhibiting the donations and bequests made by citizens of Boston within the last half century, amounting to upwards of $4,000,000.

Two Weeks Later from California.

Arrival of the Northern Light.

THE Transit Company's steamship Northern Light arrived here on the 11th, with San Francisco dates to Nov. 20th.

The Northern Light brings 300 passengers, $326,300 in specie and gold dust.

No sickness has occurred among the passengers, and all arrived in good health.

A fire at San Francisco, on the night of the 16th, did damage to the extent of about $25,000.

General Richardson had been murdered by a gambler named Cora, and the latter was under arrest.

The Southern part of the State was threatened with Indian disturbance. They were stealing large numbers of cattle.

Many murders are recorded throughout the State.

The Know Nothings had held a State Convention at Sacramento, and appointed delegates to the Philadelphia National Convention, instructing them to vote for no man for President, unless he is in favor of a Pacific Railroad and opposed to slavery agitation.

Among the passengers is Col. Parker H. French, Walker's Minister from Nicaragua to the United States. It is said that he is vested with extraordinary powers, to enable him to settle immediately the difficulties existing between the United States, England and Nicaragua. He also brings with him the ratification of the new treaty, made by his government with Col. Wheeler, United States Minister at Granada.

The Uncle Sam brought down a rifle company of fifty men, for General Walker, under the command of Captain C. O'Neil, which increases the American forces at Granada to 375 men.

General Cabanas, the President of Honduras, arrived in Granada on the 1st inst., with a large number of his principal officers. Great preparations had been made to receive him appropriately. It is reported and generally believed that he visits the government as ambassador from the republic of San Salvador and Honduras, to propose that the three republics unite into one confederacy, with Gen. Walker at the head.

The United States man-of-war Massachusetts was lying opposite San Juan del Sur. The officers had just returned from a visit to Gen. Walker, and they were all highly delighted at their reception, the general good feeling, and the brilliant future of the country.

The Sacramento Valley Railroad Company held a meeting in Sacramento on Tuesday, and elected a new Board of Trustees. The gentlemen chosen are, Messrs. C. K. Garrison, T. F. Moss, E. P. Flint, W. T. Sherman, Edward Jones, E. W. Burr, J. R. Robinson, J. Goodwin, Levi Parsons, and J. A. McDougall, of San Francisco; Messrs. H. E. and J. P. Robinson, of Sacramento, and Mr. John C. Fall, of Marysville. The road, it is confidently expected, will be opened to Negro Bar by Dec. 10th.

The Allies—French, English and Sardinians—were making preparations for a grand fete, to take place in San Francisco on the 26th of November, in honor of the fall of Sebastopol. A banquet would be prepared at South Park for 3,000 persons. A large sum of money had been subscribed to carry out the plan.

The steamship John L. Stephens, with the Eastern mail of October 20th, arrived on the 13th of November. The Sierra Nevada, with New York dates to the 24th, arrived on the 16th of November.

Messrs. Sanders & Brenham, bankers, had succombed to the exigencies of the times, and had made a failure. Their liabilities had not been stated. They amount (on deposit account) to not far from $100,000; what they may be on other accounts we know not. Their assets, as far as we can learn, are absolutely nothing.

A duel took place on the 16th of November, near San Francisco, between Mons. Derbec, Editor of l'Echo du Pacifique, and Mons. De la Chapell, formerly Editor of La Messager. After an exchange of shots, in which no injury resulted to either party, a reconciliation took place.

The rainy season had set in. In San Francisco less rain had fallen than in the mining districts.

A Know Nothing Convention was held in Sacramento, and the following persons chosen delegates to the Presidential Nominating Convention, which meets in New York, next June:—John Skinner, of Sacramento; S. W. Brockeray, of Calaveras; Dr. Hitchcock, of San Francisco, and Mr. Winters, of Sacramento. A delegation was also selected to the Philadelphia National Council.

Mr. Julius Levy, of the firm of St. Losky, Levy & Co., convicted in the United States Circuit Court of smuggling, had been sentenced to pay a fine of $5,000, and to be imprisoned one year in the county jail. The smuggled goods, valued at $30,000, were also forfeited. An effort was making to obtain the interposition of executive clemency.

Gen. William H. Richardson, United States Marshal for the Northern district of California, was basely assassinated in the streets of San Francisco, on the evening of the 17th inst., by a desperado named Charles Cora.

Maj. Gen. Wool and staff had gone to Oregon to suppress the Indian disturbances there.

A Telegraph Company was about putting up wires to San Diego.

The Hon. Isaac B. Wall, Collector of the Port of Monterey, and T. S. Williamson, an officer of the County of Monterey, were murdered on the 10th inst. "The first reports were received here by express and telegraph, and produced an intense sensation throughout this community. Messrs. Wall and Williamson were on the road from Monterey to San Luis Obispo, and were assassinated when about twenty-five miles from the former place. They were both shot through the head, from behind, the wounds being apparently made by rifles."

Wall had upward of $1,000 in a belt upon his person, and Williamson $150, also in a belt. None of this money was taken—from which an inference is drawn that revenge was the motive of the assassination.

The accounts from the mines are generally very flattering. Immense piles of earth have been thrown up in the dry diggings, awaiting the rains to wash out the gold, and now that water is becoming abundant there is no lack of employment for all. New discoveries are continually made—discoveries which exceed in richness all former ones—such for instance as Table Mountain, which is represented to overlay a bed of gold which will require years of labor to exhaust.

Col. Don Carlos Tomas gave a grand festival to the officers of Nicaraguian Government on the 11th inst. The following toasts were drank:

The health of the President and Ministers of the Republic of Nicaragua.

This sentiment was received with loud cheers, after which the brass band, which the liberality of the host had provided for the occasion, struck up the "National Air."

President Patricio Rivas proposed:

The health of General Walker, the Washington of Nicaragua. Air—Yankee Doodle.

The Secretary of Foreign Relations proposed:

The prosperity of Nicaragua and the sympathies of all nations. Air—Marseilles Hymn.

The Minister of War proposed:

The peace and union of Nicaragua, hoping that her legitimate boundaries would be regarded by all civilized nations. Air—God save the Queen.

By P. H. French, Minister of Finance:

Peace, fortune, and a golden age for Central America. Air—National Jubilee.

By Don Fermin Ferrer, Minister of Public Credit:

The welfare and prosperity not only of the Nicaraguans, but of all Central Americans, and the continuance of the friendship that exists between this Republic and the United States, whose Government is so ably represented here by its worthy Minister, Col. Wheeler.

Col. Wheeler responded in a neat and appropriate sentiment, which was cheered to the echo. Then followed a number of volunteer toasts, all of which were received with enthusiasm and applause. The festivities were continued until a late hour.

Some sort of panic had broken out among the native Nicaraguenese, and hundreds of the Granadans had been moving away. Whereupon President Rivas had issued a proclamation reciting the late treaties and ordering the refugees to return to their respective homes within fifteen days from date, (16th inst.) under penalties of $50 to $1,000, according to their positions.

Later from Salt Lake.

WE learn by California papers, that news had been received in Sacramento from Salt Lake City, to Oct. 11th, some two weeks later than our latest by Independence.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The General Conference of the Church of Latter Day Saints commenced in the Bowery Tabernacle Oct. 6—Brigham Young presiding.

Lorenzo Snow, Ezra T. Benson and Phineas H. Young were unanimously voted to go on a mission to Europe next Spring.

The Conference continued in session until the evening of the 8th, and adjourned to April 6, 1856.

The Hon. Enoch Reese, representative from Carson; Bishop N. V. Jones, late President of the Mission in Hindostan and the Birman Empire; O. P. Rockwell, Jefferson Edmunds and two other persons, arrived from the West, on the 4th inst. They left Carson on the 22d ult., and came through in thirteen days.

On the mornings of the 4th and 5th of October, ice made its appearance on still water for the first time during the present Fall, but the days were mild and pleasant.

The following is from the Deseret News of the 10th:

MASSACRES IN ELK MOUNTAINS.

On the 22d of September, a Utah Indian asked a Mormon, named James Wiseman Hunt, to go with him from the Fort to the herd, a short distance off, to see a horse that Hunt had bought of him. They started, the Indian on horseback and Mr. Hunt afoot, and when about a mile from the Fort the Indian directed Hunt's attention to the cattle, a little way off from the horses, and while he was turned shot him in the back, the ball ranging down diagonally and lodging in the thigh.

One of the herdsmen close by started to give the alarm, and the other one drove the herd on to the Fort. In a short time several of the brethren went to bring in Hunt, and when about half way back, the Indians fired upon them, wounding Pres. A. N. Billinge in the forefinger of the right hand. Three or four of the party fell a few paces in the rear, and by occasionally firing upon the pursuers, they all succeeded in reaching the Fort without further loss or injury. Brother Hunt lingered about thirteen hours and died.

Within an hour and a half after their return, some Indians on the bluff near by told the men in the fort that they would kill the two men who had previously gone out and were then returning, and immediately fired seven rounds, killing, as they afterward stated, Brothers William Behuin and Edward Edwards, the two who were out.

During the same day the Indians burned the hay and turned off the water that supplied the fort.

At daylight the next morning the Indians began to gather round in great numbers, and there being no prospect of a speedy reconciliation, the remaining thirteen brethren, by the advice of friendly Indians, took their horses and started for Manti, leaving their enemies quarreling over the cattle and spoils in the fort.

THE postmaster general has instructed his deputies that after the 1st of January next, the postage on all letters must be prepaid with postage stamps.

Auction of Ladies.

AN auction for unmarried ladies used to take place annually in Babylon. In every district, says the historian, they assemble on a certain day of the year, all virgins of a marriageable age. The most beautiful was first put up, and the man who bid the highest or largest sum of money gained possession of her. The second in personal appearance followed, and the bidders gratified themselves with handsome wives, according to the depth of their purses. But, alas it seems there were in Babylon some ladies for whom no money was likely to be offered, yet these were also disposed of, so provident were the Babylonians. When all the beautiful virgins, says the historian, were sold, the crier ordered the most deformed to stand up, and after he had openly demanded who would marry her, with a small sum, she was at length adjudicated to the man who would be satisfied with the least; in this manner the money arising from the sale of the handsome, served as a portion to those who were of disagreeable looks, or that had any other imperfection. This custom prevailed about 400 years before Christ.

An Editor's Appeal.

WHERE is the money coming from to pay for paper for our next issue? We cannot get a quire without the cash in advance. We have borrowed until our credit is gone. We have worked two years for nothing, and boarded ourselves—or rather our wife has boarded us "free gratis, for nothing" Our compositors want their wages. Our landlord wants his rent. Our children want shoes, and our wife wants a new calico dress. We are out of wood, out of potatoes, out of flour, out of meat, out of butter, out of sugar, out of patience—in short, out of nearly everything, except a clear conscience. We dodged the Sheriff until we could dodge no longer; and have dodged our creditors until we are tired. We have not a shilling in our pocket, and you owe us two thousand dollars! We are trying to live a Christian life, and hope to get to heaven. It affords us no satisfaction to think we shall not meet you there. We should greatly prefer to have you pay us, and thereby remove a very great obstacle in the way of reaching that place of rest.—[Binghamton (N. Y.) Standard.

Divorces in Rhode Island.

THE Supreme Court of Rhode Island, during the present term, has granted thirty-six petitions for divorce. A lady was married when about sixteen years of age to a man who soon after left her. Some eight years after, as neither she nor his brothers had heard from him, they supposed him dead, and she married again. About a year afterward her first husband appeared, and the court now granted her a divorce from him, legalizing her marriage with the second.

25,000,000 sponges were sent to New York market from Florida last year. Five years ago they cost twelve and a half cents a pound in Florida, and now forty cents. The annual value of the shipment to New York is $15,000.

Letter Notice.

WE are constantly receiving letters from Europe, addressed to our care, with the postage unpaid. Now, we are willing to accommodate men, but we can't pay their postage, as one out of ten perhaps is not called for. This is to inform all such persons that no such letters will be taken out of the office, by us, in future.

Mormon Publications.

THE DESERET NEWS is a weekly paper, the official organ of the Church in Utah, and is published in Salt Lake City; it is ably edited by Albert Carrington. It is circulated extensively in Utah Territory; how much abroad we are not prepared to say.

Price of subscription, $5 in advance.

THE ST. LOUIS LUMINARY.—A weekly paper lately started at St. Louis. It is a very neat paper, full of useful information, and especially interesting to the Saints, to whom we recommend it. It is ably edited by Elder Erastus Snow, one of the Twelve Apostles, and President of the Stake of St. Louis. We recommend it to all lovers of truth.

Price of subscription, $2 in advance.

Subscriptions can either be sent to THE MORMON office, or to the editor of the Luminary, St. Louis, Mo.

THE MILLENNIEL STAR.—A weekly publication of 16 pages, adapted for binding; of which there are 16 volumes now bound. It is printed on good paper, clear type, and is devoted principally to the progress of the work in Europe. It is very ably edited by F. D. Richards, one of the Twelve Apostles, and President of the European Church.

Price in England, one penny, or two cents. The law of postage between England and the United States is, that two cents on each paper shall be prepaid in each country, and two cents after the arrival.

Price of subscription, including foreign postage, $2.25, in advance, sent to the address of subscribers. Elder Richards has requested us to act as agent, but has not given us the terms. The above is the nearest approximate that we can arrive at without instructions.

The subscriptions can be sent to us, and we will immediately forward the names and address.

Published at 36 Islington, Liverpool, and 35 Jewin street, City, London.

Besides the above, there is a paper published in Australia, another in Bombay, one in Switzerland, one commencing on the Sandwich Islands, one in California, and one in Cincinnati; besides a host of minor publications.

PROSPECTUS.

THE MORMON

IS the name of a Weekly Journal which will be published in the city of New York, by JOHN TAYLOR, one of the Twelve Apostles of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; formerly editor of the "Times and Seasons" and the "Nauvoo Neighbor," in the city of Nauvoo; subsequently of the "Etoile du Déseret," in the city of Paris, France; and "Zion's Panier," in the city of Hamburg, Germany.

THE MORMON will be devoted to the cause and interests of the "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," and will be the advocate of its claims; social, moral, political, and religious: and will also treat upon all subjects which the Editor may deem interesting, instructive, or edifying to his readers; among which will be science, literature, and the general news of the day. Further than this, he has no pretensions, nor does he purpose to be bound to any particular party or interest.

To the Latter Day Saints he would say, as he is known to them, and deputed by the Presidency, the above will be sufficient. To others: that while he esteems all honorable men, and would, by all proper means, court their respect and patronage, he has no promises to make; but leaves himself at liberty to examine any principle, whether moral, social, scientific, political, religious, spiritual, temporal, past, present, or to come; and pursue such a course as to him may seem best.

The Editor would state that from his numerous correspondents in Europe, East Indies, Australia, Pacific Islands, California, Utah, and other parts of the world, he hopes to make THE MORMON interesting as a newspaper, not only to the Saints but also to his patrons in the United States, England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, the Isles of Man and Jersey, as well as in France and Germany.

The Editor would further state, that as our emigration will come, in future, by the way of the East instead of the South, and as THE MORMON will be extensively circulated among the emigrating Saints in Europe and the citizens of Utah Territory, it will be an excellent medium of advertising for Merchants, Storekeepers, Wagon Makers, Horse and Cattle Dealers, and Carriers in the West and on the route; as well as the Wholesale and Commission Merchants in the East.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION—$2, IN ADVANCE.

To all our Presiding Elders throughout the World:

DEAR BRETHREN—You will perceive by the above Prospectus that Mormonism is assuming another phase, and that we are now going to be the representatives of our own opinions, instead of having others to represent them for us. And as I am particularly desirous to make the paper interesting, I should feel much obliged if you would write communications to "THE MORMON" on any matter of interest; social, moral, scientific, or religious: the local and political position of the country where you reside, its inhabitants, customs, manners; its arts, sciences, productions, curiosities, and religion; or any other thing that you may deem interesting: not forgetting the state of our own Church.

As a Deseretian I am desirous to gather honey from every flower, and make "THE MORMON" a welcome visitor at the fire-side of every Latter Day Saint; to be sought after by men of intelligence, and be the true representative of Mormonism in the World.

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the trangression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The fourth is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ, among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the 'laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Bien-aimés frères, je désire, en commencant cette publication, vous adresser quelques paroles. Le Seigneur, dans sa bonté et sa miséricorde, a jugé convenable de restaurer au monde l'Evangile primitif, dans toute la simplicité, la beauté et la pureté qu'il avait autrefois, parmi les chrétiens des premiers temps, aux jours de Jésus et de ses Apôtres.

La lumière de la vérité a éclaté au milieu des ténèbres et de la corruption des hommes, en ce temps où le monde est déchiré par mille opinions contradictoires.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Si nous suivons attentivement l'action de Dieu sur le genre humain, nous trouverons que tous ces maux proviennent de ce que les nations et les peuples se sont éloignés de Dieu; et rien moins qu'un retour à lui ne peut arrêter la terrible tempête, calmer la mer furieuse, tranquilliser les passions capricieuses des hommes, et rendre au monde moral, religieux et politique, cet ordre qui règne dans la création physique de Dieu.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui règle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

C'est la religion que vous croyez et que vous enseignez, qui est destinée à restaurer l'homme et la terre; c'est elle qui ramènera les peuples à Dieu, qui les retirera du chaos moral, religieux et politique du monde, et les rassemblera en un peuple qui sera conduit et reconnu de Dieu; qui sera honoré devant les hommes et les nations; et qui aidera à établir et à développer le royaume de Dieu dans ces derniers jours.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaîtraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? Ou devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours?

Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconque demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Evangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés!" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit!" Nous le faisons aussi. Crurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains, par la foi en Jésus-Christ!" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "l'espoir en la résurrection!" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ!" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.?" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.!" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions á son Eglise actuelle.

Nous demanderons ce qu'il y a d'inconséquent en tout cela? Lequel est le plus inconséquent, de croire et de pratiquer les Ecritures, ou de dire, nous les croyons et puis de les nier á notre organisation, à nos doctrines, à nos œuvres.

Mais des visions, des prophéties, des révélations n'ont-elles pas une tendance à conduire á l'enthousiasme et au fanatisme? Oui, les visions humaines et les délusions de Satan l'ont. Mais si le Seigneur eût pensé que ses visions et ses révélations fussent préjudiciables aux hommes, pourquoi les aurait-il données dans les anciens temps? Si elles doivent être préjudiciables de nos jours, certainement elles l'eussent été autrefois. L'enthousiasme, la folie et le fanatisme des hommes est une chose; autre chose est Dieu révélant sa volonté aux peuples pour leur organisation, leur stabilité, leur consolation, leur union, leur savoir, leur édification, et pour l'établissement de son royaume.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaitre Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Les philosophes ont scruté l'homme, la terre, les œuvres e la création pour trouver un vrai système, Ils ont tous eu leur jour. Ils ont introduit beaucoup de bons principes, mais quant à l'amélioration du monde, là, ils ont fait défaut. Leurs systémes, quelque bons que soient plusieurs d'entre eux, sont bien loin d'embrasser l'objet désiré: "Ils ont été pesés dans la balance, et trouvés trop légers."

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaître que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence, ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les ecès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lasciveté, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votre lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

JOHN TAYLOR.

To the Emigration and Our Readers Generally.

We shall endeavor to be always prepared to impart the latest information relative to the best course to be pursued by Emigrants on their arrival in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

Our emigration have heretofore, almost exclusively, gone by the way of New Orleans, but will hereafter land in the Eastern cities, and one of the principal objects of establishing "THE MORMON" is for their information, as well as all other emigration arriving in this country.

We shall take special interest in seeking out the cheapest, best and most convenient mode of conveyance from this and other points, as well as to observe the course pursued by agents in the accommodation for travelers on the routes, and make of "THE MORMON" a directory, to which all Emigrants and Travelers may refer with some degree of safety.

A Card to the Saints.

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "THE MORMON." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish, you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

United States Mail—Utah.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
December 5, 1854.

PROPOSALS for carrying the mails of the United States from the 1st day of September, 1855, to the 30th day of June, 1858, (inclusive,) in UTAH TERRITORY, will be received at the Contract Office of the Post Office Department, in the city of Washington, until 9 A. M. of the 15th day of June, 1855, to be decided by the next day, on the routes, and in the time herein specified, viz:

12806 From Salt Lake City, by Neff's Mill, Mill Creek, Holladay's Settlement, Little Cottonwood, and Drapersville, to Mountainville, 25 miles and back, once a week.
Leave Salt Lake City every Thursday at 7 a. m;
Arrive at Mountainville same day by 7 p. m;
Leave Mountainville every Friday at 7 a. m;
Arrive at Salt Lake City same day by 7 p. m.

12807 From Salt Lake City, by Taylorsville, West Jordan, Gardner's Mills, Bingham, and Kanyon, to Cedar Valley, 45 miles and back, once a week.

NOTES.

No pay will be made for trips not performed, and for each of such omissions not satisfactorily explained, three times the pay of the trip may be deducted. For arrivals so far behind time as to break connection with depending mails, and not sufficiently excused, one-fourth of the compensation for the trip is subject to forfeiture. For further particulars as to conditions to be incorporated in the contracts, see advertisement for California, Oregon, Utah, &c., dated 13th October, 1853.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY,
UTAH TERRITORY.
HOOPER & WILLIAMS,
ARE transporting to Utah, this season, one of the largest and best assorted stock of GOODS ever taken to that region.
The purchases being made from the best Houses in New York, Baltimore, and St. Louis, and the long experience they have had in the trade, enables them to offer inducements in prices, style and kind, which will insure satisfaction.
Emigrants passing over the plains to California, will find it to their advantage to refit at Great Salt Lake, as produce can always be had for less than transportation from the States.
Persons wishing to remit or intend taking money with them, can avoid risk and save money, by depositing with Messrs. ROBERTSON, HUDSON & PULLIAM, No. 29 Murray street, New York, or WATERMAN & RYAN, St. Louis; who are authorized to draw on us. Interest will be allowed at the rate of 7 per cent from date of draft till payment.

ROUTE FROM LIVERPOOL

By a Series of splendid STEEL ENGRAVINGS and WOOD CUTS, from Sketches made on the spo from Life, in 1853, expressly for this work, by
FREDERICK PIERCY,
AND CONTAINING A MAP OF THE OVERLAND PORTION OF THE JOURNEY.
EDITED BY JAMES LINFORTH.
This highly and interesting Work will form a narrative of the Journey from Liverpool to Great Salt Lake Valley, and will give Historical, Descriptive, and Statistical Information respecting the places, and the Indian Tribes on the route, and in Utah Territory.
The mode in which the Latter Day Saints' emigration is conducted; a review o it from the commencement; and incidental instructions to emigrants, will constitute an early part of the Work.
The Statistical information will be drawn from the most authentic sources, and consequently may be relied upon. That portion of it which relates to the Latter Day Saints, will be particularly valuable, owing to the difficulty hitherto experienced by all classes in obtaining anything accurate, from the conflicting statements which have appeared from time to time, in a great portion of the public press.

Turn Not Thy Sympathies Away.

BY H. S. BATTE.

Turn not thy sympathies away
From any human sorrow;
The heart thy kindness cheers to-day,
May comfort thee to-morrow.

The good, the kind, the gentle heart,
Is often crushed in sadness;
To such thou may'st sweet hope impart,
And fill thy soul with gladness.

Turn from the giddy scenes of mirth,
And seek th' abodes of sorrow;
Lift up the spirit crushed to earth,
And give hopes for to-morrow.

Go sometimes from the busy mart,
And seek the poor and lowly;
Speak comfort to the broken heart,
That mission will be holy!

Behold that thin and fragile form,
Oppressed with care and sorrow;
Who, scarce protected from the storm,
Is dreading the to-morrow.

Go, seek out such, with kindly heart,
Relieve from want and sadness;
That mission will sweet joy impart,
And fill with hope and gladness.

Turn not thy sympathies away
From any human sorrow;
The hearts thou comforteth to-day,
May cheer thine own to-morrow.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1855. [N. Y. Daily News.

The Care New York Takes of Her Importations of Men.

The Castle Garden Emigrant Depot.

From the Albany Evening Journal.

THE most valuable importation from Europe into the United States is Man. Heretofore this description of freight has been shipped without care, transported across the Atlantic recklessly, and cast hurriedly upon our shores in a damaged condition. Woolen, cotton and iron goods have ever been brought here under the guarantees of seaworthiness in the vessel, of full insurance, of careful carriage, and of final reception into perfect storehouse, watched by night and by day against robbery, fire, and injury from the elements. The most precious importations from the Old World we have ever made, we have till this year treated with a wasteful neglect. The New York Commissioners of Emigration, stimulated and aided by wise and philanthropic men, have changed this. The emigrants to the New World through the entrepot of New York, are now and hereafter will be kindly met in the harbor, and taken with their property to a building of vast proportions, which is to them at once a refuge from fraud, an escape from errors, the avenue to hospitals for such as are sick, an intelligence bureau for the geography of the routes of travel of the whole United States, a friendly mansion of refreshment after the discomforts and fatigues of a sea voyage, and finally the agency for the gratuitous transfer of themselves and their property into the cars or on the boats which will convey them to their places of destination.

Castle Garden has upon its western side a dock, at which comes the steamboat or barge loaded with the emigrants who have been taken off the passenger vessels. A narrow gangway is made by moveable fences, through which the entire number is passed for medical inspection. This is very rigid. In good weather it takes place in the open air. Its object is to ascertain and immediately provide for cases for hospital treatment, and to discover those who, from extreme age, chronic disease, orphanage, pregnancy, lunacy or idiocy, are liable to become public burdens. The shippers have to assume these risks, and provision is made for them under the "commutation."

The inspection ended, the emigrants are admitted into the body of the Castle and marched up to a square in the center, railed off on the outside, with two entrances leading one to the right and the other to the left. The first is for those who speak German or French—the second for those who speak only English. Inside the square are clerks standing at desks facing the rails, and ready with ledgers open before them to register the new comers. The pages of the large books are ruled into columns, and when written up, show the names of the heads of families or single persons, the vessel they came by, the captain's name, the number in the family, their destination, the amount of money they bring and the relatives they previously had in this country. Passed one by one within the alley up to the registering clerks and then passed on, this important work is done speedily and without confusion. When finished, the heads of families and individuals are interrogated about their choice of routes to their destinations. A counter extends on three sides of the square, and on this are exposed maps of all the railroad and steamboat routes in the United States. The fullest information is given and complete impartiality shown by the clerks between competing lines. An attempt at undue influence over the emigrant's choice, would be punished by a discharge from employment.

While the registration and the selection of routes is taking place, the luggage of the emigrants has been passed from the barge or steamer, by the forward gangway, on to the dock, and into the office of the Weigh Master. When the route, say to the West, has been selected, the party receives a printed slip telling the Weigh Master how many railroad tickets he requires to, say Milwaukee, the price charged for them; the number of packages he has, and the charge per hundred for their weight over fifty pounds. This is signed with the contracting agent's name, and is the memorandum of the passage agreement. This slip is taken back to the office of the Weigh Master. The packages are identified, put on to scales and weighed. One of twenty large thin bound volumes, marked "Milwaukee," is opened, and on the inner margin is entered a full description of the packages, their weight, freight, &c. Next to this margin are printed seven coupons on yellow paper, in large type, of numbers for the packages, with the route of transportation left blank. If the party has four packages, four of these coupons are cut off, filled up, and pasted on to them, and a ticket corresponding to the inner marginal description is then cut off and handed to him. This is his baggage receipt. Then the printed slip which he brought into the Weighing Office is filled up, and he is sent back with it to the Cashier in the central office. He takes pay for the passage and freight. What luggage is to remain in the castle over night is passed out of the Weigh Master's office into a vast store room, and there registered and labeled with conspicuous blue tickets. A receipt in blue is given for it, by number and designation of the pieces.

During this time fires have been kindled ('tis December) in two washing rooms, each fifty feet by twenty in size. On one side of the rooms is a bath large enough for a dozen at once to roll in and splash about. The Croton stands in it two feet deep. On two other sides a large wide trough, with the water flowing rapidly in at one end and out at the other, at which any fifty sour people can be scrubbed and sweetened in short order. Abundance of towels are hung conveniently, and soap is not only most suggestively handy but has got to be used. Every emigrant landing at the Castle, well enough to stand the process, inevitably is washed clean before he, she or it gets out. In the two bathing rooms the sexes, of course, are kept separate.

If the vessels arrive in the day, so as to land their passengers at the Castle before 1 o'clock in the afternoon, the Commissioners generally have them out, and comfortably on their way by evening. What a blessing to them this dispatch is! If they have to stay over for any cause, the room for comfortably sheltering them is ample. Three thousand people have slept there, after having previously feasted on fresh and excellent provision. Bread, cheese, coffee and milk can be bought in the Castle in any quantities, and at wholesale prices. When a ship is telegraphed, the baker employed is notified, and a batch extraordinary immediately goes into the oven. From personal inspection we can vouch for the most excellent quality of all this food. The ramparts of the Castle, its galleries, and the vast body of the inner circle, are free to the emigrants for exercise or pleasure. In cold weather it is perfectly warmed, and at all times, when passengers are undergoing registration or crowd the room, a fountain is in play throwing a very high jet. Its purifying influence upon the atmosphere is most perceptible. There is a large kitchen where hot water can be had by the women, and where they can cook anything they may want. Runners and boarding-house keepers are rigidly excluded from even sight of the emigrants. They are so faithfully cared for, that if liquor is smuggled in through the gates, and is found, it is taken from them and poured upon the ground before their eyes. They are not permitted to drink anything intoxicating within the Castle walls. All immoralities, all disorders are suppressed, vigorously but kindly. The discipline is paternal but just.

Many interesting facts are developed at the registration desks. The most striking, is one that should take the conceit out of much of our 4th of July oratory. It appears that the moving impulse to most of the Emigration, is not the beauty of the Bird of Freedom, nor the seductive waving and beckoning of the stripes and stars. It is the "cousin," "brother," "aunt," "sister," "niece," "father," "daughter," "uncle," "son," "mother," or "friends there," who, already established here, have by epistolary coaxing seconded by the pulling of the affections, drawn the emigrants from the Eastern side of the Atlantic to the Western. The inducement to full nine-tenths of the immigration into the United States by the port of New York, is not cheap land, nor civil freedom, nor high wages. It is simply the existence here of relatives and friends, whom the new comers wish to live with.

The next fact interesting to the registration clerks and the public, is the different modes with which the emigrants meet the inquiry into the extent of their "cash means." The Irish invariably understate it. They are afraid of being robbed. They also fancy that they will get things cheaper, if they create the impression that they are needy or destitute. They always conceal their money resources, more or less. The Germans also uniformly understate their cash means, but not to the extent the Irish do. They are afraid that they will be robbed probably, and taxed, certainly. The Englishmen just as invariably overstates his pecuniary resources, as the German and Irishman understate theirs. The Scotch, the Hollanders and the Swedes, truthfully and frankly tell how much money they have, and if the statement is received with doubt, are ready to pull out their belts or purses, and show their "pile." From this it will be seen that the amount of gold and silver coin and bills of exchange, brought into the country by emigration, is much greater than our statistics show it to be.

From Germany come more females than males. From Ireland vastly many more. The entire emigration furnishes us with twenty-five per cent. more females than males. This fact will interest economists, and suggest to them more than one subject of speculation.

The movement of this addition to our population after arrival—its distribution through the Union—is different from what it is commonly supposed to be. Puritan New England receives now most of the Irish Catholics—Massachusetts more than any of her sister States. Pennsylvania takes mostly English and Welsh—New York "a great deal of everything," as our informant said—New Jersey ditto—Ohio, Irish and Germans—Wisconsin, Swedes and Germans—Iowa, Germans almost exclusively—Connecticut, Irish—Minnesota, Germans—Maryland, Irish and Germans—Indiana, all nations, the Germans preponderating—Michigan, ditto—Illinois, ditto—and Canada, nearly all Scotch and English. The causes that induce emigration, very much decide the distribution of the emigrants. Demand for labor and wages may re-distribute them—but primarily, they seek their friends and compatriots. The following table of the apportionment of some 29,000 of them, arrived during the past Summer, will be found interesting. It includes a statement of the amount of money they took to their several destinations, as given by themselves. It is much less than the actual sum, in nearly every item:

12,297	Passengers for	New York	$310,600 59

3	do	do Arkansas	9 50

How few of these went to Slave States. Of those who went to Virginia the most were English and Germans, and nearly all were bound for the cheap farming land, and the substantially free society of the western counties. The other Slave States, which received droppings from this great flow of population and wealth into our Union, felt the influence of it, not in their negro labor districts.

Nothing can so forcibly or clearly show the value of this emigration to the United States, and illustrate the importance of the reform in its reception and care, instituted at Castle Garden by the Commissioners as the following statement of arrivals for the first three months after the new depot was opened:

1855.	No of vessels	Bonda-ble pas-sengers	Passengers notifiable to bond.	Cash means.
Aug. 1 to Aug 31.	39	7,786	627	$361,963 33
Sept. 1 to Sept. 30.	55	11,362	653	499,682 75
Oct. 1 to Oct. 31.	55	1,614	870	551,363 08
Total.....	150	20,815	1,535	$1,509,999 16

These persons all brought labor with them. Besides this they brought each one an average of $46 55 in money upon their own showing—but a great deal more in reality. Then the statement of the "passengers not liable to bond" disposes of the pretended return of emigrants to their European homes. They all come back again. In three months at one port 1,585 returned. If the arrivals numbered half a million for the whole United States, as they nearly did one year, our National wealth would thereby receive an addition of at least $23,275,000—and probably over $30,000,000—in gold and silver. Two thousand three hundred and twenty-five vessels would be required to bring them here. What a source of wealth to this country is emigration, and how carefully should we, as economists and politicians, foster and encourage it!

But the Castle Garden arrangement, is the excellent feature of the New York system of Emigrant reception. It saves the foreigners, ignorant of our geography, our routes of travel, and our modes of business, from a legion of positive harpies, and from all the serious consequences of delay and mistake. The villain runners used to board the vessels in the stream, and pay the shippers for the privilege of a foray upon the priceless cargo between their decks. The robbery began before they landed. Carmen exacted from five to fifteen dollars a load for hauling their luggage to the gasthaus. Filthy taverns received them but to be plundered. Thieves were actually let in upon them. They were stimulated to drink and get drunk and stay drunk. False charges were entered against them. Prices for passage tickets West, one hundred per cent. higher than the fixed rates, were easily Jewed out of them. Bills for vilest tavern entertainment, exceeding the daily charges of the princely Astor House, were exacted and collected. Carmen in league with the landlords, plundered them again in the open street, upon their departure. They were spoiled and abused incessantly from their coming to their going. The women in particular were exposed to shameful wrongs. The Commissioners of Emigration, and the Castle Garden have stopped all this. A runner acknowledging the value of the reform, admitted that under the old system, "the emigrants were deprived wrongfully of more money after getting inside of the Narrows, than would furnish every family of them with a good Western farm." We quote the very words of the wretch whose occupation is so happily gone.

No charges whatever are made for services at the Castle, or for the use of its excellent accommodations. The passengers and their luggage are transported from there by water to their several points of departure from New York free of expense. While awaiting remittances they are permitted to abide in the friendly Garden as at a free inn. Frequently, upon a pledge of their baggage, the poorer ones obtain a sufficient advance to enable them to reach their journey's end. A small commission charged to the railroad and steamboat lines over which the Commissioners forward the emigrants is designed to meet the expenses of the depot. But they fall considerably short of doing this. Like many other noble benevolences in this world, this reform does not pay in money—only in good.

Mr. DE BOW, in his compendium of the census, states the ratio of increase for the last sixty years, to be three per cent per annum. This embraces both the increase by births on the soil, and by immigration.

The Conscription in Russia.

ACCORDING to the official reports the Russian conscriptions alone would not allow the population to grow so rapidly as the ministerial tables try to make us believe. Recruits! The word flies through the villages and towns like a harbinger of death! The house doors are closed as if against a storm. Every family which has a son ripe for being prepared for invincibility assembles in terror. Possibilities are raked up by which to escape the misfortune, as soon as the ukase, stating how many per cent. of the population must be delivered, appears. Each government afterwards appoints the fearful night for the pressgang—for the future defender of his country is not invited to deliver himself up, but is secretly surprised and captured like a common thief, and thenceforth sharply watched as such. The owner of the estate receives the sealed dispatch. Extreme mystery is maintained about its contents. More than the appointed number must always be captured, because it is uncertain whether those selected will be found serviceable. The elders of the parish receive orders from the proprietor, under the seal of secrecy, to tear, on the next night, their brethren's children from their embrace. The news, however, has oozed out beforehand. The elders arrive. All the lads are off—hidden in the forest or elsewhere. But the command is stringent, and the responsibility great. At last, one is captured. After him, another. They must defend against the foe the country they never saw, do not wish to see, and curse in their hearts. Up to the present hour they have never known a happy day. The sweat pours down their faces ere they can earn the mouthful of bread which just suffices to keep them from starving. But still they are with their family; the sun with which they rise each morning, working hard till it sets, shines on their home, and their toil is for their father's roof. The prisoner is taken to the governmental town. There sits the Commission, with the Governor at the head. The victims pro patria are thrust naked into the committee-room. The physician examines each from the sole of the feet to the crown of the head. The boy is healthy and free from blemish. "Open your mouth!" The physician peers in with the searching glance of a treasure-seeker. The teeth are without a flaw. The physician is just on the point of giving to the Governor the report, "Healthy!" But, behold! a half imperial, or ducat is lying against the double teeth. In a second the practised medical finger has extracted the gold from the mine. "No, the fellow is of no use, he has got caries—all his teeth rattle; within a month he will not have one left. The lad is free! He bounds again into his blouse and his village. The paltry bribe leaves him among his family till the next tribute. But for these golden teeth the Governor would have shouted, "the forehead!" and the recruit have been accepted. In which case his forehead is shaved as clean as his beard, so that he may be recognized if he run away. He stands there like a branded ox in the cattle market. When the appointed number in the government is filled up, the new defenders of the faderland are sent to the regiments, the tallest among them to the guard. Now begins the training. A soldier first receives the recruit, to give him elementary instruction in military bearing and carriage. For every lesson the pupil must pay at least a glass of brandy, or else he receives tremendous digs in the ribs. A non-commissioned officer then undertakes the humanities. The scholar must learn to balance himself, to stand on one foot and stretch out the other, till it forms a right angle with the thigh. By the time the first classes with these pedal exercises are over, the face of the recruit begins to assume the pale barrack-hue, his cheeks have grown thinner, and he is ready to study in the barrack court the thundering volleys of "Hurrah!" Now, he presses his musket to heart and cheek, and at last possesses such imperturbation that he does not move a feature even if a gall-fly takes his nose for an oakleaf, and leaves a gall apple in it. Thus the invincible only awaits a foe. Such is the soldier's school in the Baltic provinces, Poland, and the whole of Russia.—[N. Y. Dispatch.

MORTALITY AMONG CHESNUT TREES.—All the chesnut trees throughout Rockingham county, North Carolina, and the surrounding counties have died this season.

Affairs in Nicaragua.

WE have private information from Nicaragua to the latest dates from that quarter, embracing many facts of interest. It comes through Mr. Espinosa, the functionary of the deposed government, who, being banished by that of Walker, reached New York in the last steamer from San Juan del Norte.

Thus we learn, when it was known that the court martial of Americans, into whose hands Walker had surrendered Corral, had determined on his death, addresses were sent to Walker, signed by all the foreign residents in Granada, and by all the clergy and principal native citizens, asking that his life be spared and offering, on the part of the clergy and the men of wealth, to mortgage their fortunes as a guarantee that Corral, if not executed, would live tranquil in San Juan del Norte. But Walker sternly refused to spare the victim. Soon after Corral was shot, the people of the city surrounded his corpse, a large majority being women, who cut all the hair from his head in little locks, and imbued their handkerchiefs and portions of their clothing in his blood, to be kept as relics.

Mr. Espinosa says that the American Minister, Mr. Wheeler, was seen on the 13th of October the day on which Granada was taken, at the door of his house, giving brandy to Walker's men; his (Wheeler's) son being at the time among Walker's men, armed with a sword, and shouting, as one of them.

The Secretary of State, Mr. Mayorga, was secreted in the house of Mr. Wheeler, and asked leave of Mr. W. to visit a brother then dying, in consequence of a wound received on the memorable 13th of October. Mr. Wheeler consented, and after he had left that gentleman's house, he sent after him a message, saying that he was no longer responsible for his safety, and at the same time soldiers were sent for him, and he was shot in the morning. General Corral was in command of 800 men, Ruhant, a French resident of Granada for thirty years, was sent to Corral by Walker, who demanded a capitulation, the penalty for its refusal being that all the principal men in Granada should be shot. That is to say, Mr. Joachin, Peter and Trinidad Cuada, Mr. Joachim, Messrs. Chamorro, Zequeire, Alverez, Celays, Murillo, Artiles, Espinosa, Munoz, Barberena, Avana, Rojos, Rocha, and Morales. They were then Walker's prisoners, and were tied two together by Walker's order, who notified Corral that if he did not come over to Granada and make a treaty, they would be shot as the penalty for his refusal. Corral, to save their lives, surrendered himself, and went to Granada, where he was not long after shot by order of Walker's court martial, composed altogether of Americans.—[Wash. Star.

Special Partners in Iniquity.

CAPITAL has its duties as well as its privileges, and as our moneyed men claim the full protection of the Law for their property, the Law should exact of them a strict abstinence from all partnership with illicit commerce. Yet we know that the base and degraded members of society, who live in splendid infamy by violating the laws, could not carry on their wretched trade, were they not supplied with means by wealthy capitalists, who either make them direct loans, or hire them houses at exorbitant rents. A fire occurred in one of the splendid dens of infamy in Leonard Street, on Saturday last, the guilty inmates of which sought shelter in the Police office directly opposite to it, and the fact became known that the furniture of the establishment, which the reporters describe as "gorgeous," was furnished by a most respectable upholsterer, one of the largest furniture dealers in the City, who had a mortgage and an insurance on it for several thousand dollars.

Now we do not pretend to say that a furniture dealer has any right to question a purchaser, as to the uses to which the articles he sells are to be put, nor is he called upon to examine into the morals of his customers; but when he furnishes on credit the costly furniture of a house whose infamous character he knows, he becomes, in fact, a partner in the business, which could not be carried on without his aid; and he should be held, if not legally, at least, morally accountable for the wickedness perpetrated through the aid of his capital. If a gunsmith were to furnish pistols on credit to a highway robber, to be paid for out of the proceeds of his exploits on the road, he would certainly be held responsible as a particeps criminis. But, where is the difference between selling arms to a known robber on credit, and supplying the keeper of the "palace of mirrors," with gorgeous furniture, to be paid for out of the wages of iniquity!

New-York, like every other great city, abounds in large and splendid establishments wherein a commerce is carried on, which is alike repulsive to the moral sense of the people and in violation of the Laws; and the greater part of these infamous houses, splendid brothrels and luxurious gambling dens, are owned by wealthy men, who are covetous of a reputation for respectability, and who would shrink from being named in connection with the degraded beings whom they assist with their capital.

Among the Police items of our City department will be found the particulars of the arrest, on Saturday, of the notorious Pat Hearn and another fashionable gambler, whose house is in Murray Street, on the complaint of one of their unfortunate victims. But Pat and his fashionable friend immediately procured bail, and were discharged, and this will probably be the last we shall hear of the case,—as we believe they have once or twice already gone through similar formalities.—[N. Brine a Poison.

M. REYNAL, of the Veterinary School at Ayort, France, says the Scientific American, has communicated to the Imperial Academy of Medicine the results of investigations upon the poisonous properties acquired by brine, after a considerable length of time, in which pork or other meats had been salted or pickled. The poisonous properties, he states, are acquired in two or three months after the preparation of the brine, and its use then, mixed with food for any length of time, even although in small quantities, may produce death. A simple solution of salt in water, after the same length of time, does not produce the same effect. The poison acts as a local irritant, exciting violent intestinal congestion and inflammation. It likewise increases the secretion of the skin and kidneys, and exerts a direct effect upon the nervous system, giving rise to trembling, loss of sensation, convulsions, &c. Experiments were tried with it in the Veterinary School, upon horses, dogs, and pigs. As brine is sometimes used a second time for pickling and for other purposes, these facts should be remembered.

How to File Glass.

WHEN it is desired, in the laboratory of the chemist, to divide glass tubes accurately into pieces of a certain specified length, the following simple recipe will be found invaluable. Having immersed a small three-cornered file in spirits of turpentine, file the tube in the direction desired with one of the edges of the file, keeping the point of friction constantly wet with the liquid. By using a flat side of the file in the same manner, the ragged edges of broken tubes may be rendered perfectly smooth and even. Glass, in all shapes, may be easily bored by using the point of the file, providing the point of friction be constantly moistened with the same liquid as above. This plan applies well in cutting all other articles of glass, and is strongly recommended for its rapidity, and from the fact that it avoids all danger of cracking. It will be found infinitely superior to the old method of simply using the file.

POOR Lord John Russell has fallen on evil days. He was present at the festivities on the inauguration of the Jewish Lord-Mayor, and when his name was incidentally mentioned, there were the strongest marks of disapprobation. Subsequently he arose to respond to the toast of the members of the House of Commons, and was hissed down! Alas! "how fallen!"

A DRUNKEN lawyer on going into church was observed by the minister, who said to him: "I will bear witness against you at the day of judgment." The lawyer shaking his head with drunken gravity, replied: "I have practised twenty-five years at the bar, and always found the greatest rascal the first to turn State's evidence."

Is Mormonism a Religious Paradox?

ARTICLE II.

WHEN we speak of religion, it is of course a very extended idea, and comprehends adoration, worship of, or obedience to, any of the various gods, tutelary or original, living or dead, real or imaginary, throughout the world; together with all the various phases of feeling, sentiment, theory, forms and dogmas, that any nation, people or individual may entertain, cherish or engage in, relative to any of these gods or deities, or their duties or obligations thereto. It is not our intention to enter into the merits and demerits of Polytheism, Pantheism, Islamism, Buddhism, Judaism, or Idolatry; it is THE Christian Religion that we propose to investigate in brief—comprehending a very small portion, it is true, of the human family: yet, as it is that which Mormonism professes to be, it would be unjust to try it by any other test; for Christianity would be as enigmatical or paradoxical to any of the other systems of religion, as they are to it. And in order that we may not be misunderstood, we will state, in the outset, that we profess to have nothing to do with, nor shall we examine, the claims of visionaries, enthusiasts or fools. We do not consider the mass of christians responsible for their acts; it is the fundamental principles of christianity that we wish to compare Mormonism with, as professed throughout the religious world. Christians profess to believe in the Bible, and to draw and obtain their doctrines from it. It is true that the Catholic and Greek churches profess to have some traditions, but, if we mistake not, none of these traditions profess to contravene the word of God; the only real difference being a slight variation in the translation, and the acceptance or rejection of some few books considered Apocryphal. All the reformers, however, profess the most implicit confidence in the scriptures of the Old and New Testament, and most unequivocally state that it is "the man of their counsel"—"the rule of their faith and practice"—the test of all religious truth, and "the end of all religious controversy."

We wish, then, to be distinctly understood, that in trying to solve the enigmatical or paradoxical problem of Mormonism, that we take the scriptures as our standard or text book. We would not here be understood that we receive everything verbatim et literatim, and that our editions are a pure translation; but we consider James' translation, in the general, as good as any uninspired men can make it, and sufficiently correct, if not mutilated, spiritualized and corrupted, to give us correct general ideas pertaining to the christian religion. Having premised so much, therefore, by way of introduction, that we might be correctly understood, and our position accurately defined, we shall now proceed to the examination of the question—Is Mormonism a religious paradox?

Calmly and dispassionately we enter into this field of inquiry, by asking: what is christianity? for, if we can find out what christianity is, we shall be the better enabled to see the resemblance between it and Mormonism. We wish here to state, that we do not accept the multitudinous dogmas and theories of modern professed christians as a test, or even admit the verity of the self-styled orthodox, whether of the Greek, Catholic, or diversified reformed Churches, no more than they would admit Mormonism as a test for them. Nor have we any more respect for the opinions of the ancient fathers, most of whom were as degenerate and corrupt in principles and practice, as modern christians. The scriptures are either true or false; if false, the whole christian religion, especially the reformed, is a bagatelle; if true, they supercede everything else, and we need no ancient fathers, no doctors of divinity, no systems of theology, no interpretations or interpolations, as a test. It was said by one of old, "search the scriptures, for they are they that testify of me. "To the law and to the testimony, if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no truth in them." "If we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other doctrine than that which we have preached, let him be accursed."

Come we, then, to the rich treasures contained in the sacred oracles of truth; and if in their researches our readers ask their Heavenly Father for guidance, and have as strong and honest a desire to possess themselves of celestial treasures, and to search after and grasp eternal truth and intelligence, as it flowed from the tongues and pen of patriarchs, prophets, apostles, God, angels and inspired men, as they are to seek after the ephemeral baubles of wealth, honor and fame, we are persuaded that we shall arise from the investigation both better and happier men. It is the simple and naked truth that we are in search of, unmutilated and unadorned—the gospel of Jesus Christ; for all christians admit that to be christianity, and profess to preach it. What is the gospel? We believe the term, in its simple sense, to signify "good news," "glad tidings." Hence the angels, at the birth of our Saviour, said to the shepherds, "We bring you good tidings of great joy;" but, as the gospel implies principles as well as name, it is more particularly those principles that we wish to unfold and investigate, for there is more in them than a name, and in its application it is not always good news; it cannot be to those who reject; for Jesus said unto his disciples, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature: he that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned," &c. Here were principles, then, to be developed, faith to be exercised, ordinances to be attended to, and the whole was called the gospel, the reception of, and obedience to which, would save men—the rejection of which would damn men. Hence it is elsewhere called, "the power of God, unto salvation, to every one that believeth; for therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith." It is, then, a principle of power and a principle of revelation; hence, we are again told, that "life and immortality are brought to light by the gospel." The gospel, then, is a communication from God to man, embracing doctrines, ordinances, officers or administrators, powers, gifts, revelations, intelligence, and an intercourse and association with the eternal world, and requiring faith in, and obedience to, its requirement. In other words, it is a means made use of by God for the salvation of the human family. We will, therefore, go to the acts of Jesus and his apostles, and try to find out from them what doctrines they taught, what promises they made, what ordinances they administered in, and then see if Mormonism will compare with it; if it will not, it must be rejected as false.

We will leave, then, the fathers and modern christianity, and look "to the pit from whence we were dug, and the rock from whence we were hewn," believing that Jesus and his apostles taught true doctrines, and administered the ordinances of the gospel correctly.

FAITH, we consider the first spring of action towards the gospel—faith in God and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. It is planted in the human breast by the promulgation of the word. Hence, we are told, that "faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God; and how can we hear without a preacher, and how can he preach except he be sent." James tells us that, "He that cometh unto God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of all those who diligently seek him." NOW, the gospel comes as good news, and teaches the way of salvation; but the reception of its blessings depend, in the first place, upon our faith in its author, its doctrines, or ordinances, and saving powers—"He that believeth," &c. And the Ethiopian eunuch, when he made the inquiry of Philip, "Here is water, what hinders me of being baptized?" was answered, "If thou believest, thou mayest be baptized." He answered, "I believe that Christ is the Son of the living God." As the above, however, is a principle that is generally admitted, and is not enigmatical even to the orthodox, we shall proceed, by first stating that it is the Mormon's belief.

REPENTANCE, we believe in, as the next step, which we consider being sorry for, and turning away from wrong, error or evil. The Mormons believe in this, not because it is the accepted orthodoxy of the day, popular, or generally believed in, but because it is really scriptural. Hence, "God calls upon all men everywhere to repent." "Repent and be baptized," &c., &c. As this is not a controverted point, we shall pass on.

BAPTISM FOR THE REMISSION OF SINS. Here we may meet with something that is, to a great part of the christian world, paradoxical; "but, nevertheless, true in fact." Do the Mormons believe this doctrine? Yes. Why? Not because the Baptists believe in it, in part, and the Campbellites, as a whole, but because it is the doctrine of the Bible, has been revealed to us, and is an ordinance that the ancients administered in. Turn we to what some consider the first introduction of the gospel, leaving modern sectarians and creeds, and in our researches passing by the ancient fathers, let us go to the fountain head, and examine primitive christianity in its ancient purity.

John the Baptist, dipper or taufer, was the forerunner of the Christ; the precursor or usherer in of the new dispensation; he held this office by his birth-right, as son of Zacharias, the legitimate High Priest of the Jews, as well as by divine appointment and prophecy, made by an angel unto Zachariah, his father. In his mission he went everywhere preaching "the kingdom of Heaven is at hand," and calling upon the people to repent; he was "the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord; make his paths straight. John did baptize in the wilderness and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins. And there went out unto him all the land of Judea, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him, in the river Jordan, confessing their sins." Mark I.

The above may be considered as the introduction to the dispensation of the gospel, in our Saviour's day, and is emphatically called "The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ the Son of God."—Mark I. John, an authorized messenger of God, declares his mission before the assembled hosts of Judea and Jerusalem, who almost simultaneously believe his testimony and flock out to him, to be baptized of him, in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins. Now, without reference to any man's opinions, what conclusions could we come to from the above? Can any unbiassed person believe anything else than that John was believed in by these multitudes as an authorized messenger of the Lord, and that he did preach "the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins!" And that he not only preached it, but carried it out in practice; and that when Judea and Jerusalem believed, they came out to the river Jordan, and were baptized in that river, by or "of him," confessing their sins, and were baptized by him for the remission of sins. This the Mormons believe; where, then, is the paradox? Is it with the Mormons, or somewhere else? But, again, did this preaching repentance for the confession and remission of sins look like baptizing infants? Did this going out to the river Jordan, and being baptized in it, look like sprinkling infants, or pouring from a vessel? If we had not become familiar with perversions of the gospel, we could not believe anything else than that the pure, original order of baptism was by immersion, and for the remission of sins.

But to proceed, was John's baptism and mission acknowledged by Jesus? When John saw Jesus he knew him, and said, "Behold the Lamb of God," and Jesus, on the other hand, acknowledged John, and went to him to the river Jordan "and was baptized of him in Jordan," "and straightway coming up out of the water he saw the heavens opened, and the spirit like a dove descending upon him." Thus he yielded obedience to John's baptism, and after attending to the ordinance, and coming out of the water, the opening heavens approved of his act, and the spirit flowed unto him. We are thus particular in these things to arrive at facts. We wish to notice one feature associated with this matter, and that is, that both in the case of John and Jesus, there was special authority; and that they both officiated by divine appointment. This may be enigmatical to some, but it is nevertheless true.

We now proceed, for we wish to trace the Christian religion to its foundation. The above was the first gushing forth of the fountain; the starting point of that dispensation; "the beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ." Jesus called and ordained twelve disciples, or apostles, who were to be chosen witnesses of his gospel to all the world, and who "baptized more disciples than John," even in his day. He set apart seventies, also, who had their commissions. Whilst he was with them he taught them the principles of his gospel, as well as the necessity of his death, resurrection and ascension; and that after his death he would send the comforter, the spirit of truth, "that should bring things past to their remembrance, lead them into all truth, and show them of things to come." After his death, according to promise, he appeared to them, and said: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature; he that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned; and these signs shall follow them that believe; in my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover."—Mark XVI. They were told, too, "to tarry at Jerusalem until they were endowed with power from on high."

Salt Lake Mail.

WE received news from St. Louis about the 1st inst., that a telegraphic dispatch had announced the arrival of the Salt Lake Mail for November at Independence, on the 27th ult., but having received no mail matter, and heard nothing further from it, we conclude it is a false report.

We shall probably have no mail from there across the plains until the December mail comes, in January. Owing to the present uncertainty of the mails by Independance, we are sending both papers and letters to Salt Lake via San Diego, California, and would recommend it to others as the surest route during the winter months.

Later from Salt Lake.

WE have just received, Dec. 20th, our file of Deseret News and letters to Oct. 31st. The family emigration trains had all arrived in safety, and but few merchandize trains yet back.

The News complains much about the irregularity of the mails from the States, most of their mail matter being two or three months old—much of it gets so overcome with old age as never to get there at all.

The weather was remarkably pleasant up to the latest date.

Particulars next week.

Tonnage of the United States.

ACCORDING to the New York shipping and commercial list of Dec. 19th, all the shipping belonging to the United States, including steamers, June 30th, 1855, amounted to about five and one-fourth million tons.

Census of Illinois.

IN 1850 the total population of Illinois was 851,470; in 1855, 1,271,055, showing an aggregate increase of forty-nine per cent. in five years. (Great country that Western.

A HANDSOME BUSINESS.—The St. Louis Insurance Company have declared a dividend of 15 per cent., making the second dividend within twelve months, amounting in all to 25 per cent. The company have also returned to cargo customers 25 per cent on all their premiums. This has been a remarkable year's business.

The News.

As will be seen in another column, the House of Representatives in Congress, failing to elect a Speaker, after balloting and lobbying from the 3d to the 17th inst., went in to quite a discussion on the North and South question. However much some men may desire to keep back that subject, it seems impossible at the present time to do anything in a national capacity without meeting it at every move. This arises in part from local causes, but more particularly from a determination on the part of some to keep this subject of negroology in constant agitation, until African slavery is abolished in the Southern States, or the Union dissolved; and which of the two shall be the result, they seem to care but little.

The Nicaragua Fillibustering movements still elicit quite a share of public attention. The N. Y. Herald of the 18th inst. has a long geographical, historical and political article on the five Central American States of Guatimala, San Salvador, Honduras, Costa Rica and Nicaragua, and winds up with the conclusion that Mr. French, now in Washington as Minister from the Walker Government of Nicaragua, should receive our friendship and favor, for the reason that, "If we do not take a step in the right direction now, some of us may live to see the best part of Central America erected into an English colony, and our right of way to the Pacific disputed by the British Government."

A writer in Washington, on Tuesday, the 18th inst., says: "I do not imagine that there is the slightest probability of the recognition of Walker's Government by our own, at present; and I do not attempt in any of these matters to judge which way the wind blows, without knowing pretty well the vanes which indicate its direction the most correctly. In addition to the public grounds for the rejection of Col. French, indicated in my dispatch of this date on the subject of Walker's Government, there is no doubt that our Government has conclusive personal grounds for refusing to receive that gentleman as Minister. The question of his reception has not, it is true, been formally before the Cabinet; but its consideration can hardly, by possibility—you may depend upon it—result otherwise than in his rejection, if not for public, then for personal reasons." With regard to the affair, we expressed our opinion quite freely last week, and have not seen reason since to change.

The Kansas difficulties still continue, and at last accounts some 1500 men of both parties were under arms in and about the city of Lawrence. There does not appear, however, to be the amount of excitement existing in that Territory, that existed at the first news of the rescue of Branson by the free-soilers from the hands of the Sheriff; and an interview with Gov. Shannon, on the part of the citizens of Lawrence, has somewhat modified the general feeling. Yet, as is observed by a correspondent, there is comparatively a powder mine liable to be sprung at any moment; and both parties seem to be preparing for the worst

The trial of Lewis Baker for the murder of William Poole has terminated, after a long and tedious routine of examination of witnesses, lawyers' pleas, Judge's charge, &c., by a discharge of the jury, they being unable to agree. Hence Baker is as he was, and was as he is, and how that is we presume the public are just as well satisfied now as they ever will be. The fact is, the Poole murder has grown venerable by age, and those who would a year ago have hung Baker as high as Haman, if they could have had an opportunity, are now satisfied to let him "wag." Queer chap that public sentiment!

The negro Wilson, who is supposed to be the murderer of the captain and crew of the schooner Eudora, is still retained in jail, though with no prospect at present of being convicted. He is making quite a speculation from the numerous persons visiting the jail to see him; those who do not pay him for the sight, he deprives of the privilage by hiding behind some clothing in his cell.

The arrival of the Asia at Halifax places us in possession of one week's later news from Europe, but it is fraught with but little interest. Rumors are very current that peace is soon to be effected. It is stated that Austria is endeavoring to bring Russia to terms, but on the other hand there seems to be but little disposition on the part of Russia for peace. The inference to be drawn from the peace rumors on the part of the Allies is that they are anxious for such a consumation. The Allies are about to make proposition to Russia through the mediation of Austria, but whether they are such as will meet with favorable consideration by the Czar, is very doubtful, if we can judge from the general tenor of the Russian feeling.

Late advices from Mexico indicate a very unsettled state of political affairs in that country. It is said that the Alvarez Ministry have thrown up their hand and all is again confusion.

Letters from Elder Richards, in Liverpool, to us, indicate that a tolerable large immigration of the Saints may be expected here the coming winter and spring, and our brethren here can take due notice and govern themselves accordingly. In another column we give the names of those on the first ship, Emerald Isle, now on her passage to New York.

For President, George Law.

GEORGE LAW is, by all accounts, making a tremendous effort to constitute himself a candidate for the Presidency. The country is flooded with his biographies, and the amount of money being spent to place him before the public is said to be enormous. Mr. Law has, of course, the same right with all other American citizens to aspire to the presidential office, and in case he is nominated, we would suggest, in order to complete the ticket, "For Vice-President, P. T. Barnum."—[Chicago Tribune.

Movements of Gen. Harney,

And Other Items of News from Upper Nebraska.

A CORRESPONDENT of the N. Y. Herald, writing from Fort Piere, N. T., Oct. 19th, says:

"Harney is here with four companies of the 2d Dragoons, and four companies of the 6th Infantry, in addition to our regular garrison, making in all fourteen companies, when we have not quarters for more than six, and no stables whatever. There's no telling what his plans are yet. Some say the General and his staff, escorted by the Dragoons, will leave in a few days for St. Louis, rather than subject himself to the severity of a winter here. Others say we are in for a campaign this winter, in the Black Hills, and along the head waters of the Cheyenne, where, it is supposed, the Indians have fled. I give Harney more credit for possessing common sense than to suppose he would undertake a winter campaign in this country, where the mercury falls as low as twenty-five degrees below zero. In the first place, our men and animals would perish by the hundred; and in the second place we would have to carry forage, wood and water for the campaign, as the country we would have to operate in is very destitute of those essentials in winter, having found it difficult to obtain a sufficient supply while on our late expedition.

"We have all been disappointed in Fort Pierre. Instead of finding it surrounded by primeval forests, abounding in game of all kinds, where the mighty oak, the stately ash and majestic maple lift their giant branches to the clouds, affording shelter and protection to the deer, the elk and the antelope from the arrow of the hunter and the fierceness of the storm—instead of this we are surrounded on all sides by a barren waste, extending for miles in every direction, and destitute of every essential for the maintenance of a military post.

"The Decotah or Sioux nation is divided into nine tribes, some of which are again subdivided into lesser bands. The names of the principal tribes are the Yanktons, Yanktonais, Brules, Ogillalahs, Miniconges, Black Feet Sioux—(there is a powerful tribe of this name on the head waters of the Missouri, extending along the eastern base of the Rocky Mountains, from the sources of the Yellowstone river to the British Possessions, which must not be confounded with this, as they are deadly enemies of the Sioux)—Sans-Arc. Two-kettle band, and One-papa, numbering in all about 30,000 souls, including about 8,000 warriors. They range over a country extending from the mouth of the Yellow Stone south along the western slope of the "Black Hills," to the sources of the Nebraska or Platte river; thence along the forks of that river to their junction; thence to the mouth of the "Big Sioux;" thence along that river to the sources of the St. Peter; thence westward to the place of beginning. They have but few firearms, being armed principally with the bow and arrow, tomahawk and scalping knife; they are migratory in their habits, subsisting chiefly upon the chances of the chase and visiting localities where the buffalo and game are most abundant. They are a healthy, active, strong Indian, and capable of great endurance. They are very warlike in their propensities, being almost constantly engaged in active hostilities with all surrounding tribes."

Troops for California and Oregon.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9, 1855.

AN extra mail for California and Oregon, will be despatched by the steamship St. Louis, to leave Norfolk on the 13th inst., with the 9th Regiment of United States Infantry. Connection will be made at Panama with the Steamship Oregon, also an extra steamer, both of which will leave immediately for San Francisco and Oregon.

Late despatches received from Washington and Oregon Territories report a distressing state of affairs as regards our Indian relations in those distant regions. A disastrous and bloody Indian war is anticipated by the Government. Many murders, including our Indian Agent, have been committed, and hostilities of a most serious nature now exist.

With a view to protect the inhabitants of these Territories, and to punish those warlike tribes who are spreading death among the people, the Government has determined to send a regiment of infantry forthwith to the scene of the disturbances. The new regiment now at Fort Monroe, (Old Point Comfort,) has been selected for this duty. This regiment, it will be recollected, has been drilled in Hardie's "Shanghai" tactics. The men are armed with the Minnie rifle, carrying a ball with accuracy one thousand yards, and are trained to travel all day at the pace of five miles per hour.

The following order has been issued:

1. The Ninth regiment of Infantry will proceed via Panama to San Francisco, California; and, if not otherwise directed at that place by orders from headquarters of the Department of the Pacific, will repair thence without delay to Fort Vancouver, Washington Territory.

2. Transportation will be furnished from New York to be at Fort Monroe, Va., by the 11th or 12th and the regiment will embark on or before the 14th instant.

3. Officers on regimental recruiting service, regimental recruiting parties or recruits, will be immediately called in, and officers of the regiment on leave of absence will rejoin it without delay.

By command of Brevet Lieut. Gen. Scott.

IRVIN MCDOWELL, Ass't Adjutant General.

NOT SO BAD AS REPORTED.—In a recent issue of the Troy Traveller that paper stated that a woman had arrived at Chicago from Kansas, having with her the dead body of her husband, which she was taking east for interment; that on the journey she fell in with a young man; and that on arriving at Chicago, she went off with him, leaving the dead body at the depot. It seems, however, that the latter portion of the statement was incorrect, inasmuch as the woman forwarded the corpse to that city on the Saturday, she subsequently following with her new partner on Monday. The funeral of the deceased was held at Waterford on Tuesday last.

The Expedition for Camels.

From the Washington Star, Nov. 10.

WE have been favored with a copy of a very interesting letter indeed from Major Wayne, U. S. A., the officer in charge of the expedition of this government to procure camels to be brought hither, with the view of experimenting for their future employment in U. S. military transportation, especially on our great Western deserts. It is as follows:

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 31, 1855.

SIR—In accordance with my report of the 11th of October, Lieutenant Porter and myself left this for Balaklava the next day, the 12th, in the British transport steamer the Imperador, and landed in the Crimea on the 17th. Calling on Major Ross, the Deputy Quartermaster-General at Balaklava, and, further to the front, on General Simpson, the commander of the British forces, we received from these gentlemen kind welcome, and every facility for the prosecution of our duty was promptly afforded to us.

I was further fortunate in receiving an introduction to Col. McMurdo, in charge under the Quartermaster-General, General Egre, of the land transport service in the Crimea, and who, as Quartermaster-General to General Napier in the expedition against Sinde, had used camels extensively for military purposes. He gave me much interesting information in relation to the military use of the camel; and from General Simpson also, who had served in the same expedition under General Napier, we had additional accounts of the value of the animal, and of the favorable opinion entertained of it by the army for the service it was capable of rendering. The engagements of Colonel McMurdo were such that I could occupy but little of his time, and in consequence, obtained from him only a few material facts without going into details. My thanks are due to him for the moments he devoted to me, pressed as he was with the many and various duties of his position.

We found in the Crimea both the Bactrian two-humped camel, and the Arabian, or one-humped; but the latter alone seemed to be used for the purposes of military transportation. The former were found in the Crimea at the commencement of the war; the latter were carried there since from Asia Minor. The former were but little thought of, the latter were highly esteemed, the only objections to them we heard of being the room they occupied in the narrow streets, and their frightening the horses. The two are very distinct species of the same genus, differing from each other as much, I should say, as the buffalo of our Western prairies does from the common ox. Doubly humped, the Bactrian is a strongly-built, powerful animal, standing not quite so high as the Arabian, of coarser and more shaggy coat, slower in motion, but capable of carrying immense burdens. From the formation of its back (its two humps) there is a difficulty in adjusting to it a pack saddle; and without one there is always more or less perplexity in loading and securing the load.

This I rather think is the principal source of objection to its use, though I believe the opinion advanced to us to be correct, that it is not as serviceable an animal as the Arabian. Its use in the Crimea before the war we understand to be chiefly for draught, and on one occasion we saw two yoked to a Tartar wagon, as oxen are, but guided by rope reins. The result of our examination determined us not to procure one, as it would only complicate our experiment, without producing such results as we anticipate from the Arabian stock. At some future day, should the camel become domesticated with us, it may then be worth while to import a few males for crossing upon the Arabian females, as it is said is done with advantage in Persia, the issue always taking after the mother—that is, being one-humped. Sketches of the Bactrian camel were made by Mr. Heap, which will convey very clear ideas of the animal, and of its difference from the Arabian.

Col. McMurdo informed me that in the expedition against Sinde he had in his service about twenty-five thousand camels, and that from his experience he esteemed them highly; so much so, that he had seen at Sinope three thousand of them, in addition to the few now in use in the Crimea, in readiness for the campaign next spring. The loads they will carry depend much, he said, upon the service in which they are employed—rapid movements naturally requiring light burdens—but their average loads, under favorable circumstances he stated to be about six hundred pounds, and these they will carry easily, without pushing, twenty-five to thirty miles a day. He mentioned the interesting fact, which I do not remember to have heard before, that during the expedition against Sinde, General Napier organized a most efficient corps of one thousand men, mounted upon five hundred dromedaries—two men to each dromedary—the men sitting back to back, one facing the head, the other the tail, and both armed with rifles and sabres.

The man facing the head was the animal's groom and driver, and one manner of using the corps was as follows; upon arriving at the scene of operations the dromedaries were made to kneel in square, under charge of their five hundred drivers, forming as it were a base of operations from which the other five hundred operated as infantry. As the advanced body moved, the square or squares, if more than one was formed, if required, were also moved; and in case of extremity, the square offered a cover under which the one thousand men could find comparative shelter behind the animals, who were prevented from rising by a hobble on the fore leg, and use their rifles most effectively. This corps, Colonel McMurdo informed me, could be readily marched seventy miles in any direction in twelve hours, (5 5-6ths miles per hour,) and rendered throughout the campaign most efficient service.

Gen. Simpson stated that in the same campaign he found the camel so serviceable, that he procured five or six for his personal use, and that with them he frequently went seventy miles between sunset and sun-rise.

On a direct question by Major Delafield (whom we met in the Crimea) whether he would not have preferred the best English horses to camels could he have obtained them the General answered no, that he would have preferred the camel, as packing his baggage upon them in light loads, he could move more quickly and continuously.

In relation to our visiting Persia, the enquiries we have made lead us to the conclusion that though we might readily get there, our return, owing to the blocking up of the roads by snow, would be impossible until next spring. As this would detain us much beyond the time fixed for our return to the United States, and unnecessarily delay the experiment we are engaged in, we have reluctantly abandoned the journey, though we desired much to see the varieties of the Persian camel, and particularly the Leurbourck or dromedary artillery.

A journey into Persia, with the intention of returning immediately, must be commenced, we find, about May. Our course from this will be, I think, to Syria or Egypt, for dromedaries, and then back to Smyrna for burden camels, in the expectation of commencing our return home some time in February.

The enquiries in relation to dromedaries for the French army, reported in my letter of the 11th of October, produce no result. Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

HENRY C. WAYNE,
Major U. S. Army.

Hon JEFFERSON DAVIS, Secretary of War.

Horace Greeley at Wilmington, Del.

A WRITER in the Westchester Pa. Independent Herald, gives the following account of a lecture delivered at Wilmington, by Mr. Greeley, on his way to Washington:

"I never saw a President, nor would I go far out of my way to see any one who is likely to fill that office; but when it was announced that Horace Greeley would lecture in Wilmington, the wish to see and hear him became too urgent to be easily resisted, and, after riding ten miles in a crowded stage, and facing the north home again, tho coldest night of the season, in an open wagon guiltless of springs, I count the pleasure cheaply purchased.

"He read his discourse, seldom raising his eyes from the manuscript; there was one time during the delivery, that I feared his thoughts had led him away, and that he had forgotten there was an audience before him. His eyes are very nuns in their exclusiveness at best, though, from the half-satisfactory glimpse caught as their proprietor passed near me, I judge them to be expressive of the 'world-wide sympathy' of the earnest reformer.

"Europe and America was the title of his lecture. He pictured a voyage across the Atlantic, but did not tarry on the ocean; landed in England, spoke of its agriculture and commerce, looked at the Metropolis, took the portrait of an Englishman, hastened to the sister Isle and over it, crossed the channel to France, and halted in Paris. His opinion of the Emperor has not changed for the better since visiting his domain, and the peculiarities of the French character and capital passed a rapid review, and were evidently touched by a master artist. Paris was interesting, but from that beautiful city, where he doubted not there were some hallowed homes, he hurried to Mont Blanc and its purer atmosphere. Germany was visited, and the scenery of the Rhine pronounced perfect—not a vineyard too many, not a ruin wanting. It would not compare with the Hudson, everything about the latter river being new and incomplete. The classic soil of Italy was walked over—works of art looked upon; but decay and disease hung over the Eternal City, and she looks abroad for some hand to help her.

"Young America was brought up and made to face his own errors and absurdities. He got praised for the good deeds he has done, but no clemency was extended to his faults and inconsistencies. His propensity for boasting was held up to him, and wincing and blushes did not save him the humiliation of looking into the mirror in which others see him; and he was plainly told that, unless his manners change for the better, he stands a fair chance of 'running his face against somebody's fist.'

"With characteristic promptness, Horace applied the rod whenever occasion offered, to slavery, war, intemperance, monopoly, &c., and his faith in 'a good time coming' seems never to falter.

U. S. Post-office Receipts.

WE have obtained from Washington the following particulars of the Post-office receipts of the years 1853, 1854 and 1855, as follows: The total amount of the receipts of the General Post-office, from all sources, from July 1, 1853, to June 30, 1854, was $6,023,261 07. The total amount of receipts from July 1, 1854, to June, 30, 1855, was $6,378,644 76. The receipts of the years 1854-5 over the preceding one amount to about $350,000; but the increased expenses of transportation, &c., will do far more than overbalance this sum, for the excess of expenditure is some $2,500,000. This proves that the department does not pay its expenses. We have already shown at length and in detail that the Southern States cannot yield their proportion for the Post-office; but apart from this, the franking privilege constitutes the great cause for the deficit in question. We are quite of opinion that the Post-office, under proper regulations, can be made to pay its expenses in the same way that the private express companies pay theirs. But amid the sum total of national expenses, we suppose that $2,500,000 deficit for the Post-office will escape particular animadversion, owing to the fact that the public are all interested in letter, newspaper and pamphlet-carrying, and disposed to deal leniently with that Department.—[N. THE MORMON.

Telegraphic.

Thirty-Fourth Congress.
FIRST SESSION.

The Senate was not in session on Saturday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 15, 1855.

A NEW PROPOSITION.

MR. HICKMAN offered a resolution that no person should be considered a condidate for Speaker who shall be supported as such, on the sixtieth vote, and after that time all but the two highest candidates be dropped—a choice then to be made between them, and the one obtaining the largest to be the Speaker, provided he receives a majority of the quorum of the House.

MEMBERS ARE FACETIOUS.

Mr. Letcher suggested the Clerk prepare a letter to be signed by the members of the House resigning their seats, in order that a new election be held in all the States and Territories.

Cries of "Agreed," "That's right," "We'll stand by that." [Laughter.]

Mr. Sage proposed as a substitute that the gentleman of Virginia set the example by resigning first, and other gentlemen follow him till all got through. [Laughter.]

Mr. Letcher would cheerfully agree to that, if the gentleman from New York will give him the assurance that he will play fair. [Laughter.]

Mr. Sage was unwilling to thus pledge himself, feeling he had conscientiously performed his duty. He was acting with the majority in opposition to the Administration.

Mr. Houston—Why don't you organize!

Mr. Sage—It is not my fault.

Mr. Giddings thought that the proposition came from the appropriate quarter—from a faction which for two weeks had been preventing the organization. He believed if the Democracy would retire from the Hall the House would soon elect a Speaker.

Mr. Letcher—As gentlemen appear to be in trouble, I will withdraw it.

Cries of "No, no," and "That's right."

Mr. Wade—Let the President resign. If they refer the matter to the people, I am with them. [Laughter.]

Mr. Hickman remarked, it had been said that the reason why the organization cannot be effected is because there are numerous candidates who have not been named as such, and he presented his resolutions to remove the difficulty.

ANOTHER PROPOSITION PROMISED.

Mr. McMullen, of Va., said he would, in due time, submit a proposition more just and equitable, guaranteeing that it would effect an organization.

Mr. English, of Ind., hoped his friends would stand firm, and not compromise with the twelve apostates, unless they subscribed to the Democratic creed. [Laughter.]

THE PEOPLE WILL HAVE SOMETHING TO SAY.

Mr. Humphrey Marshall, of Ky., was willing to abide the sense of the people, who will ultimately have a chance to express their sentiments as to this triangular contest in their choice for the next Presidency. He hoped the present state of things would not be brought to a premature denouement.

Mr. Dunn, of Ind., opposed the resolution. No one could be thus deprived of his eligibility to the Speakership.

Mr. Wheeler gave reasons why he would not be "roped in" to the plans of a corrupt lobby, defending his position as a National Democrat.

Mr. Smith, of Tennessee, wanted Mr. Campbell to tell what party made overtures for pledges as preliminary to his election as Speaker. He (Smith) was satisfied it did not come from the Democratic side of the House.

Mr. Campbell, of Ohio, declined being placed on the witness' stand.

MORE TIME WANTED TO DELIBERATE.

Mr. Reade, of North Carolina, proposed the North elect a Speaker from the South, or the South elect from the North. He was satisfied to have the least objectionable man chosen from the opposite section. If this is not assented to, we have arrived at a point at which the South will trust no man of the North, and the North no man of the South. He made an ineffectual motion to adjourn, in order to give time for deliberation.

Calls for the question were here made, and on motion, Mr. Hickman's resolution was tabled by acclamation.

VOTING RESUMED.

The sixtieth and sixty-first ballots were then taken, each resulting as follows:

Mr. Banks	105	Mr. Richardson	74
Mr. Fuller	40	Scattering	6

Necessary for a choice, 113.

Adjourned.

SENATE.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.

Mr. James gave notice that he would introduce a bill for the modification of the Patent laws.

Mr. Foote presented a petition from Capt. Graham of Brooklyn, setting forth his services and sufferings in behalf of the country, and complaining of the action of the Naval Retiring Board.

Mr. Foote said it was not his purpose to pass strictures on its action, still less impugn its motives, but it was not to be disguised or denied, nor had it escaped public observation, in some instances at least, it had sadly misjudged. Grievous mistakes had been made, and gross wrong inflicted on many meritorious officers. In what manner, or what measure of relief Congress should extend to the aggrieved, he did not consider it his province to indicate, but regarded it as a proper subject of consideration for the Committe on Naval Affairs.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVE.

After a lengthy discussion the House voted twice for Speaker as follows:

Banks	105	Richardson	73
Fuller	38	Scatteridg	7

Mr. Broome here submitted a proposition by which, he said, the difficulty in the way of organization could be removed—that difficulty being, as he considered, the question of the extension or non-extension of slavery to the Territories of the United States. His resolution was that both Houses and the President assenting, the question of the power of Congress over slavery in the Territories be submitted to the Supreme Court—their decision to be final and conclusive. [Laughter in some parts of the hall.]

Mr. Broome said the subject was one too serious for merriment.

Humphrey Marshall inquired whether it was in the contemplation of the gentlemen to wait for an organization until the Supreme Court shall decide. [Laughter.]

Mr. Broome explained that it was not a joint resolution, because the House had not yet organized. If this question is determined we shall hear no more about compromise lines in regard to slavery.

Mr. Smith, of Tenn., thought the difficulty was disclosed by Mr. Campbell of Ohio the other day, who indicated he could have been elected Speaker if he would make pledges in relation to the formation of Standing Committees, or modify his opinion on the subject of slavery. The difficulty then is as to the formation of the committees. Remove this, and there will be no difficulty in making an election. The Democrats will neither receive nor make propositions.

Mr. Brown then withdrew his proposition and the House resumed voting with the following result:

Banks	106	Fuller	38
Richardson	73	Lester	2

Messrs. Harrison, Winslow, Williams, and Orr, one each.

Necessary to a choice, 112.

Mr. Thornton then offered a resolution for the election of a Speaker by plurality, pending which the House adjourned.

SENATE.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 18, 1855.

NOTICES OF BILLS.

Mr. Pratt, (whig) of Md., gave notice that he would introduce a bill for the improvement of the Patapsco river.

Mr. Bayard, (dem.) of Del., gave a similar notice relative to Port Penn.

Adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 18, 1855.

Mr. Walker, (nat. K. N.) of Ala., rising to a personal explanation, defended Southern Know Nothings from the attacks of the Mobile Register, saying they had not only been a target for the press of the country, but used here also as a battledore and shuttlecock by the Republicans on one side, and the Democrats on the other. The Democrats here, with obstinate party exclusiveness, before the House assembled, nominated their candidate and adopted a resolution which many of the more considerate of them admit was an insult to and a stigma on the members on this floor.—The fact must be realized, that if Southern Know Nothings on the opening of this contest had thrown themselves into the ranks of the Democrats, the result would have been a Free Soil organization. He denied that the Democratic party was the National party, and claimed nationality for the American party.

Mr. Jones, (dem.) of Pa., said, had it not been for Know Nothingism, Pennsylvania would to-day, instead of being represented by six national democratic votes, be represented by seventeen. Know Nothingism in Pennsylvania is perfectly synonymous with free soil. The gentleman did not mean to impute to him who offered the resolution in caucus the intention to insult any individual or class. The democracy stand on what they believe to be principle without compromise.

Mr. Allison, (blk. rep.) of Pa., in replying, endorsed the idea of his colleague, who is a national man. Had it not been for the fact that the people of Pennsylvania condemned the action of the last Congress, there would now be seventeen democrats from that State on this floor; but the free soil and Know Nothing parties united, and Pennsylvania is now represented by men a majority of whom condemn the Nebraska bill.

Mr. Walker replied, saying in the course of his remarks, that the adoption of the resolution in the democratic caucus shows what is by no means uncommon, namely: the proneness of all men to confound principle with party, seeming to forget that the two are essentially different. If no organization was affected to-day, he was willing to meet in this hall this evening, with those members who are in favor of abiding by the existing laws regarding slavery, and of admitting new States whether their constitutions recognize or prohibit slavery—the object of the meeting being to devise a plan for organizing the House. In this he believed he expressed the views of a majority of those with whom he acted.

Mr. Washburne, (blk. rep.) of Me., said there was but one truly national party, and that voted for Mr. Banks. The democrats represent a section, and the gentleman from Alabama had shown that he belongs to a party as sectional as the democratic, inasmuch as he had admitted that he is controlled by the same ideas, principles and thoughts as that party, which declares itself in favor of the Kansas bill, and which makes everything subservient to the extension and perpetuation of slavery.

Mr. Orr, (dem.) of S. C., asked Mr. Washburn when he was elected to Congress?

Mr. Washburn—Year before last.

Mr. Orr—Has not your party been since defeated, and the democrats triumphed?

Mr. Washburn explained the position of parties in Maine, stating that the principal issue was the Liquor law.

Mr. Orr—I understand, then, that the people of Maine like whiskey better than freedom. (Applause and laughter.) I ask another question—where you elected by Know Nothings?

Mr. Washburn—Not being a member of the Order, I am not aware that I was.

After some further colloquy between Messrs. Orr and Washburn,

Mr. Campbell, (blk. rep.) of Pa., said he could tell his colleague (Mr. Jones) that he would find gentlemen here not afraid of the appellation of Know Nothing. He then continued to show that the American party is entirely distinct from the free soil party, and voted in Pennsylvania for Nicholson, as their candidate for Canal Commissioner. He and his friends were now voting for Mr. Banks for Speaker, because no man stood fairer on American records than he. They consider the Kansas and Nebraska question as an open one.

Messrs. Jones and Campbell, of Penn., had a long dialogue about Pennsylvania politics, keeping up a spirited fire, involving personal explanations.

Mr. Washburn, (blk. rep.) of Ill., asked Mr. Jones whether he did not consider Americanism and Know Nothingism the same thing?

Mr. Jones—No; I am an American, but have nothing to do with Know Nothingism, which bodes no good to the country.

Mr. Washburn—I understand the gentleman to say that the democratic caucus platform, as he explains it, offers no bar to Southern Know Nothings and democrats coming together.

Mr. Jones—We will not take one plank from our platform; our arms are open, however, to every man differing from us, as soon as he repudiates his heresies.

Mr. Washburn asked Mr. Jones whether he and his friends would go into such a meeting as that to which they had this morning been invited by the gentleman from Albany, Mr. Walker.

Mr. Orr—I will take that into consideration.

Mr. Jones—The democrats will meet in caucus with none but those standing on that party's well settled principles.

Mr. Allison, participating in the controversy raised by his two colleagues, said the majority of the members in Congress from Pensylvania were elected as opponents to the Nebraska bill, that being lhe great issue of the late election.

Mr. Etheridge, (nat K. N.) of Tenn., thought the House needed repose after the intellectual exercises of the morning. As much had been said as the country could digest in two days, (laughter,) and he trusted the House would now adjourn.

Cries of "No!" "No!" "Call the roll!" "Call the roll!"

Mr. Smith, (K. N. dem.) of Va., asked Mr. Campbell, of Pennsylvania whether Mr. Banks had not cut himself aloof from the American party.

Mr. Campbell—I don't know.

Mr. Damrell, (blk. rep.) of Mass., denied that Mr. Banks had withdrawn from that party. The convention which nominated Mr. Rockwell had been called by the Americans.

Mr. Smith defended his position—condemning free soilers, approving of the foreign feature of Americanism, and declaring himself a national man.

MR. GIDDINGS, (abolition) of Ohio (placing himself in front of the Clerk's desk), declaimed spiritedly in favor of freedom, and for building the republican church on a rock that the waves of hell might not prevail against it.

Mr. Letcher, (dem.) of Va., called Mr. Giddings' attention to the resolution offered by the latter and adopted in the republican meeting, insisting that a majority of free soilers be placed in the standing committee, and asked various questions in regard to it.

Mr. Giddings remarked, he understood that every Northern man was pledged to that doctrine.

Mr. Campbell, (black rep.) of Ohio—No such resolution was a test for him.

Mr. Giddings exclaimed—God forgive me for voting for a man who was not in heart and conscience with it.

Mr. Banks, (black rep.) of Mass., desired to say if any such resolution was adopted, it was not tendered to him for approval. Nobody had asked him for pledges.

Mr. Giddings was frequently interrupted, and had quite a time answering the various interrogations put to him from all quarters of the House.

Humphrey Marshall, (nat. K. N.) of Ky., analysed the democracy, showing that discordant elements had arisen on the question of squatter sovereignty.

Mr. Jones, of Pa., in explanation, claimed nationality for his party, which, he said, like the democratic party, has no terms of compromise to offer or accept. We ask no quarter, and regard no man as American who does not stand on the Philadelphia platform.

He was frequently intereupted by applause from his friends, and listened to with marked attention.

Mr. Campbell, (blk. rep.) of Ohio, obtained the floor and the House adjourned.

The galleries were crowded during the day and much interest was manifested the debates.

The American Express Robbery—Arrest of the Supposed Guilty Parties.
BOSTON, Dec. 15.

OLIVER KING and Warren C. Ayers were arrested, last night, in Lawrence, by Messrs. Ham and Savage, Boston Police officers, charged with robbing the American Express, at the West, of $50,000 in gold belonging to the Government, the particulars of which were published some weeks since. The accused were arraigned before the Police Court this afternoon, and committed for examination on Wednesday. Their bail was fixed at $30,000. Ayers was recently a broker in this city, and King a hotel-keeper in Lowell. Nothing is yet made known of the evidence against them.

Mr. C. White, the express messenger, who had charge of the money between Chicago and Detroit when the money was stolen, is also under arrest, and circumstances strongly implicate him with the others. A fourth person is also in custody. White, a short time after the robbery, left the employ of the American Express Company. Officer Best, of Buffalo, was instrumental in bringing the matter to light.

Destructive Fire at Memphis, Tenn.
LOUISVILLE, Dec. 17, 1855.

A fire occurred at Memphis, Tennessee, on Saturday last, destroying the offices of the Appeal, and the Eagle and Enquirer. The Whig office was also considerably damaged.

The Celebrated Gaines Will Case.
NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 17, 1855.

The Supreme Court this morning gave their decision in the case of Mrs. Gaines, reversing the decision of the Second district, and decreeing that Daniel Clark's will of 1813 be probated, and that Mrs. Gaines be put in possession of the property.

Railroad Collision and Loss of Life.
BUFFALO, Dec. 18, 1855.

Two trains of the Great Western (Canada) and Erie and Ontario Railroad Company came in collision this afternoon. The engines and two or three cars were smashed. Two lives were lost, and several persons wounded. Both trains were behind time.

Marine Disasters.
LOSS OF THE SHIP WILLIAM DOANE.
BOSTON, Dec. 18 1855.

The ship William Doane, from Philadelphia for Bremen, was abandoned at sea on the 5th of December. She was on her beam ends, and had five and a half feet of water in her hold. The crew, fifteen in number, were all taken off, and arrived at Salem last night, in the brig Water Witch, from Para.

SCHOONER FLYING DRAGON ASHORE.

The schooner Flying Dragon, from New Orleans for Boston, went ashore near Plymouth Light on Sunday night last. The vessel remains tight, and will doubtless be got off by lightering.

Troops for the Pacific.
BALTIMORE, Dec. 18, 1855.

The steamship St. Louis sailed from Norfolk for Aspinwall on Saturday last, with 300 troops for Oregon and California.

Wreck of the Steamship Crescent City.
PASSENGERS, CREW AND BAGGAGE SAVED
SAVANNAH, Dec. 18, 1855.

The schooner Baltic, Capt. Pruden, from Nassau, arrived here reports that the steamship Crescen City, from New York for New Orleans, via Havanna, on the 3d inst., was wrecked on the 7th on Manthenala Reef, Bahama Banks. The passengers, crew and baggage were saved, and taken to Nassau by the wreckers. The vessel had bilged, and it was feared she would prove a total loss. The brigantine Alma had been chartered to convey the passengers and mails to their destination.

One Week Later From Europe.

Arrival of the Asia at Halifax.
HALIFAX, Dec. 18, 1855.

The royal mail steamship Asia, Capt. Lott, from Liverpool, 8th instant, arrived at this port at half-past six o'clock this morning. She sailed at 8 A. M. for Boston, where she will be due about 3 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon.

The Asia reports, 8th December, 6:30 P. M., exchanged signals with the steamship Pacific, bound into Liverpool.

The steamship Hermann sailed from Southampton for New York on the 5th inst., with 100 passengers and a full cargo.

Her dates from Liverpool are to Saturday the 8th inst.—one week later than those received by the Baltic, at New York.

There is no feature of special importance in the week's news.

In the Crimea matters were in the same position as at last accounts, and from Asia there is no additional intelligence of importance.

Peace rumors were quite abundant, but beyond the circumstantial manner in which they were related there was nothing to indicate that they were founded upon facts. Upon the strength of them, however, an advance in consols had taken place.

A Constantinople letter of the 26th Nov. mentions that three hundred sail of grain ships were windbound in Sulina, at the mouth of the Danube.

The Imperial Commercial Bank of Odessa has suspended specie payments—the premium on silver being 12 to 15 per cent.

The ship Constitution, of New York, arrived at Liverpool on the 4th, and on the following morning, while lying at anchor in the river Mersey, was observed to be on fire. Assistance was immediately rendered, but she burned all day, and at night was scuttled in twenty feet of water. Part of the contents of the lower hold, it was thought, would be saved in a damaged state, but otherwise the ship and cargo were a total loss. The cause of the fire was unkown, but was supposed to be from spontaneous combustion. The passengers and baggage were all landed in safety.

The weather had been quite for agricultural purposes.

Consols had advanced to 9 1-2, and the bullion in the Bank of England had increased to the extent of £87,000 sterling.

Messrs. Brown, Shipley & Co. report the Liverpool cotton market steady and unchanged compared with the quotations advised by the Baltic. The week's business aggregated about 50,000 bales, including 11,000 taken by speculators and exporters.

The same firm say that breadstuffs were generally quiet, with but little speculative demand. They quote Western canal flour at 42s. 6d.

Provisions were quiet, and there had been no change of moment in the quotations of the previous week.

The weather had been favorable for agricultural purposes.

KANSAS WAR.—It is really amusing to witness the terrible fever of excitement some people are endeavoring to get up about the dreadful war in Kansas. It reminds us of the Mormon war. Some few years ago it was no uncommon thing to hear the brave and valiant citizens of Quincy, Warren, and other places in that section of Illinois, boasting of having fought in the Mormon war. Brave men, they shot two prisoners in a jail! We regard the Kansas war about the same.—[St. Louis Morning Herald, Dec. 9.

THE city police of New Haven are hereafter to be supplied with pistols.

Rowdyism Rampant.

THE past has been an unusually busy week among the pugnaciously inclined of our population. A boatman named Peter O'Brien and a companion of his named Scott, tried to gain admittance to the disreputable house of Mary Ann Barr, 102 Church street, but being denied by the proprietress, one of them fired a pistol through the door. O'Brien was arrested, but Scott escaped. A man named Barney McCadden was severely cut in the hip, with a knife in the hands of John Granagan, with whom he was fighting at the house 108 Baxter street. Granagan escaped immediately after the occurrence. A man named Michael Fogerty was arrested charged with stabbing Patrick Dolan, of 408 Seventh avenue, in the abdomen. Timothy Eagan, living in Manhattanville, while passing through 34th street, near Lexington Avenue, was violently attacked by a couple of highway robbers, who hurled him to the pavement, and then by force rifled his pocket of $7 and a silver watch. The unfortunate man was badly injured. The villains escaped. Three young desperadoes, each about 19 years of age, who gave their names as Dennis Crowley, James Ellingsworth, and Stephen Brower, entered a grocery store up town, and after partaking of refreshments for which they had refused to pay, they proceeded to maltreat the proprietor, whom Brower stabbed in the shoulder with a knife. The two first named were shortly afterwards arrested, but Brower for a time escaped. He was subsequently arrested, however, on a charge of stabbing another man named Riley, and was then held in default of $2000 bail, to answer for both assaults. A young man named John Dixon, formerly a compositor in the Herald office, died on Wednesday from wounds received while on his way home a week ago, by some rowdies who successfully robbed him of a watch and also gave him his death blow. The two arrested on suspicion are still in prison, having been arrested shortly after the occurrence. The deceased was 24 years old, and a native of Scotland. His body was buried without an inquest having been held, although the Coroners were notified, and those officials are severely censured by the city press for remissness of duty. Two men, giving their names as Daniel Duffy and James Jack, were arrested for violently assaulting Nathaniel Smith, keeper of an eating house in Centre street, whose establishment they entered, and refused to pay for refreshments, after having ordered and partaken of them. A man named John Lowery was arrested, charged with assault with a deadly weapon, upon the person of James S. Hulston, whom it is alleged he stabbed in the hand, besides cutting his clothes in several places. A trafficker in soap-fat, named Michael Feeney, called at the house of Mr. Coffin, No. 18 Willow street, Brooklyn, on Monday, and was told by Mr. C. that he had nothing for him, and retired into the house, closing the door. The soap-fat man rang the bell, when Mr. C. again told him he had nothing for him, and again closed the door. For some cause unknown, the man became enraged, burst in the door, and attacked Mr. Coffin with a knife and nearly cut off one of his thumbs.

The two Largest Cotton Cargoes.

SINCE our last publication, the steamboat John Simmonds, Capt. Church, has arrived from Memphis with 5247 bales cotton, being the largest cargo ever received at this port. There has also been cleared the ship Shakspeare, Capt. Cummings, for Liverpool, with 6507 bales cotton; being the largest cargo ever cleared at this port. The weight was 2,922,652 pounds. There have also been two other unusually large cargoes cleared within a few days, viz: the ship Chancellor, for Liverpool, with 5801 bales cotton, weighing 2,608,321 pounds, and the ship George Washington, also for Liverpool, with 5245 bales cotton, weighing 2,331,882 pounds. The value of the above three ships' cargoes is about $700,000, the ships themselves are valued at $300,000, and the amount of freight is about $120,000.—[N. O. Price Current.

The Forces of the Allies.

A CIRCULAR published at Viena estimates the forces of the Allies at about 310,000 men, exclusive of the Turkish army of 24,000 on the banks of the Danube. These troops are distributed nearly as follows: At Batoum, under Omar Pacha, 45,000; at Kars, under Gens. Yussuff and Williams, 18,000; at Erzeroum, under Veley and Hefix, 12,000; at Trebizonde, under Selim, 8,000; in the Crimea, the main body of the Allied army on the Tchernaya and elsewhere, 95,000; at Eupatoria, under General D'Allonville, 60,000; at Kertsch, 16,000; at Kinburn, 12,000; on their way to reinforce the corps at the mouth of the Dneiper, 25,000; at Sebastopol, 8,000; reserve in the camp at Maslek, 10,000.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—A party of girls at Quaker Village, Vt., were on the ice upon a pond, when a pet dog fell in. A girl named Mary Jane Fargo went to the rescue, when she also fell through, and was drowned. Her younger brother tried to rescue her, and was himself saved with difficulty.

A CALIFORNIA FAT GIRL.—A gentleman informs the Sacramento Tribune that there resides within a few miles of that city a girl, only sixteen years of age who weighs four hundred and fifteen pounds, and is increasing in flesh at the rate of three pounds per week.

MR. FILLMORE, ex-President of the United States, lately arrived in Holland. He spent two days in Amsterdam, and one at the Hague. The king accorded him a private audience, and received him with great affability.

MISS CATHARINE HAYES, it is said, has realized a fortune by singing, of $100,000. She has visited California, Australia, China and Hindostan.

THE health of the Pope is very indifferent, and his intellect much enfeebled.

A YOUNG woman recently danced at a ball in Brooklyn, until she fell down dead from pure exhaustion.

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the trangression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The fourth is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the 'laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Bien-aimés frères, je désire, en commencant cette publication, vous adresser quelques paroles. Le Seigneur, dans sa bonté et sa miséricorde, a jugé convenable de restaurer au monde l'Evangile primitif, dans toute la simplicité, la beauté et la pureté qu'il avait autrefois, parmi les chrétiens des premiers temps, aux jours de Jésus et de ses Apôtres.

La lumière de la vérité a éclaté au milieu des ténèbres et de la corruption des hommes, en ce temps où le monde est déchiré par mille opinions contradictoires.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Si nous suivons attentivement l'action de Dieu sur le genre humain, nous trouverons que tous ces maux proviennent de ce que les nations et les peuples se sont éloignés de Dieu; et rien moins qu'un retour à lui ne peut arrêter la terrible tempête, calmer la mer furieuse, tranquilliser les passions capricieuses des hommes, et rendre au monde moral, religieux et politique, cet ordre qui règne dans la création physique de Dieu.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui règle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

C'est la religion que vous croyez et que vous enseignez, qui est destinée à restaurer l'homme et la terre; c'est elle qui ramènera les peuples à Dieu, qui les retirera du chaos moral, religieux et politique du monde, et les rassemblera en un peuple qui sera conduit et reconnu de Dieu; qui sera honoré devant les hommes et les nations; et qui aidera à établir et à développer le royaume de Dieu dans ces derniers jours.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaîtraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? Ou devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours?

Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconque demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Evangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés?" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit?" Nous le faisons aussi. Croyaient-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains par la foi en Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "l'espoir en la résurrection?" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.?" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.?" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions à son Eglise actuelle.

Nous demanderons ce qu'il y a d'inconséquent en tout cela? Lequel est le plus inconséquent, de croire et de pratiquer les Ecritures, ou, de dire, nous les croyons et puis de les nier à notre organisation, à nos doctrines, à nos œuvres.

Mais des visions, des prophéties, des révélations n'ont-elles pas une tendance à conduire à l'enthousiasme et au fanatisme? Oui, les visions humaines et les délusions de Satan l'ont. Mais si le Seigneur eût pensé que ses visions et ses révélations fussent préjudiciables aux hommes, pourquoi les aurait-il données dans les anciens temps? Si elles doivent être préjudiciables de nos jours, certainement elles l'eussent été autrefois. L'enthousiasme, la folie et le fanatisme des hommes est une chose; autre chose est Dieu révélant sa volonté aux peuples pour leur organisation, leur stabilité, leur consolation, leur union, leur savoir, leur édification, et pour l'établissement de son royaume:

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaître Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles et spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Les philosophes ont scruté l'homme, la terre, les œuvres de la création pour trouver un vrai système, ils ont tous eu leur jour. Ils ont introduit beaucoup de bons principes, mais quant à l'amélioration du monde, là, ils ont fait défaut. Leurs systèmes, quelque bons que soient plusieurs d'entre eux, sont bien loin d'embrasser l'objet désiré: "Ils ont été pesés dans la balance, et trouvés trop légers."

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaître que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence, ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les ecès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lasciveté, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votre lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
The Greatest Blessing of the Age for the Cure of Diseases of Man or Beast requiring External Application.
"BRING hither the poor, the halt, the lame and the blind," if you would have them healed of their many infirmities. We boldly and fearlessly assert that the Mustang Liniment will positively cure Rheumatism. Let any who are afflicted with that most painful complaint try it thoroughly according to directions, and if they are not cured we will give them their money back. What more can we say? It will also cure the Piles. Thousands have tried it—and all were cured. Bruises, Sprains, Sores or Eruptions fade away as if touched by the magician's wand. Its application to burn or scald acts like "oil upon the troubled waters." The tempest of pain and agony is soon stifled, and the patient is hushed to quiet and peaceful slumbers. "There is balm for every wound," and that balm is the Mustang Liniment. Everybody that sells medicine keeps it for sale. "Hold your horses," and if they are crippled, galled or sprained, use the Mustang Liniment.
READ THE FOLLOWING CERTIFICATES.
THROUGH BY EXPRESS!!!
This is to certify that the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT has been used quite extensively in the stables of Adams & Co.'s Great Southern, Eastern and Western Expresses, for curing galls, chafes, scrofulas, sprains and bruises, and it has proved very effectual. Many of their men have also used it on themselves and their families, and they all speak of its healing and remedial qualities in the highest terms. One of our ostlers got kicked and badly cut and bruised on his knee; as usual, the Liniment was resorted to, and the soreness and lameness was soon removed, and it was perfectly well in three or four days. We have no hesitation in recommending it as a valuable preparation to be used externally on man or beast.
J. DUNNING,
Foreman of Adams & Co.'s Express Stable, N. Y.
We take pleasure in recommending the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT to all our friends and customers as the best article we have ever used for sores, sprains or galls in horses. We have used it extensively and always effectually. Some of our men have also used it for severe bruises and sores, as well as rheumatic pains, and they all say it acts like magic—we can only say that we have entirely abandoned the use of any other Liniment.

MR. WILLIAM JOHNSON, for the last five years a citizen of Augusta, and now the proprietor of the fine hotel in Savannah, called the Marshall House, has favored us with the following certificate:
The MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT has been used in my family, and on my farm, for a great variety of diseases requiring an external application, and has never failed to give immediate relief and effect a permanent cure. I have cured several cases of rheumatism that had resisted the skill of our best physicians. It has cured ringworms by a single application, chilblains in a few days, toothache, frost bites, cuts, sores and corns by a few applications; nervous headache cured entirely. In fact, I have used it for almost everything, and it has always cured. I consider it the best medicine I have ever used. WILLIAM JOHNSON.
Savannah, June 24th, 1852.
June, 25th, 1852.
I have used the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT in my stables upon my horses in cases of sprains, bruises, galls and sores of different kinds, incident to a large number of horses. I used it upon a horse that had been saddle galled for nearly a year. I had tried many remedies, and one in particular, that I had been in the habit of using for years, and had generally proved successful. Nothing appeared to give it any relief until I tried the Mustang Liniment, which cured it in a very short time. I consider it an invaluable medicine, and would not be without it. WM. H. HOLMES.
SAVANNAH, Geo., June 25, 1852.
We have also used the MUSTANG LINIMENT extensively in our stable, and we find it to be the best remedy we have ever used for sores or lameness of any kind.
SAWYER, HOLLISTER & CO.
The above are from two of the largest livery stables in the State of Georgia.
B. H. MEEKINS, 189 Walnut street, Cincinnati, was confined to his bed under the treatment of a physician some six weeks, with Neuralgia, of the whole of his right side, leg, arm and face; his sufferings were indescribable, and the only cessation from the most agonizing pain, was while under the influence of opium or morphine. His doctor finally advised him to try the MUSTANG LINIMENT; he did so, and in two days was able to go about his business perfectly cured.
This is to certify that I have used the MUSTANG LINIMENT recently in a very severe case of sprain. The right hip was so badly sprained and bruised that fears were entertained that it was out of joint. I obtained a bottle of Mustang Liniment and used it freely for four days, when the soreness and pain were all gone and the hip joint was well.
I have also used the Liniment for the Piles, with which I have been afflicted for many years. Its effects were wonderful. Free applications night and morning for a week have perfectly cured me. Thousands of persons are suffering with this painful disease, and you are at liberty to make this statement public, that all may learn what will cure them.
My brother also states that he has used the Mustang Liniment with the most perfect success in two cases of severe bruises, at our factory in Williamsburgh, and says he considers it invaluable about an establishment where a large number of men and horses are at work, and constantly liable to serious accidents. EDWIN R. BARRON.
64 Duane st., New York, June 25, 1852.
☞ While hundreds are rejoicing in the happy escape from smarting pains, occasioned by Burns, Bruises and Sprains, thousands of others will buy the Mustang Liniment and experience the same happy results.
☞ The popularity of the Mustang Liniment is a "fixed fact," therefore those suffering with Ulcers, Old Sores, Eruptions, and like complaints, need not be reminded of its superiority to give it a trial.
☞ The Ladies will always rejoice at the happy experience of curing eruptions, sore nipples, broken or caked breasts, piles and corns, after a thorough trial of the Mexican Mustang Liniment.
☞ The Mustang Liniment will give the most undoubted satisfaction to any one giving it a trial for stiff joints, stiff neck, or sore throat; it has proved itself efficacious in these complaints in many very stubborn cases.
☞ If you have any ugly, painful corns upon your feet, get a bottle of Mustang Liniment and apply it twice a day for eleven days, and the trouble will be gone.

Poetry.

Trip Lightly over Trouble.

Trip lightly over trouble,
Trip lightly over wrong;
We only make grief double
By dwelling on it long.
Why clasp woe's hand so tightly?
Why sigh o'er blossoms dead!
Why cling to forms unsightly?
Why not seek joy instead!

Trip lightly over sorrow,
Though this day may be dark,
The sun may shine to-morrow,
And gaily sing the lark;
Fair hope has not departed,
Though roses may have fled;
Then never be down-hearted,
But look for joy instead.

Trip lightly over sadness,
Stand not to rail at doom;
We've pearls to string of gladness,
On this side of the tomb;
Whilst stars are nightly shining,
And heaven is overhead,
Encourage not repining,
But look for joy instead.

L. S. N.

Thirteenth General Epistle

Of the Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints,

To the Saints in the Valleys of the Mountains, and those Scattered Abroad Throughout the Earth—Greeting:

Beloved Brethren: Under the blessings of an over-ruling Providence, whose tender mercies are over all His works, we are again permitted to write unto you concerning matters and things pertaining to the kingdom of our God.

We have abundant reason for gratitude and thanksgiving unto our Father in Heaven who hath shielded us from the power of the adversary, the stratagems and wicked devices of ungodly men. For a time the Saints have been left to pursue the even tenor of their way without molestation or hinderance from abroad, while peace and tranquility have reigned supreme in all the valleys of the mountains.

In May last we visited, in company with a few of our brethren, the southern settlements, counselling and instructing the people, among whom we are happy in believing that a general spirit of contentment and desire to do right extensively prevail, and although we found them with their crops almost entirely destroyed by the ravages of grasshoppers, rendering their hard exertions and the labors of their hands fruitless, still we heard not a murmur, no repining nor complaining, but rather a firm and determined reliance upon the Lord of Hosts in their continued exertions for sustenance.

Although the crops were so generally cut off as late as from the 1st to the 10th and 15th of June, and though the small remainder afterwards suffered much from the drouth, still the late crops of corn and vegetables and some late sown wheat have matured in sufficient quantity, it is believed, to supply the wants of the community until another harvest; there will, however, probably, be a scarcity of wheat. All kinds of fruit trees have borne abundantly, although they also suffered through the ravages of grasshoppers and the effects of the drouth.

Brethren, the Lord has touched us lightly; be advised by this gentle chastening, give heed unto the whisperings of the Spirit, and tempt not the Lord to bring upon us a heavier rod of discipline, that we may more fully escape those judgment's of high heaven's King, which are now abroad upon the earth and being poured out upon the children of men.

When plenty shall again crown your efforts, let Heaven's bountiful blessings be sufficiently appreciated to cause you to exercise the proper economy for their care and preservation.

The Indians in our settlements have been generally friendly, and though indications of hostilities will occasionally arise, still we have the satisfaction of believing that a good impression has been made upon them, and that the time is not far distant when we may more surely rely upon their peaceful disposition towards the whites.

The more we witness the workings of the peaceful policy which we have practised, and endeavored to have our brethren practise, towards them, the more we are convinced of its being the proper one, and best calculated to promote their interest and salvation as well as ours. Besides being the cheapest, it is far easier and exercises a better influence to feed and clothe than to fight them.

Be merciful, therefore, and patient with the poor, degraded and ignorant children of the mountains and the plains. They are the seed of Abraham, unto whom pertain the promises; seek to enlighten and bring them back unto a knowledge of the Lord God of their Fathers; remember that He is their God to-day, as well as anciently, and that he witnesses, with equal interest, the movements of the children of Israel, as when he gave them instructions from Sinai's consecrated mount, the Temple of Solomon or Calvary's blood, stained soil.

The time of restitution approaches, be up and doing, therefore, while the day lasts, while there is an opportunity of rendering them assistance and doing them service, that you may hear the approving words, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

While great exertions have been made, and are making, towards converting the heathen in distant nations and upon the islands of the sea, we have in our very midst a people just as worthy and intelligent, just as capable, and every way as much entitled, to receive the gospel, then let the words of life and salvation be extended unto them. Let the messengers of peace go and instruct them in the arts of civilized life, teach them to plant and sow, reap and mow; raise stock, build houses, make farms and forsake their evil and pernicious practices, their wanderings and ill-paid predatory or hunting excursions.

Influence them to obtain a living without depending upon hunting, for that furnishes them a very precarious and scanty subsistence; give them your faith and prayers, as well as works; instill into their minds the spirit of peace and eternal truth, that the visions thereof may be opened to a knowledge of the Lord their God and of Jesus Christ whom he hath sent.

At the same time, brethren, preserve yourselves from their treachery and savage fury, from their loathsome and degrading vices, and seek to elevate them in the scale of being to your own level, but never condescend to theirs, as is too often practised by the whites. Show them that you are their superiors by your more noble and virtuous acts and bearing, and that you are not with them for selfish or unholy purposes. It is a pleasing sight to see so many of the children of the Lamanites in the families of the Saints, where they have the same opportunities and privileges as the white children, and we trust that great good will result unto the rising generation through this source.

On the second day of September, the Utahs and Shoshones met in this city and made a treaty of peace, which, it is hoped will be permanent, and prove of lasting benefit to all parties concerned, including the whites.

Near the Elk mountains, and on the left bank of Grand river, the Indians killed three men and some twenty head of cattle, and drove the settlers away; they left for Manti, and will probably not return this fall, notwithstanding they left nearly everything belonging to them in the possession of the Indians. With this exception, there has been no actual outbreak during the season, although there have been a few hostile demonstrations and threatenings, whose cause is at present unknown. We trust that all matters will soon be satisfactorily explained and amicable relations restored, that the settlers may be able to return to their location the ensuing spring.

The endowment house in this city was dedicated on the 5th of May last, and received the name of the "House of the Lord." Since then endowments have been regularly given and are still continued, principally under the direction of Pres. Heber C. Kimball.

The Church Historian house and office have been erected, and are now being finished.

A large amount of stone has been laid in the Temple foundation, which has been finished ready for the basement story, but owing to want of stone, the work, since the 1st of August, has been and still is suspended. The teams engaged in hauling stone had to be turned away to range, in consequence of the feed falling in the vicinity of the quarry and city.

We hope to obviate the recurrence of a similar suspension in future, by availing ourselves of the Big Cottonwood canal, which, it is expected, will be ready for operations by the 1st of May next, and upon which we design bringing the granite stone for the further erection of the Temple.

A foundry has been put into operation, and has furnished very superior articles, mostly for machinery and mechanical purposes. Its operations have been much facilitsted by the use of stone coal, large and valuable beds of which, of excellent quality, were discovered in the early part of the season, in San Pete valley, near Fort Ephraim, and a considerable quantity has been brought to this city; but it is located at too great a distance to become available at this point for general consumption.

Through the facilities afforded by the Public Machine Shop, cutlery of a good quality has been manufactured, also locks and many other articles for general use. Much more cloth, than heretofore, is being made in the various settlements; also leather, hats, cordage, brushes, soap, paper, combs, crockery, iron, and various other useful and self-sustaining articles, are being organized from the native elements in flattering abundance.

Many good buildings have been erected during the season, among which we may mention the Court House, Warden House at the Penitentiary, and finishing the south wing of the State House at Fillmore, besides other extensive and permanent improvements both to city and country. Many mills and various other kinds of machinery have been put into successful operation.

The hum of industry has awakened the silence of these vast solitudes, and, while hill and dale resound with the woodman's song, with the tinkling bell of the herdman's charge, and the rumbling caused by the husbandman's and artizan's toil, the clattering mills mingle their sounds with the roar of the mountain streams, while the Indian hies away to his secret spring by the mountain bush, or seeks his shelter among the sage of the barren plain. Thus, where but a few short years ago were heard naught but the howling wolf, the savage war-whoop, or the raven's cry, we now hear many a nook and corner echoing with the sounds of civilized exertion, and behold them surrounded with all those appliances of wealth adapted to the white man's home.

In many lands, and among strangers, we have travelled many a weary mile, without purse, script, or murmur, to preach the gospel of salvation to the people, and could scarcely find hospitable shelter for the night, but here we can travel throughout the length and breadth of the land and seldom meet with any but Saints, those who have come out of the world to serve the Lord, keep his commandments and do his bidding.

We recognize in the union, peace and prosperity which have attended our settlements, in these far-off regions, the hand of a kind Providence, whose blessings have been multiplied upon a people in whom he has delight, and who seek to do his will.

The aid of the P. E. Fund Company has this year been extended to some thirteen hundred persons, nearly a fourth of this season's immigration. This operation, through the hard times in the English conferences and the great scarcity of money at home, has had a tendency to involve us somewhat in debt.

Many of the brethren here have sent for their friends, through the aid of the P. E. Fund Company, and they have arrived, and are on their way hither; over six hundred of this years' immigration are of this class. Now let the brethren, who have been sent, help us meet the liabilities which we have incurred on their account, and pay up their obligations to the Fund.

Let those who feel an interest in the work of the gathering be liberal in their donations, and prompt in paying what they owe, that the Fund may be sustained, and our next year's operations be not crippled for the want of means.

The cry from our poor brethren in foreign countries for deliverance is great; the hand of the oppressor is heavy upon them, and they have no other prospect on earth through which they can hope for assistance. Many of them are long in the church, and have been faithful in all things, acting in the discharge of every duty. Shall we turn a deaf ear to their appeals and leave them to linger in the midst of wicked Babylon, where, year by year, the perplexity and distress of nations, their wickedness, abominations and corruptions, wars, pestilence and persecutions are multiplied by waxing greater and greater, thus constantly tending more completely to hedge up the way and render their longer continuance in those lands more burdensome and oppressive than ever?

Let this question be answered by your acts, for to this resource are we driven, and unless we receive aid either by donations or the payment of debts owing to the company, we shall be obliged to measurably suspend operations the ensuing year. We have already extended relief to the utmost limit, and have almost entirely absorbed every available resource of the Church to aid in this matter; we trust, therefore, that you will make it a subject of careful consideration and prompt and proper action, for it is worthy of your most active benevolence. It has long engaged our attention and that of our Elders on foreign missions—has been the theme of our prayers and communications in time past, and commends itself to the attention of all Saints, as opening the only, at present known, effectual door of temporal salvation to the really destitute.

Thousands upon thousands of the immigrants who annually flock to the shores of America, though not of the wealthy classes, have means wherewith to come and subsist until they find channels of profitable occupation. But the P. E. Fund is designed to deliver the honest poor, the pauper, if you please, from the thraldom of ages, from localities where poverty is a crime and beggary an offence against the law, where every avenue to rise in the scale of being, to any degree of respectable, joyous existence, is forever closed, and place them in a land where honest labor and industry meet a suitable reward, where the higher walks of life are open to the humblest and poorest, and where they can lay a foundation for indissolubly uniting themselves and their children in the progressive scale of human existence, "while eternity comes and eternity goes."

This is true charity, and should engage the efforts of every philanthropist, not only to feed the hungry and clothe the naked, but to place them in a situation where they can produce, by their own labor, their subsistence.

The world, at present, furnishes no place so well adapted as this for the exercise of such benevolence, no spot so suitable for the homes of the poor, no country more in need of their labor to bring into use its undeveloped and, we might almost say, unexplored resources, no government where institutions beckon the competition of the low as well as the high, of the poor as well as the rich, nor where honesty, capability and merit, instead of high birth, place and worth, so often and so surely pave the way to honor and influence.

This season's immigration has mostly arrived, and we learn that the remainder are near at hand. They have been very much favored by the experience of several returning Elders, under whose charge they have principally travelled.

We have to regret the loss of many of the faithful, who have fallen victims to the power of the destroyer and pestilence, among whom we make mention of Bros. W. W. Major and John Parry of the English, Andrew L. Lamoreaux of the French, James F. Bell and lady of the Italian, and Jacob F. Secrist of the Swiss missions.

While we mourn their loss, and deeply sympathize with bereaved families and friends, we rejoice that when they fell they were in the service of their Redeemer, and engaged in the promotion of his cause upon the earth. We trust, therefore, that they were taken for a wise purpose, and that they will meet the approval of the Judge of the whole earth, in the day of reckoning and recompense.

Elders Lyman and Rich are still in California, laboring in San Bernardino and other places in that State; Elder Orson Hyde is in Carson County, Utah Territory, where he has organized a Branch of the Church. Elder John Taylor is in New York, presiding, and editing the "Mormon." Elder F. D. Richards is in Liverpool, presiding over the European Mission, and editing and publishing "The Star." Elder George A. Smith is still engaged as Historian and General Church Recorder, and, together with the remainder of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, the Presidents of Seventies, and others, is laboring in the various Settlements of Utah, directed from time to time as duty seems to require. Elder Orson Spencer is editing and publishing the "St. Louis Luminary," in St. Louis, Mo., and George Q. Cannon is engaged in the publication of the Book of Mormon, in the Hawaiian language, in San Francisco, California, where he also intends publishing a paper. Elder Dan. Jones is publishing the "Trump of Zion," in Swansea, South Wales; John Van Cott, the "Scandinavian Star," in Copenhagen, and Augustus Farnham, the "Zion's Watchman," in Australia.

The East India Missionaries have returned, or are on their way hither, having faithfully preached the gospel, from two to five years, in that benighted country, with but little apparent success.

The work is still prospering in Australia, the Sandwich Islands, California, the British Isles, Denmark, Sweden, the North of Italy, Switzerland, France, the British Provinces, and in many parts of the United States. At Cape Town, South Africa, there is also quite a Branch of the Church.

A company of Saints left Sydney for the purpose of gathering to San Bernardino and this place, but only a few have as yet arrived on our western coast, the vessel having put into Honolulu in distress and been condemned, thus retarding their anticipated speedy arrival to our peaceful abodes.

This is the first attempt at gathering the Saints from Australia, and we hope it will prove successful, for there are many more in that region who strongly desire to gather with the Saints in these valleys, but cannot as yet obtain means of conveyance, trade and commerce from our western coast with that country being very limited.

The Saints are gathering home from every nation, kindred, tongue, and people; and while we are thus concentrating a heterogenous mass of all kinds of people, from almost all nations, though animated by one general spirit, intention and desire, it becomes one and all to be kind, courteous and gentle towards each other, and seek to instruct the people, that they may be more strongly cemented in feeling, interest, peace and union, as well as in faith, truth and the bonds of the new and everlasting covenant.

It was to this end, and to effect more fully this object, that the last conference appointed elders to take missions to all the settlements throughout Utah, that the people may become improved and cultivated in their taste and understanding, and in every grace and accomplishment; that they may be amalgamated in their views and feelings, be strengthened in their faith, and, by not omitting the small, and generally esteemed trifling, matters of practical life, that this generation of Saints may be found pure and holy, mild and equitable in their intercourse with each other, even polished shafts, after the similitude of a palace.

Remember that it is the trifling things of life which make up our existence, and that but a small number of great and important events transpire without them. They are, however small, the important little duties of life, upon the daily practice of which much depends to fit a people for the coming of the Lord Jesus, or to prepare them for an exaltation in the kingdom of our God.

Therefore, give heed unto the teachings of those we have sent among you, and let all strife, animosity and contention cease in your midst; live your religion, and let peace, faith, charity and good works abound.

To the Elders appointed upon these missions we say, "go forth in the spirit of humility and meekness, and teach the people in the things pertaining to their temporal as well as their eternal salvation; imbue the people with the spirit of holiness, cleanliness and economy, and with the Holy Ghost which leadeth into all truth."

To the Elders abroad we say, "be diligent in all your labors, be faithful in your testimony to the people, and when they receive the truth, learn them to live and practice their holy religion." It is easy to bear persecution, to contend for the faith, and even to die for it; the hardest of all is to live it, to be always actuated by its holy influences, and practice it in all the walks of life. It is not a plaything or mere toy to believe, or amuse ourselves with at our convenience, and then lay aside, but a tangible, every day experience and solid fact, entering into every avenue of business, of pastime and repose, as well as into the spiritually religious exercises of the mind.

In fact we have no requirement or duty upon this earth, only to serve God, keep his commandments, gather the Saints and build up his kingdom thereon; for this we live, for this we expect to die. But the main difficulty with the Saints is to live their holy religion, and pursue that course which will ensure unto them its blessings and privileges, and that increase of faith, intelligence and improvement which they may enjoy.

It is a small matter to devote and dedicate ourselves, and all we have, to the cause of truth and the building up of the kingdom of God upon the earth, but it is of importance to rightly apply ourselves and our means where we may do the most good. It is important that we be obedient and passive in the hands of the servants of God, and when we have embraced the truth, and placed ourselves, with all we have, upon the altar, to so remain, regardless alike of friend or foe, sunshine or shade, peace or plenty, of war, famine and pestilence. It is our duty not only to profess and be believers, but to work out our salvation, continuing faithful in all things, even unto the end.

When you enlist under the gospel banner give the adversary a ticket of leave, and never again permit him an abiding place in your bosoms, never again place yourselves under his influence, neither anything which you possess; live to build up the kingdom of our God, and let your actions correspond with your professions.

We say to the Elders abroad, as well as at home, "let these principles be instilled into your minds and the minds of all the Saints, and let them be amenable to the authorities which are placed over them; live humble before the Lord, deal justly and righteously, that the Spirit of the Lord may richly abide in you."

When the Elders who are upon foreign missions wish to return home, and have no instructions to that effect, it is their privilege to meet together, make the question a subject of prayer and supplication before the Lord, and then act as shall be decided in council in accordance with the dictates of the Holy Ghost. It is your privilege to know the mind and will of the Lord concerning these matters, and by pursuing the proper course you will obtain it.

Let all things be done in order, and let all the Saints, who can, gather up for Zion, and come while the way is open before them; let the poor also come, whether they receive aid or not from the Fund; let them come on foot, with hand carts or wheel-barrows, let them gird up their loins and walk through, and nothing shall hinder or stay them.

In regard to the foreign immigration another year, let them pursue the northern route from Boston, New York, or Philadelphia, and land at Iowa city or the then terminus of the railroad; there let them be provided with hand-carts, on which to draw their provisions and clothing, then walk and draw them, thereby saving the immense expense every year for teams and outfit for crossing the plains.

We are sanguine that such a train will outtravel any ox-train that can be started. They should have a few good cows to furnish milk, and a few beef cattle to drive and butcher as they may need. In this way the expense, risk, loss and perplexity of teams will be obviated, and the Saints will more effectually escape the scenes of distress, anguish and death which have often laid so many of our brethren and sisters in the dust.

We purpose sending men of faith and experience, with suitable instructions, to some proper out-fitting point to carry into effect the above suggestions; let the Saints, therefore, who intend to immigrate the ensuing year, understand that they are expected to walk and draw their luggage across the plains, and that they will be assisted by the Fund in no other way.

If any apostatize in consequence of this regulation, so much the better, for it is far better that such deny the faith before they start, than to do so, for a mere trifling cause, after they get here; and if they have not faith enough to undertake this job, and accomplish it too, they have not faith sufficient to endure with the Saints in Zion, the celestial law which leads to exaltation and eternal lives.

If this project is once fairly tested, and proves as successful as we have no doubt it will, the main expense of the immigration will be avoided, consequently thousands more than heretofore can receive assistance. Therefore, Saints and all returning Elders, who undertake to come through with companies, consider this subject and prepare yourselves accordingly.

During the general Conference, just closed, the younger people were counseled to obtain their endowments and marry; hence, we wish it understood that we are prepared to give the Saints their endowments in the House of the Lord, which has been built and dedicated expressly for that purpose; therefore, let parents, guardians, and bishops take this matter properly in hand, and counsel freely with the young people, and prepare them to receive their endowments and sealings. Young men, take unto yourselves wives of the daughters of Zion, and come up and receive your endowments and sealings, that you may raise up a holy seed unto the God of Abraham, even a holy and royal priesthood, who shall be born legal heirs thereunto, having a right to the keys thereof and to administer in all the ordinances pertaining to the House of the Lord. Cease your folly, and become men of God; act wisely and righteously before him, and his choice blessings will attend you.

We exhort all the Saints to live righteously, to remember and keep their covenants with their God and with each other, to pay their tithing and make their consecrations in the spirit of liberality and in all good conscience, nothing doubting.

Keep the commandments of the Lord; observe the instructions and counsel you receive from those placed over you to preside; be faithful and industrious, economical and prudent; seek continually unto the Lord for wisdom, and train up your children in his nurture and admonition, that when we shall have finished our pilgrimage upon the earth we may go hence in peace, having wrought righteousness and established justice thereon, and, through having fought the good fight and kept the faith, be prepared to come forth with a glorious resurrection to inherit eternal lives and exaltation, which may God grant, for his dear Son's sake. Amen.

Blood in Her Eye—Stand from Under.

A correspondent of the Boston Journal, writing from New York, tells the following:

An incident transpired here last week that has made some talk among the parties who have knowledge of the matter. A lady from the State of Maine came to this city last week on her way to California. She has as arms two revolvers and a bowie knife. The conductor purchased her a ticket in the California steamer, and she left in the vessel at noon. Her story is this: A short time since her husband obtained possession of all her wealth, converted all he could into gold, and then deserted his family, took a ship and started for the land of gold, around Cape Horn.

But this is not the worst; he took with him a female not his wife. Injured and maddened the wife has started after her recreant lord; not from love, but from hate; not to recover possession of her absconding husband, but to administer to him a deserved chastisement; not to take him back, but to shoot him and his companion. Wind, weather and steam permitting, the lady will reach California some time in advance of her absconding mate. He will no doubt be rather surprised to meet her ladyship on the California landing, and unless seasickness shakes the wrath out of her, the meeting will not be one of the most conjugal that can be imagined.

One of 'Em.

Kendall, of the New Orleans Picayune, in a letter from Paris to that paper, says:

"A tough and hardy old fellow recently passed through Lyons, on his way to Savoy, his native country. No less than eighty years ago, when he was forty-one he was sentenced to the French galleys for life for some crime. At the commencement of our revolution, being then a middle-aged man, he was shut out from the world, and of course expected to end his days, barring the chances of an escape, at the bagne. The other day he was released, at the age of one hundred and twenty-one. No cause is assigned, but the probability is that the government here thought that he had worked out more than a natural life in the galleys, and that he was past doing any further harm. It is said that he has a little property in Savoy, the interest on which has been accumulating exactly one hundred years, or since he arrived at the age of twenty-one. The old fellows enjoys perfect health, although he stoops so much that his face nearly touches his knees."

Is Mormonism a Religious Paradox?

ARTICLE II.

CONTINUED.

We pass now to the Acts of the Apostles, and find the disciples there assembled, in an upper room, making prayer and supplication to God; "tarrying until they were endowed with power from on high." When suddenly there was a sound from Heaven, "As of rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting; and there appeared cloven tongues, like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues as the spirit of God gave them utterance." Acts iii. Peter expostulates with, and preaches to the thousands that were there assembled, and there in Jerusalem, the starting point of their ministration, preaches the first gospel sermon after the death of Jesus.

The power of God had been remarkably developed, and the spirit had rested down upon them in mighty power; the thing that then took place, was no vain fantasie, or wild illusion. It was a thing that was visible and tangible. It was on the day of Penticost, a celebrated feast of the Jews, who were in Jerusalem from all nations for the purpose of celebrating this feast. They, together with the assembled multitude, beheld the power of God visibly manifested, and heard the Apostles, under the inspiration of that spirit, "speak, as they were moved upon by the Holy Ghost;" and though fishermen of Gallilee, they spake "to every one, in their own tongue, wherein they were born." To Parthians, Medes, Elamites, Mesopotamians, Capadocians, Asians, Phrygians, Pamphilians, Egyptians, Libians, Romans, Cretes and Arabians; Jews and Proselytes. These various tongues and peoples heard them "speak in their own language the wonderful works of God." Of course they were amazed; whilst some attributed it to one thing and others to another, some of the inconsiderate and ignorant, attributed it to the effects of wine, as if wine would confer the gift of tongues, and develop a power, such as was then manifested; besides, it was but the third hour; about nine o'clock in the morning. The Jews never drank so early—it was contrary to their custom. Peter, however, stood up, with the eleven, and successfully silenced these mockeries; and told them that they were not drunk, that this that had then taken place was that which was spoken of by the Prophet Joel, "And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophecy; and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams: and on my servants and on my handmaidens will I pour out, in those days of my spirit; and they shall prophecy." He then went on to tell them that Jesus was indeed the Messiah, that the prophets, and especially David, had prophesied concerning his death and resurrection and ascension; and that although they had crucified him, "God had made him both Lord and Christ." When they heard this, they were pricked to the heart, and said unto Peter, and to the rest of the Apostles, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?"

Let us now pause for a moment, and reflect. John the Baptist had before preached unto the multitudes that came from Judea and Jerusalem, "Baptism, for the remission of sins." Jesus and his disciples were obedient to these principles, and were also baptized. After his resurrection, our Saviour appeared unto his disciples and told them to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned; he told them moreover, "to tarry at Jerusalem until they were endowed with power from on high." Here we find the apostles tarrying in Jerusalem; the power descending, and Peter positively stating that Christ having ascended to the right hand of God, "and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost; he hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear." What was it that they then saw and heard? THE GIFT OF THE HOLY GHOST, which is another principle or doctrine, that the Mormons believe in.

Let us now for a moment look at the scene which is here presented. We have an immense assemblage of persons present from every nation under heaven. We have two apostles, acting and speaking under the immediate inspiration of the spirit of God. The power of God is here manifested, and the gift of the Holy Ghost given. Here we have the first gospel sermon preached after the resurrection and ascension of Jesus, and here also we have multitudes "pricked to the heart," and asking "men and brethren, what shall we do?" If we want scriptural doctrines, and ordinances; if we want pure unadulterated principles; if we want the gospel as it emanated from inspired apostles, surely this is the place to look for it. It had not then been vitiated by interested, designing, or intriguing men; it was before error or superstition had crept into the church; it had not been corrupted by heritics, councils, synods, conventions, priests, or people. It was not then so plastic as to be moulded into masses, creeds, opinions, bodies of divinity, and systems of theology, nor was it adulterated by the popular dogmas of the present day. It was the free unadulterated outpourings of truth, emanating from the living fountains of eternal intelligence from the great Eloheim, and flowing through the heart and lips of Inspired Apostles, who spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. It was the gospel of Jesus Christ in its simplicity, its purity, its richness, its beauty, its power and glory. It was the ushering in of a new dispensation, the revelation of God to man. It is a paradox to modern Christians—It is Mormonism.

Let us now inquire what was taught by the apostles to these multitudes, for here were inspired apostles and here were multitudes "pricked to the heart," who asked, "men and brethren, what must we do? We believe your testimony concerning Jesus, and that he was the Messiah. We believe that you are men of God, and have authority to teach and administer; we believe what we have seen manifested is the gift of the Holy Ghost. We believe that the Savior of the world has been crucified, is dead, and risen again, and that you are his representatives. We are pricked to the heart—men and brethren, what shall we do?" Were they told to do penance? No. We would here remark, we do not find fault with terms—it is realities. They were told to repent, which some would say is equivalent; what then, go to the priest and be forgiven? No. But did not Jesus say, "he whosoever sins ye remit shall be remitted?" Yes; and Peter had that power, and we shall see how he exercised it. Did he tell them to put their names on a class book, and come on trial for a while? No. Did he tell them to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ? No. This they already did, and consequently it would have been superfluous. They were pricked to the heart in consequence of their faith in Jesus. Did he tell them to go into their closet or into the woods or wilderness to pray? Prayer is good in its way, but this was not the place, this was a time for action. Did they tell them to lead a good moral life? No. There was something else to do—there was the gospel to be obeyed. Did they tell them to get converted, and then be baptized? No. Did they tell them that baptism was of very little moment? No. Did they tell them that they could be baptized, by pouring, sprinkling or immersion, to suit their tastes? No. Did they tell them to bring their children to be baptized? No. Did they tell them to be baptized for the remission of sins, but that they need not look for the gift of the Holy Ghost? No. What did they say? "Repent and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost;" and why? "For the promise is unto you"—the promise of what? why the obvious promise of the gift of the Holy Ghost. What is that? "That which you have seen and heard." And to whom else? "To your children." And to whom else? "To ALL that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." What can we understand by this? That wherever that gospel was preached and believed in, the gift of the Holy Ghost should follow; and that, if it did not follow, it is not the gospel that is preached and believed in. What was the result? They went right forward and attended to the ordinance of baptism, "and the same day there was added to the church three thousand souls;" without mourners, benches, penance, or affliction of the body, and without any of the modern forms above alluded to. Did Peter forgive sins? Yes. How? Having authority to administer in the ordinances of the gospel, power to bind on earth and in heaven, and having been taught by Jesus how to save men, he told them to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus for the remission of sins; and when they believed and repented, he baptized them. Here, then, is the simple manner that the apostles adopted to introduce the gospel; there was no quibbling about doctrine, no uncertainty on the part of the apostles, nor yet of the people; the method was plain and simple—there was no telling them to believe in Jesus, when they already were believers; no ingenious methods introduced, to make them believe.

Southern Emigration to Kansas.

We yesterday had the pleasure of meeting with Dr. Summers, of New Market, Va., who is en route for Kansas, in company with several gentlemen from other portions of the State. These gentlemen came out to secure locations for about one thousand persons, who purpose emigrating from Virginia to Kansas Territory this fall. This emigration will be entirely from the eastern part of the State—60 families from Richmond, 30 from Stanton, 50 from Rappahannock county, and the balance from counties adjoining. Dr. S. also informs us that there is much excitement throughout Western Virginia, in regard to Kansas.—[Westport News, Oct. 20.

The New Hampshire Sentinel and the Mormons.

The New Hampshire Sentinel, of a late date, feels very much shocked at the state of things in Utah, as detailed to Horace Greeley in Washington City, by a very "honorable gentleman" from Salt Lake. After quoting the pith of this honorable gentleman's discovery and revelation to the oracle Greeley, such as "Brigham Young's Babylon," "Sensuality from bad to worse," "Polygamy," "Brigham Young's seventy wives," "Blasphemy," "Impudent assumption," "Buffoonery," "Horrible den," &c., the Sentinel, on its own responsibility, then exclaims, "Such a state of things in one of the largest Territories, where these Mormons have full swing, must not be tolerated much longer. The laws in every other State are severe against polygamy, and are they to be unobserved in Utah? Better set off the Territory at once as a heathen nation."

Oh! horrible, Mr. Sentinel! What! cast us off without the pale of the good old Monogamic Christian society of the States? Oh don't! What, cast us off forever beyond the sound of that old familiar song, "We have done those things we ought not, and left undone those things that we ought to have done!" Must we be shut out, dear Mr. Sentinel, from that Monogamic society that has grown so venerable by age, and have none of those privileges in common with our brethren of the States? Must we be left to provide for and support all our wives and children, while you retain the privilege of only providing for one wife, and practice seduction and corruption in a clandestine manner, and throw the responsibily, of whatever may follow, upon society in general? How can you be so cruel! Must Utah forever be an exception to any other State or Territory, and continue, as she has done, to have no house of ill-fame or common brothel for public convenience as do our eastern friends, so that when those friends come among us to sojourn for a short time, like Mr. Greeley's anonymous gentleman, they are obliged to go away growling like the terrier that has tree'd his game and returns whining in despair? You see, Mr. Sentinel, that such an amputation as you speak of would place us in a very awkward position, and when you or your friends should call on us, of the Utah heathen nation, on your way perchance to California, we could not accommodate you with that variety furnished in those less heathenish States from whence you came, and you might be led to exclaim, as did one of the U. S. Judges, "'Tis really too hard." It of course would be rather humiliating to us to see a brother of the editorial cloth shake his money in a city of twenty thousand inhabitants without a bid, and then to be under the necessity of saying to him, "money don't tell in this 'heathenish' community, and the only way to get along here is to take steps that will insure your responsibility, by marrying one of the heathen daughters of Zion, (if you can find favor in their sight,) and becoming a trusty, honorable citizen." When you had done this, and shown yourself to be a man of integrity and righteousness, and a kind husband and father, another of the daughters of Jacob might see your good works and wish to become identified in so substantial an alliance. Having thus established your reputation, you might, by taking the responsibility, as in the first instance, be permitted, like Jacob of old, to add the Rachel to the Leah. But, if you would save us the humiliation of demanding such responsibilities from our anti-heathen friends, a better way, than to "cast us off," would be to send missionaries among us to mix up and inoculate our heathen community with the irresponsible promiscuous institutions of anti heathen New Hampshire and other christian States.

If you could not succeed with your troop of best selected, honey-tongued seducers to make the "heathen" daughters of Utah believe that irresponsibility, and merely passional attraction is all that is necessary on your part, you might beat up for volunteers in the anti-heathen cities of New York, Boston and Portsmouth, and take out a goodly company of those females that have been trained in the anti-heathen practices of those cities. Their education, under Monogamic Christian restriction, has qualified them to look lightly on responsibilities, and their yielding, accommodating genius might be made in Utah a powerful auxiliary in converting those heathens from the error of their ways.

But really and seriously, Mr. Sentinel, do you believe those tit-bits of slander and contumely that you have gleaned from a "gentleman," so honorable that he dare not have his name published? If you do, how can you reconcile the counter-statements that have been published from time to time by those of your eastern friends who have passed through and sojourned for a time in Salt Lake City? The published reports of Judges Reed, Shaver, and Kinney? What will you do with the official report to Congress, of Capt. Stansbury, Topographical Surveyor in Utah, under the authority of Government; and also, that of the lamented Capt. Gunison? Have you ever published any of these reports for the benefit of your readers, or do you leave that part out and only act the part of scavenger to rake up the filth, and leave others of less carrion proclivity to "do the decent thing." We will not be the judge in this matter, but leave it with yourself to recall to mind your past course, and ask yourself whether you have taken the advantage of public opinion against that inoffensive people, called Mormons, and like the proscriptionists of different dispensations, cried "away with him!" "Cast them off as heathens." If you are able to take up the subject of Mormonism in all or any of its parts, and show its inconsistancy with scripture, we challenge you to do it; but until you do that, we protest against your "snap judgment," and premature decision, as above. We acknowledge the institution of the plurality of wives, so did Abraham and others that the christian world acknowledge to be good men. How much can you make off of that? We believe in God, and in his laws, and the plan devised by him for the salvation of all who believe and obey it. How much heathenism can you glean from that? We believe in being brotherly and assisting each other. We believe in every man having his own wife, and every wife her own husband, and neither of them any other; and that those who have sexual intercourse with any other than their own, are worthy of death, and those who do it, and escape such a punishment, do not get their just due; the custom of our monogamic friends to the contrary notwithstanding. We believe in temperence in all things, and we teach it to all. We believe in being subject to law, and deprecate the heathenish practice of mobocracy. The drinking, swearing, gambling and carousing that exists in the cities of Babylon, we neither countenance nor tolerate, and we would sooner be cast off as heathens, than be subjected to such wickedness. These are some of our sentiments, and we ask if maintaining them would constitute us heathens, even if we should be cast off? If so, we refuse not, to become "heathens."

Christmas.

According to a notice in our last, we visited Philadelphia on the 25th, in company with Brothers Felt and Robbins, to attend a Christmas party, prepared by the Philadelphia Saints. The weather was somewhat rainy and unpropitious, but the provisions for a good party were ample and unexceptionable; and we freely and cheerfully acknowledge that our anticipations, specified in our last, "that things would be done up brown," were fully realized, in the management of the affairs by Bros. Clinton and Harrison and others who assisted them.

Among the company present we recognized our friends Bros. Boley and Snediker, late from Salt Lake City on missions to the States; E. R. Young, from Connecticut; Stephen B. Rose, from Hornerstown, N. J., and recently from Salt Lake; and S. A. Wooley, from Del., and recently from the India mission.

The company assembled at three o'clock, and partook of a sumptuous Christmas dinner, composed of a variety of edibles too numerous to mention, and served up by cooks that were masters of their business. Having done justice to that part of the subject, the company were entertained by songs, recitations and speeches by different persons, among whom was Bro. Solomon Mack, from New Hampshire, a near relative of the Prophet Joseph Smith, who expressed much gratification in having the privilege of meeting with the Saints, and enjoying the peaceful influence of the spirit of the Lord that prevailed in their midst on that occasion. He expressed a desire and determination to gather up to Zion as soon as circumstances would allow.

The intervals between song and story were agreeably filled with a treat of pastry, confectionary, fruit, &c.

A good spirit prevailed, and all present seemed to enjoy themselves well. Near the close one ordination and some few administrations to infirm ones were attended to by the Priesthood, and the company retired to their several homes, well pleased with the manner in which they had spent their Christmas.

Fillibusters Arrested.

Detention of the Steamship Northern Light.

Quite an excitement has arisen in this city during the past week over the arrest of some fillibustering parties about to leave here for Nicaragua on the steamship Northern Light.

On the evening of the 22d inst. District Attorney McKeon, accompanied by his own assistant and the Deputy United States Marshal, paid a visit to the St. Nicholas Hotel, in search of the Nicaraguan Minister. He was soon introduced to Col. Parker H. French, who, after being interrogated by McKeon as to whether he was associated with the parties now forming in different portions of this city, with the supposed intention of emigrating to Nicaragua to take part in the invasion of that province by Walker and others, contrary to our neutrality laws—denied any such connection. After quite a pithy discussion between the officer and Col. French, the former, incensed by remarks from French, with his attendants, left the hotel to try the virtue of law.

On Monday, the 24th, a dispatch was received from Washington by the U. S. Marshal, authorizing the arrest and detention of the Nicaragua steamer Northern Light.

A number of officers were then despatched to execute the order of Government. The counsel for the proprietors of the steamer decided the warrant to be illegal, and advised Capt. Tinklepaugh to proceed to sea immediately. Much confusion and uproar ensued, and some of the passengers undertook to cast off the lines of the steamer; they finally succeeded, and she was soon under way, with the Deputy Sheriff, sailing down the Bay. Mr. McKeon then sent word to the commander of the Revenue cutter, who got under way, and, assisted by a powerful steam tug, took chase of the fugitive craft. The chase was witnessed from the Battery by crowds of excited spectators; and as the cutter approached the ship, she fired a blank shot; this producing no effect, a ball was fired and the Northern Light hove to. The steamer then came up and anchored at the Navy Yard, near the cutters.

Under a consideration that two men should be allowed to go on the steamer to her destination, to see that no arms or ammunition, &c., should be landed, and be brought back, together with any contraband articles as above named, free of expense to the Government, the Northern Light has since been allowed to proceed on her voyage. A number previously arrested have been discharged, and a number are yet in custody.

Information was given to the District Attorney—who has done his duty manfully—on Saturday afternoon, by Mr. Allen, of Brooklyn, who had been connected with the raising of a body of men for Nicaragua, and had charge of Central Hall, New York, where their meetings were held: that a meeting was appointed for Saturday night, but during the day, ascertaining that the organization was an illegal one, and not wishing to violate the laws of his country, Mr. A. made up his mind to withdraw, and in accordance with this resolution, failed to open the Hall that evening, as was expected of him.

About one o'clock on Sunday morning his house was visited by Mr. Farnsworth, colonel of the Falstaff regiment, which Walker and French were endeavoring to raise in New York; he told Allen that he had come to kill him for betraying the designs of himself and his confederates, and drew a knife upon him. Mr. Allen appealed to his honor, as a man, not to kill him in cold blood—and Farnsworth chivalrously allowed him to go to the kitchen for a carving knife. Instead of doing this, Allan went into the street for a policeman. Farnsworth meanwhile escaped.

In the Circuit Court, on the 26th, Mr. Allen, of Brooklyn, made the following affidavit:

Southern District of New York, ss.—William H. Allen, of New York City, being duly sworn, doth depose and say: That John Creighton, Francis O'Keefe, O. J. Morrison, Charles Walters, and William Lyster did, on the 20th day of December, 1855, at the city of New York, in the Southern district of New York, begin and set on foot a military expedition or enterprise, to be carried on from thence against the territory of the State of Nicaragua, with whom the United States then were, and now are, at peace. And further he says not.

W. H. ALLEN.

Sworn to before me, Dec. 26, 1855.
GEO. W. MORTON, U. S. Commissioner.

Parker H. French, George B. Hare, Louis Schlessinger, Dillingham, Mallery and Tamworth, are held for examination. These parties are charged, on the oath of Wm. H. Allen, with "setting on foot, preparing and providing the means for a military expedition or enterprize to be carried on against Nicaragua, with which the United States are at peace," etc.

The press of New York have pretty generally condemned the course of the Government in interfering in this fillibuster movement. We do not see, however, that any blame can be attached, but rather believe it to be commendable, and the proper course to prevent the growing propensity, in a portion of the community, to appropriate to themselves that which they have no right to, and to set on foot that which, if allowed to progress, will bring the nation into disgrace, as being too effeminate or corrupt to control its own lawless citizens.

A Proclamation,

By the President of the United States of America.

Whereas, Information has been received by me that sundry persons, citizens of the United States and others, residents therein, are preparing within the jurisdiction of the same to enlist, or enter themselves, or to hire or retain others to participate, in military operations within the State of Nicaragua:

Now, therefore, I, Franklin Pierce, President of the United States, do warn all persons against connecting themselves with any such enterprise or undertaking, as being contrary to their duty as good citizens and to the laws of their country, and threatening to the peace of the United States.

I do further admonish all persons who may depart from the United States, either singly or in numbers, organized or unorganized, for any such purpose, that they will thereby cease to be entitled to the protection of this Government.

I exhort all good citizens to discountenance and prevent any such disreputable and criminal undertaking as aforesaid, charging all officers, civil and military, having lawful power in the premises, to exercise the same for the purpose of maintaining the authority and enforcing the laws of the United States.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed to these presents.

Done at the City of Washington, the eighth day of December, one thousand eight [L. S.] hundred and fifty-five, and of the Independence of the United States the eighteenth.

By the President: FRANKLIN PIERCE.
W. L. MARCY, Secretary of State.

The Oregon Indians appear to be sinned against as well as sinning. They have taken up arms and will ultimately be extinguished, beyond doubt; but if the history of Oregon ever comes to be fairly written, it will be found that the poor natives of the soil were the victims of many gross outrages before they resorted to making war upon the whites. The following paragraph is a postcript to Superintendent Palmer's letter, dated Dayton, Oregon, October 19, in reference to the murder of a number of Indians by the whites:

"A gentleman of undoubted integrity arrived this morning with intelligence that companies of miners and others organized had commenced an indiscriminate slaughter of all the Indians found on Table Rock reservation; that they had already killed one hundred and six men, women, and children."

The victims of this outburst of fury, it is said, were all friendly Indians; but their tribe is now turned into a hostile foe, and this outrage has probably tended as much as anything else to stir up the whole Indian population. Thus bad begins and worse remains behind.—[Pittsburgh Gazette.

We endorse your sentiments Mr. Gazette.—[Ed.

Important Discovery at Babylon.—Col. Rawlinson has just discovered among the ruins of ancient Babylon an extensive library—not indeed, printed on paper, but impressed on baked bricks—containing many and voluminous treatises on astronomy, mathematics, ethnology, and several other most important branches of knowledge. These treatises contain facts and arguments which, in his opinion will have no small operation on the study of the sciences to which they relate, and which throw great light upon biblical history and criticism, and the history of our race.

The Loss of the Crescent City.

Letter from Capt. Gray to Mr. M. O. Roberts.

Nassau, N. P., Dec. 13, 1855.

M. O. Roberts, Esq., President U. S. M. Steamship Co.

Dear Sir: It is my painful duty to report to you the loss of the steamship Crescent City, which occurred on the 7th inst., at 7 P. M., by her striking on the western point of Mantanilla reef.

At noon I was in latitude 27 degrees, 59 minutes, 10 seconds North; longitude 78 degrees, 6 minutes, 15 seconds West, which position was obtained by two good sets of sights taken at 9 A. M., by two chronometers, and a good meridian altitude. A course was then shaped to strike soundings on the northwest point of Mantanilla bank, and strict orders given to the officer of the deck to see that she was properly steered. At 5 30, judging myself near the bank, I took a cast of the lead, but without getting soundings. At 5 45 and 6 I again cast the lead, but with the same result. At 6 15 I stopped the engine, and while in the act of sounding the ship struck in three fathoms water. Standing on the wheel-house at the time, the engineer standing alongside of me, I gave the order to back, which was immediately done. The wind at the time was blowing from the northeast; foretopsail and foresail being set were immediately taken in, but the ship remained fast, and I was unable to start her back. The after hatches were taken off, and I commenced throwing cargo overboard. The ship struck about three times, and knocked very heavily, when water began to run into her. The Worthington pump was started, deck pumps and bailing water out of the engine room in the ash buckets, but in less than an hour the fires in the port boilers were put out, those in the starboard in two hours from the time of striking. Seeing it was then impossible to save the ship an anchor was let go to keep her from forging over into deep water, and steps immediately taken to save the lives of passengers. The boats were previously got ready for lowering, provisions and water in them. I ordered the topmast, yards and gaffs sent down, and a raft constructed, which was finished and launched by one o'clock. The gun was fired every fifteen minutes, and a blue light and rocket burnt alternately through the night, in the hopes of attracting the attention of those passing. At daylight nothing was in sight, and the ship broken amidships, and water over sea-side of lower cabin. Early in the forenoon I dispatched Captain Holbrook (a passenger) with five men in one of the quarters boats to pull to the south for assistance.

In the afternoon a steamer to the north standing to the west. I fired eleven guns, but she did not notice them. The day employed in adding to the raft, and at two o'clock I cut away the smoke stack to relieve the ship.

The second night was comparatively smooth, but on the morning of the 9th, the wind hauling to the south, and fearing it would go round to the north, I cut away the main and mizzen masts to build a second raft, but at one o'clock two sails were seen to the west, approaching us; at three they anchored close to us, and proved to be a wrecking schooner and sloop brought to our assistance by Captain Holbrook. I then commenced putting the passengers on board of the schooner, and at 8 P. M. sent her off with them, and as much of their baggage as she could carry. The next morning I loaded the sloop with the remainder of the baggage and started her at one o'clock; then nothing in sight.

In the latter part of the afternoon the wreckers began to collect around us, and before dark there were seventeen at work, saving as much of the cargo as could be got at, as well as the furniture and fittings of the ship, which will be sent here as quick as they are bonded. At 8 P. M. I left with twenty-nine of the crew (having sent off a portion of them in each of the other vessels) for this place, for the purpose of forwarding the passengers and receiving the property as it arrived, leaving the first officer, chief engineer and eleven others—the two first to see that everything was properly taken care of and dispatched as soon as possible, and the others to be sent off one at a time in each vessel to protect the property.

I arrived here late last night and am happy to say that all that left the wreck before me have reached this port in safety. Not a soul has been lost or a person hurt in any way, and all of the passengers' baggage has been saved.

If the weather continues fine, a great deal will be saved; but should it set in to blow hard from the north, she will soon break up.

with regard to the cause of the accident, I can only say that it was caused by either current or the compasses being out of the way, I am confident that my position at noon was within a mile of being correct, and that the correct course was given to strike the bank in the proper place; that I was approaching cautiously; that the lead had not been neglected; that the lookout had been kept, the first officer but a few moments before having come down from the topsail yard; and that I was on the watch myself. With regard to the compasses, I must say that after passing Barnegat light I shaped a course to make Hatteras light and on the morning of the 5th, A. M., I was called for the purpose of looking out for the light; but when I obtained the position of the ship at noon I found I must have passed thirty or thirty-five miles outside of the range of the light. At the time I attributed it to the stream but the ship again falling to the east, on the night of the 7th, and in getting the passenger's baggage on deck, a large box of steel tools was taken out of one of the staterooms, near the after hatch, close to the compass by which we had been in the habit of shaping the course, which two causes lead me to believe that the accident was caused by an error in the compass.

I have chartered a brig, and shall dispatch the passengers for Havana on the morning of the 16th, sending the purser and surgeon with them, and the steward and a portion of his men to wait on them.

I am gratified to be able to say that every officer, man and boy under my command, behaved in every way to my satisfaction, and I do not believe that there is one of them that would have gotten into a boat or on the raft without orders from me until every passenger was safe.

To Captain Holbrook and Captain James, two of the passengers, I am indebted for much assistance. They kindly offered their services as soon as the ship struck, and worked till the last to assist in whatever was to be done.

I have been particular in giving you a full account of the accident; I shall address you by every opportunity, and as soon as I can settle the business, leave in the first conveyance for the United States. With respect, your obedient servant, ALFRED G. GRAY.

Correspondence.

From Our Utah Correspondent.

Historian's Office,
G. S. L. City, Oct. 31, 1855.

To the Editor of the Mormon:

Sir,—Owing to the failure of the parent Government in fulfilling its contracts, we have not enjoyed the pleasure of a visit from the Mormon for the past two months; though we must not complain, for it is said there are a few poor half-starved Indians hovering about the road, and Uncle Sam cannot safely pass; though everybody else does so with perfect safety, and have done for nearly a year. We pay our postage, and its all well whether our letters go or not, although patience may cease to be a virtue in some cases. I wish the Government had the justice either to carry the mail or clear the track for private enterprize; so that punctual men may do it. The dearth for news has been unusually great for the season, although the mails across the Desert from San Bernardino to this place have been punctual to the hour; yet failures beyond that place have occurred; for, from causes unknown to us, we have received no papers.

The Presidency have made a visit to Cache Valley, where extensive arrangements have been made for wintering large herds of cattle. The fires have continued their destructive work in the Kanyons on account of the excessive drouth, and immense bodies of valuable timber have been destroyed. The Emigrating Companies and Merchant trains have continued to come in during the last month; the P. E. Fund Companies have lost many cattle, and those brought in are very poor. The President proposes for the next years' emigration to try it on foot, which would do away with guarding cattle, and running the world over to buy them, and being frightened to death with stampedes, or being bothered with mending broken wagons; then it would look so much that a fellow was in earnest when going to Zion, and when he got here he would not be very anxious to go away again. The weather has been very fine for the last month, which has been decidedly favorable to the late emigration. The large amount of late corn and wheat was killed by the frost, Fort Supply suffering the most in proportion. From the Los Vegas we learn that their crops were mostly eat up by Saleratus.

A special term of the District Court is in session in this city, but for what special business, I have not been able to learn; but, from the number of loafers daily round the Council House, I am led to conclude that something is up, but I have had neither time nor health to go in and see for myself. I have visited Utah county, where all things are prospering as usual. The county militia have been organized into a brigade, and P. W. Conover has been elected its commander. The corn and potato crops at Provo are quite satisfactory. A Quarterly Conference was attended in Provo on Friday, Saturday and Sunday last, by Elders Parley P. and Orson Pratt. The Sunday previous they attended a Conference at Farmington, in Davis county. Next Friday and Saturday they expect to be at Ogden. The members of the Quorum of the Twelve are holding similar Conferences in all the settlements in the Territory.

The spirit for raising fruit is somewhat on the increase; many are making preparations for planting orchards. The fruit in this city suffered severely from drouth, but peaches were ripening for two months. I ate good flavored peaches at Professor Carrington's on the 16th inst., which had been just gathered from the trees, and he had several bushels on them then. I think there is everything to encourage exertion in fruit raising.

The merchants do not appear to be selling goods so rapidly as in some seasons previous, owing, it is said, to a scarcity of cash in the mountains.

Judge Drummond has removed his family to Fillmore; a regular term of the Court will commence there on the 12th of November. It is rumored that attempts will be made by the Marshal to bring some of the warriors engaged in the Gunnison Massacre before that Court; and on that account many of the Pahvantes are said to have gone west of the Great Desert; but if they could elude the vigilance of Major Reynolds and the gallant Lieut. Maury, of law license memory, I think it would be difficult for Marshal Heywood to catch the real rascals; and the Marshal would not be satisfied with Piede prisoners and squaws, who were only accessory by eating some of the plunder given them by their masters, although some of them are now writhing out their three years' imprisonment (under the judgment of Chief Justice Kinney) in the Penitentiary. The Marshal, although of Puritan stock, would most certainly be unwilling to let the guilty cobbler go, and hang the innocent weaver; but how to catch the real rascals, that's the tug.

I am in constant receipt of letters from Elder Hyde. It appears that the southern angular line of Utah came nearer cutting off Carson Valley than the western, as Genoa, the county seat, is in about latitude 39 deg. We had supposed it to be further north. The Elder appears to be in good spirits, and is making calculation to make permanent and extensive investments in that part of the Territory.

Captain Charles A. Harper's division of P. E. Fund passengers arrived here on the 29th inst. Geo. A. Smith.

Thirty-Fourth Congress.—First Session.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20, 1855.

Mr. Brodhead, from the Committe on Claims, submitted a report that all private claims on which adverse reports were made or ordered during the last session of Congress, which were pending at its close, and which claims are founded upon any law of Congress or regulation of the Executive Departments, or contract, express or implied, with Government, and which the claimants choose to prosecute before the Court of Claims, be referred to said court. The report was adopted.

On motion of Mr. Cass, the protest of members of the Illinois Legislature against the election of Mr. Trumbull was referred to the Committee on Judiciary.

Mr. Trumbull presented evidence showing that he ceased to be Judge and was succeeded by another two years before his election to the Senate. The evidence was similarly referred, and the Senate adjourned until Monday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The House resumed voting for a Speaker, with the following result:

Banks	104	Fuller	34
Richardson	73	Scattering	10

Mr. Smith, of Ala. said the result of the vote just announced is a pretty fair indication that no result will be reached to-day. Wishing to promote by degrees the business of the House he proposed to proceed to the selection of two standing Committees, one to be the Committee of Ways and Means, and the other Foreign Affairs—the Northern party nominating four members thereof, the Administration party three, and the corporal's guard of the South, assisted by members from the North, two. These Committees to select their chairman by a majority vote, the chairman to preside over the ordinary business of the House alternately till a Speaker is elected. He proposed that one hour be devoted to the introduction of bills to be hereafter referred to the appropriate Committee. Members to be then sworn in by the Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means—the House next to proceed to the election of a Clerk, Postmaster, Sergeant-at-Arms, Doorkeeper, and last, but not least, Chaplain, through whose prayers, perhaps, some oil may be thrown on the troubled waters.

This is no time for crimination and re-crimination. We want harmony and concession. Several gentlemen objected, but the plan specified in the law of 1789, was in the way, as it prescribes that a Speaker and Clerk shall first be elected, and members sworn in by the Speaker before proceeding to any other business.

Mr. Smith, remarked that unless some such plan was adopted public business must suffer.

Mr. Cadwallader counselled his Democratic friends to adhere to their position and platform.

Mr. McMullen warned the Seward Black "Republicans" that if the Government ever passed into their hands, and they restored the Missouri restriction and repealed the Fugitive Slave law, the Union must and will be dissolved, the declaration of that fanatical gray headed man to the contrary notwithstanding.

Mr. Zillicoffer assigned the reasons why he could support neither Richardson nor Banks, saying that he and his friends stand on middle and national grounds, which all might occupy without compromising principles.

Mr. Wright of Tenn. contended that however patriotic the American party here may be, they are, by their votes, making the extension of the naturalization laws paramount to every other consideration.

Mr. Cox recognized no one as a member of the American party who does not stand on the twelfth section of the Philadelphia platform. He said a Speaker could be elected immediately if Democrats would come over to his side, but Americans have no power to carry over all their force to Richardson.

Adjourned.

WASHINGTON Dec. 21, 1855.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. Giddings denied that he had used such a remark as was attributed to him by Mr. McMullin, viz: that the Government would eventually go into the hands of the North, and that the Abolition party would elect their candidate for the Presidency, and that then the Union must and ought to be dissolved. He trusted no man would, expect him to reply to that gentleman (Mr. McMullin) except in case of palpable misrepresentation.

Mr. McMullin—What does the member mean? Does he suppose he is capable of insulting any member on this floor? When I am assailed by the contemptible member from Ohio, I will defend myself here or elsewhere. [Sensation.] I did condemn the course of that member and have nothing to take back.

Mr. Cox resumed his argument of yesterday endeavoring to show that the National American party could not untie in the election of Speaker with the Northern Anti-Slavery agitation party.

Mr. Cox debated the question of slavery, and defended its existence under the Constitution.

Mr. Etheridge differed from the gentleman, claiming that the South held their slaves in contempt of the Constitution.

Mr. Cox giving several gentlemen opportunity for explanations concerning the Kansas-Nebraska bill, concluded his three hours speech in advocacy of the recognized principles of the American party.

Mr. Cobb, of Georgia, defended his Democratic friends from the charge that they are responsible far the failure to organize the House, inasmuch as, being in the minority, they are powerless, without a union with those with whom they cannot sympathize.

The proscriptive principles of the Know Nothings, he said, formed an impossible barrier to a union with them. He invoked the friends of Mr. Richardson to stand firm, and not waive the Democratic organization, especially at a time when it is purged of the last vestage of Free Soilism and is entering upon new triumphs of principles.

Mr. Foster replied, saying, the Democrats had wedded themselves to a measure and not to a great principle, for it had come out to-day that the Nebraska bill is understood different in one section from what it is in another. If principle is the test, let it speak but one language. He condemned the Democratic caucus resolution. Adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22, 1855.

Mr. Bennett, (dem.) of Miss., defended the platform of the democratic caucus, and stated his objections to Banks and Fuller, incidentally condemning the parties they represented, and advocating Richardson's peculiar fitness for the Speakership.

On motion of Mr. Quitman, (dem.) of Miss., a resolution was adopted, limiting the time during which any member may continuously occupy the floor, to ten minutes each, until a speaker is chosen. [The parliamentary law under which the House acts prescribes no limit to discussion.]

Mr. Stanton, (black rep.) of Ohio, offered a resolution to elect a Speaker by plurality—following the precedent of 1849—and regarding this as the only practical means of organization.

Mr. Phelps, (dem.) of Mo., moved to lay the resolution of Mr. Stanton on the table.

The roll was called, and the resolution was tabled by a vote of 114 against 107.

Mr. Sapp, (black rep.) of Ohio, offered a resolution that after to-day the House shall meet at 10 o'clock A. M., until the election of Speaker be effected. Rejected by two majority.

Mr. Perry, (black rep.) of Me., said that the House had decided to-day not to elect a Speaker by plurality; therefore he offered a resolution that after to-day no debate be in order till the Speaker is elected. He thought this, if adopted, would result in the speedy organization of the House.

Mr. Keitt, (dem.) of S. C., offered an amendment, that after to-day all balloting for Speaker, be suspended until the 3d day of January—the reason assigned being that a majority of the Senate have left the city, and it will, therefore, be impossible to obtain a quorum for the reading of the message, even if the House should organize before that time.

Mr. Bocock, (dem.) of Va., suggested that, acting under ordinary parliamentary law, a majority might rescind the resolution, and then, proceeding to ballot, an undue advantage might be taken.

Mr. Keitt—It would be base and infamous to do so.

Mr. Sherman, (black rep.) of Ohio, maintained that the first business to be done was to elect a Speaker, and the House could not postpone that duty.

The House refused, by a majority of ten, to lay the whole subject on the table.

Mr. Keitt's amendment was rejected, and the consideration of Mr. Perry's resolution postponed until Monday. Adjourned.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24, 1855.

The Senate convened this morning, acted upon no business of importance, and adjourned till Thursday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. Letcher having received from time to time two votes for Speaker, stated distinctly he had never been a candidate for the office, and never would be. He stated this lest it be suspected that there might be something wrong in his position. He had as consistently and regularly voted for Banks as any other man in the House.

Mr. Stewart, in explaining the reasons why he had been voting for Mr. Richardson, said that his (Richardson's) and Mr. Fuller's position had been explained distinctly and explicitly, but Mr. Banks's had not. He asked Mr. Banks whether he ever said in a speech in Maine, "Let the Union slide!" Mr. Banks replied, in that speech I said there might be such a state of things in which he would consent—had reference to future contingencies, such as the prostration of the gigantic power of the Government to the support of a single institution—slavery.

He was for the Union as it is and would meet its enemies in a fair field. He was for the Union as the guarantee of the rights of the States and the main prop of our Government, and he would have it stand on the records of history, in the language of Washington, crowned with immortal fame.

Mr. Smith of Va.—I am not satisfied with the answer of the gentleman. Did you say under circumstances you would let the Union slide.

Mr. Banks—I have said all I desire to say.

Mr. Smith of Va.—I wish it to be distinctly understood that those who sustain Mr. Banks are voting for him with the knowledge that, in a certain contingency, he would let the Union slide.

Mr. Grow—I ask the gentleman and every member who has been here for the last four years, whether such a declaration had not been repeated from time to time by those now voting for Mr. Richardson, namely, that they are willing to dissolve the Union, and let it slide, in a certain contingency.

We stand here (continued Mr. Grow) to support the Constitution as it is explained by the Father of the Republic, and cotemporaneous reports for over sixty years. We say we are not willing to take any other construction, or that slavery shall go wherever our flag floats.

Mr. Rust believed from the beginning that all debate was out of order, as the first business is the election of Speaker.

On motion, the proposition pending when the House adjourned on Saturday, that no debate should be in order till the election of Speaker, was laid on the table.

Mr. Stuart submitted a proposition declaratory of the national principles on which the Speaker of the House should stand.

Mr. Colfax stated if Mr. Stewart would accept as a substitute a proposition opposing the annexation of Cuba and of appropriating, by annexation, that part of Oregon surrendered to Great Britain by Mr. Polk he (Colfax) might then vote with that gentleman. [Laughter.]

Mr. Bocock raised a question of order, saying the law requires that a Speaker be elected and members sworn before the transaction of any other business.

Mr. Boyce asked Mr. Banks, among other questions, "Are you in favor of recognizing Hayti and receiving a black Minister? Do you favor the abrogation of the fugitive slave law and the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia?

Cries from the friends of Mr. Banks, "Call the roll," amidst considerable confusion.

Mr. Banks replied to Mr. Boyce, and said he distinctly recollected Mr. Richardson, being a candidate for Speaker, had declined giving answers to questions propounded to him. [Laughter. Cries of "Good," "Good." "Call the roll," "Call the roll."]

Mr. Florence here made an ineffectual attempt to have the House adjourn until Thursday, for the purpose, as he said, that members might participate in the religious and social observances of Christmas. [Laughter.]

Mr. Brooks, referring to the enunciations of Messrs. Banks and Grow, said in the reverse contingency he was willing to let the Union slide. If the gentlemen on the other side, who support Mr. Banks, have that fixed determination, he wanted his constituents to know it. He desired the issue made here, that it might be frankly met if necessary.

Mr. Shorter, although voting for Mr. Richardson, was willing to unite on some other conservative candidate who believes the Missouri Compromise line should not be restored, in order to effect an election.

The House then voted with the following result:

Banks	101	Pennington	4
Richardson	72	Scattering	7
Fuller	31

Necessary to a choice 108.

Mr. Nichols offered a resolution that a Speaker be elected by a plurality vote.

Tabled by a vote of 116 against 101.

Mr. Orr moved that when the House adjourn it be till Thursday.

Mr. Giddings—We have no power to adjourn over. If the motion was agreed a majority may come here to-morrow, reverse the order and elect a Speaker.

Mr. Orr—If a Speaker were elected under such circumstances the majority would find "Jordan a hard road to travel." [Laughter.]

Mr. Florence—And it would be a very pretty example for Christian men to set the country. [Merriment.]

Mr. Orr's motion was negatived, and the House adjourned to Wednesday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26, 1855.

Mr. Knight offered a resolution that the House continue to vote for Speaker viva voce without debate, and if no choice be effected before the first trial on Friday, another vote then be had and the person having a majority of a quorum be declared Speaker.

The resolution was tabled by 11 majority.

Mr. Purviance submitted a resolution that until a Speaker be elected, the House continue voting from 12 to 6 P. M.; all discussion, except personal explanations and reasons for voting or changing votes, being prohibited.

This was tabled by 4 majority.

Mr. Sage proposed that until a Speaker be elected, no resolution for adjournment be in order till 4 P. M.

Mr. Campbell (Ohio) said all these suggestions are impracticable, as the will of the majority is the rule by which the House is governed. He thought more rapid progress could be made by resuming to vote forthwith.

Mr. Stephens suggested a modification, which Mr. Sage accepted—viz: "that until a Speaker is elected, no motion to adjourn shall be in order." He wished to bring the House to a test, and was willing to sit here day in and out, until the result should be effected.

Cries of "agreed, agreed."

Humphrey Marshall thought such a resolution might go with healing on its wings to the country, but the country might as well understand at the same time, that a majority can take any other shoot they desire.

Mr. Quitman was for following the example of our forefathers and adopting the common law principle, namely—starving the Jury until they agreed on a verdict. (Laughter.)

Mr. Carlisle asked Mr. Stephens whether he thought a sectional organization of so little importance, that he would give a certain party, whose physical endurance is greater than that of others, owing to their larger number, facilities to effect that object.

Mr. Stephens replied—This House is to be organized on one line or the other. If the people under their responsibility have returned a majority in favor of any particular line, the House will be organized, or we will go into dissolution. He did not know what would be the result of his proposition, but every gentleman must vote according to the dictates of his own judgment.

Mr. Letcher—I have no objection. The gentleman from Georgia shall make the test for himself, but I object to his applying it to me.

Mr. Millson thought there was no reason for the House imposing this restriction on itself, as it was always in the power of the majority to adjourn.

Mr. Bocock, while opposed as much as any man to a sectional organization, submitted to Mr. Carlisle, his colleague, whether the adoption of the resolution would throw into the hands of the party alluded to any more facilities than they now possess. If a sectional organization is to take place, why not have it now as well as next week.

Messrs. Orr and Greenwood severely opposed making the resolution a test of the strength of stomachs. (Laughter.)

Mr. McMullen supposed such a resolution would give the Anti-Nebraskaites the advantage.

Mr. Paine said the adoption of the resolution was with him a mere matter of time. He desired before voting to take leave of his family and friends. (Laughter.)

The House then, by twenty-seven majority, refused to lay the resolution on the table.

Mr. Peck suggested that he be enabled to lay in a stock of provisions. (Merriment.)

Mr. Paine wanted the resolution so amended that every member who may die under its operation shall have a monument erected to his memory. (Immoderate Laughter.)

The resolution that no motion for adjournment be considered in order until a Speaker is elected was then adopted by 116 against 86.

Mr. Cambell (Ohio) said, as it was to be a protracted session, and as those who have served here in years past know on such occasions that there are occasionally scenes of disorder and turbulence, unbecoming the dignity of Congress, offered a resolution inviting Mr. Orr of S. C., to preside until a Speaker could be elected.

Mr. Cobb (Ca.) advocated the proposition.

Messrs. Sage, Trafton, Washburne (Me.) and Stanton opposed it on the ground that such an expedient was unnecessary.

The House refused by a majority of twenty to table the resolution.

Mr. Colfax said he was not a lawyer, but he had heard from lawyers that possession was nine points of the law. Also as Mr. Orr is, he might ultimately be elected Speaker by the means proposed. Therefore, he would not consent to place him on the temporary occupancy of the chair. He (Colfax) proposed that Mr. Banks' friends, represented by one hundred and five, and Mr. Fuller's by forty, each select a Speaker pro tem, to alternately preside by agreement. After three more weeks struggle there might be a caving in of parties, and Mr. Orr would be found permanently in the chair.

Mr. Campbell (Ohio) replied, if the gentleman from Indiana expects to be worried out on principle he had better pack up and go home.

Mr. Colfax explained, he alluded to the billing and cooing between the Richardson and Fuller men.

Mr. Campbell contended that his resolution could do no harm.

Mr. Jones (Pa.) informed Mr. Colfax that the Democratic party do not intend departing from their candidate and platform.

Mr. Humphrey Marshall denied that there had been billing and cooing by the American party, which had made no proposition to alter the present course of things.

Mr. Jone's (Tenn.) moved that the House take a recess until to-morrow 11 o'clock 59 minutes A. M.

Several members said this, in effect, was an evasion of the resolution adopted to remain in session till the election of a Speaker.

Mr. Jones motion was negatived.

Notwithstanding apprehensions of a continuous sessions, the House, at half past 4 P. M., pending the resolution inviting Mr. Orr to preside, took a recess till to-morrow at 10 A. M., which occasioned much laughter and confusion.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20, 1855.

The report that the original copy of the Declaration of Independence has been stolen from the Patent Office, and a counterfeit one substituted is untrue. The original has been there for fourteen years, undisturbed.

Judge Douglass has written to his friends that, although suffering severely from an inflamed throat, he expects to be in Washington early in January.

The debate in the House to-day attracted a dense auditory. The discussions serve but to render more apparent the difficulties in the way of an organization.

The Celebration of the Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers.

PLYMOUTH, Dec. 21, 1855.

Our resident population, with several hundred persons from abroad, have to-day celebrated the aniversary of the Landing of the Pilgrims. The exercises took place in the Unitarian church, and consisted of prayer, singing an original ode, and an oration by the Hon. Wm. H. Seward, of New York. The orator occupied about one hour and a half, and was listened to with marked attention. A public dinner followed after the exercises in the church, at which speeches were made and sentiments given. The celebration closed with a ball this evening.

Murder Trial at Albany.

ALBANY, Dec. 22, 1855.

The jury in the case of Wm. McCrossen, charged with the murder of Michael Brennan, at the Second Ward polls in this city, on the last election day, have returned a verdict of not guilty.

Marine Disaster.

BOSTON, Dec. 22, 1855.

THE bark John Curtis, Williams, master, arrived here from Newport, reports on the 5th inst., in lat. 37 52, lon. 68, fell in with the brig Frederick W. Horn, from Georgetown, S. C., for Kennebunk, in distress, having been dismasted fifteen days previously and become water-logged. The John Curtis took off the captain and crew and brought them here. They each subsisted on a quarter of a pound of raw pork each per day.

Burning of the Steamer Seminole.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23, 1855.

THE steamer Seminole, running between Savannah and Jacksonville, was burned to the water's edge at Jacksonville on Thursday night. About 200 bales of cotton were also consumed.

Horrible Murder at New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 24, 1855.

The body of Justus Matthews, a workman, was found dead this morning in the suburbs of this city. His throat was cut and his wrists were tied. He was in the house of Rhoda Wakeman and had been connected with a band of Millerites, Spiritualists, or something of the kind. Seven of his brethren have been arrested, on a suspicion of having a hand in the murder, and are now in prison.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26, 1855.

To-morrow a movement will be made to rescind Mr. Stephens' resolution providing for a continuous session of the House until a Speaker is elected, and in the event of its success, it is probable that Mr. Campbell will withdraw his resolution inviting Mr. Orr to take the Chair temporarily, till a Speaker is chosen, the latter's proposition being based on the former's

The Free-Soilers are alarmed for fear if Mr. Orr gets into the Chair the American party will go over to him, thus diverting the Democrats in a combination on Mr. Orr from their caucus candidate.

The movements to-day are regarded as indicative of a determination to elect a speaker before the close of the week.

Commodore McKeever, of the Norfolk Navy Yard, has informed the Secretary of the Navy that the war steamer Roanoke, recently launched there, was not seriously injured. It is stated that the leakage was caused by the oakum becoming detached from the seams of the vessel.

The Indian War in Oregon.

THE following extract is from the letter of an army officer, published in the Buffalo Commercial:

"The Indian war has at length broken out in Oregon which has been kept smothered for several years. The long series of wrongs they have incurred from our emigrants and traders has, at length, brought about a combination to revenge their common injuries. Many of the warriors are well armed with the Hudson Bay small bore rifle, and they are excellent marksmen. The Indians in Southern California tried the same game in 1850, but we were too quick for them, and the tribes not committed held back, as well as the Californians, who undoubtedly gave them encouragement; but when they saw there would be a failure, denied all knowledge of their intentions.

"These struggles will only hasten the extermination of the Indians. The government has more disposable troops than heretofore, and the miners and emigrant population are well armed, and accustomed to privation and hardships, and are actuated by an undying hatred against the Indians."

Letter from a Kentucky Democrat.

KENTUCKY, Saturday Dec. 8, 1855.

To the Editor of the New York Daily Times:

TRULY our lots have been cast in exciting times. Northern—i. e. abolition—aggression is firing the South with the most revolutionary feelings; faction is rapidly gaining the ascendant, and fast driving us to the verge of that Tarpeian rock, down which have been plunged the mightiest Republics of the past.

The recent doings in Kansas, let them proceed from whatsoever cause they may immediately, are the ultimate consequences of the doings of emigrant Free Soil societies, and are but the ushering in of the days which will bring to Southern men the realization of the sober, solemn truth, that the time for submission has passed: and that the "lex talionis" must become the rule of action. Let us suppose a real appeal to arms in Kansas. Where then will be the Union—that mere creature of contending States—which now has but a nominal existence—that mere tie whose bands are but ropes of sand, ready to sunder with every interest that can engage sectional attention? Between the sections there is a growing and jealous distrust. Let a proposition for an appropriation be but introduced into Congress, and see how quickly the members will agitate the advantages which it may confer upon the section—North and South, and how quickly it is mated with a bill which may serve as an offset. Even in these things do sectional prejudices and feelings betray themselves. Yet stronger evidences of sectional animosity are to be found in the action of the Legislatures of Southern States. Georgia has already under consideration a retaliatory bill to the effect that, if a slave escapes, for instance, into Pennsylvania, and the State authorities refuse to deliver him, then the owner has but to return to his own State and garnishee any creditor he can find of a citizen of Pennsylvania, prove the fact of the escape of the negro, and collect the money. This movement will be followed up, certainly, in Kentucky and Virginia, and in time will be the fiat of every Southern Legislature. Such is our Federal Union—a myth—a shadow!

LARGE CARGO.—The clipper ship Dreadnought, Captain Samuels, arrived at New York recently, bringing one thousand tons of fine-dry goods and seven hundred tons of steel, tin plates and cutlery, being the largest cargo of fine goods ever shipped to New York from Liverpool.

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the trangression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The fourth is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the 'laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Bien-aimés frères, je désire, en commencant cette publication, vous adresser quelques paroles. Le Seigneur, dans sa bonté et sa miséricorde, a jugé convenable de restaurer au monde l'Evangile primitif, dans toute la simplicité, la beauté et la pureté qu'il avait autrefois, parmi les chrétiens des premiers temps, aux jours de Jésus et de ses Apôtres.

La lumière de la vérité a éclaté au milieu des ténèbres et de la corruption des hommes, en ce temps où le monde est déchiré par mille opinions contradictoires.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Si nous suivons attentivement l'action de Dieu sur le genre humain, nous trouverons que tous ces maux proviennent de ce que les nations et les peuples se sont éloignés de Dieu; et rien moins qu'un retour à lui ne peut arrêter la terrible tempête, calmer la mer furieuse, tranquilliser les passions capricieuses des hommes, et rendre au monde moral, religieux et politique, cet ordre qui règne dans la création physique de Dieu.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui règle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

C'est la religion que vous croyez et que vous enseignez, qui est destinée à restaurer l'homme et la terre; c'est elle qui ramènera les peuples à Dieu, qui les retirera du chaos moral, religieux et politique du monde, et les rassemblera en un peuple qui sera conduit et reconnu de Dieu; qui sera honoré devant les hommes et les nations; et qui aidera à établir et à développer le royaume de Dieu dans ces derniers jours.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaîtraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? Ou devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours?

Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconque demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Evangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés?" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit?" Nous le faisons aussi. Crurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains par la foi en Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent, ils "l'espoir en la résurrection?" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.?" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.?" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions à son Eglise actuelle.

Nous demanderons ce qu'il y a d'inconséquent en tout cela? Lequel est le plus inconséquent, de croire et de pratiquer les Ecritures, ou de dire, nous les croyons et puis de les nier à notre organisation, à nos doctrines, à nos œuvres.

Mais des visions, des prophéties, des révélations n'ont-elles pas une tendance à conduire à l'enthousiasme et au fanatisme? Oui, les visions humaines et les délusions de Satan l'ont. Mais si le Seigneur eût pensé que ses visions et ses révélations fussent préjudiciables aux hommes, pourquoi les aurait-il données dans les anciens temps? Si elles doivent être préjudiciables de nos jours, certainement elles l'eussent été autrefois. L'enthousiasme, la folie et le fanatisme des hommes est une chose; autre chose est Dieu révélant sa volonté aux peuples pour leur organisation, leur stabilité, leur consolation, leur union, leur savoir, leur édification, et pour l'établissement de son royaume.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaître Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Les philosophes ont scruté l'homme, la terre, les œuvres de la création pour trouver un vrai système. Ils ont tous eu leur jour. Ils ont introduit beaucoup de bons principes, mais quant à l'amélioration du monde, là, ils ont fait défaut. Leurs systémes, quelque bons que soient plusieurs d'entre eux, sont bien loin d'embrasser l'objet désiré: "Ils ont été pesés dans la balance, et trouvés trop légers."

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaître que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence. ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les cxès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lasciveté, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votre lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

JOHN TAYLOR.

A Card to the Saints.

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "THE MORMON." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish, you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
The Greatest Blessing of the Age for the Cure of Diseases of Man or Beast requiring External Application.
"BRING hither the poor, the halt, the lame and the blind," if you would have them healed of their many infirmities. We boldly and fearlessly assert that the Mustang Liniment will positively cure Rheumatism. Let any who are afflicted with that most painful complaint try it thoroughly according to directions, and if they are not cured we will give them their money back. What more can we say? It will also cure the Piles. Thousands have tried it—and all were cured. Bruises, Sprains, Sores or Eruptions fade away as if touched by the magician's wand. Its application to burn or scald acts like "oil upon the troubled waters." The tempest of pain and agony is soon stifled, and the patient is hushed to quiet and peaceful slumbers. "There is balm for every wound," and that balm is the Mustang Liniment. Everybody that sells medicine keeps it for sale. "Hold your horses," and if they are crippled, galled or sprained, use the Mustang Liniment.
READ THE FOLLOWING CERTIFICATES.
THROUGH BY EXPRESS!!!
This is to certify that the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT has been used quite extensively in the stables of Adams & Co.'s Great Southern, Eastern and Western Expresses, for curing galls, chafes, scrofulas, sprains and bruises, and it has proved very effectual. Many of their men have also used it on themselves and their families, and they all speak of its healing and remedial qualities in the highest terms. One of our ostlers got kicked and badly cut and bruised on his knee; as usual, the Liniment was resorted to, and the soreness and lameness was soon removed, and it was perfectly well in three or four days. We have no hesitation in recommending it as a valuable preparation to be used externally on man or beast.
J. DUNNING,
Foreman of Adams & Co.'s Express Stable, N. Y.
We take pleasure in recommending the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT to all our friends and customers as the best article we have ever used for sores, sprains or galls in horses. We have used it extensively and always effectually. Some of our men have also used it for severe bruises and sores, as well as rheumatic pains, and they all say it acts like magic—we can only say that we have entirely abandoned the use of any other Liniment.

MR. WILLIAM JOHNSON, for the last five years a citizen of Augusta, and now the proprietor of the fine hotel in Savannah, called the Marshall House, has favored us with the following certificate:
The MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT has been used in my family, and on my farm, for a great variety of diseases requiring an external application, and has never failed to give immediate relief and effect a permanent cure. I have cured several cases of rheumatism that had resisted the skill of our best physicians. It has cured ringworms by a single application, chilblains in a few days, toothache, frost bites, cuts, sores and corns by a few applications; nervous headache cured entirely. In fact, I have used it for almost everything, and it has always cured. I consider it the best medicine I have ever used. WILLIAM JOHNSON.
Savannah, June 24th, 1852.
June, 25th, 1852.
I have used the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT in my stables upon my horses in cases of sprains, bruises, galls and sores of different kinds, incident to a large number of horses. I used it upon a horse that had been saddle galled for nearly a year. I had tried many remedies, and one in particular, that I had been in the habit of using for years, and had generally proved successful. Nothing appeared to give it any relief until I tried the Mustang Liniment, which cured it in a very short time. I consider it an invaluable remedy, and would not be without it. WM. H. HOLMES.
SAVANNAH, Geo., June 25, 1852.
We have also used the MUSTANG LINIMENT extensively in our stable, and we find it to be the best remedy we have ever used for sores or lameness of any kind.
SAWYER, HOLLISTER & CO.
The above are from two of the largest livery stables in the State of Georgia.
B. H. MEEKINS, 189 Walnut street, Cincinnati, was confined to his bed under the treatment of a physician some six weeks, with Neuralgia, of the whole of his right side, leg, arm and face; his sufferings were indescribable, and the only cessation from the most agonizing pain, was while under the influence of opium or morphine. His doctor finally advised him to try the MUSTANG LINIMENT; he did so, and in two days was able to go about his business perfectly cured.
This is to certify that I have used the MUSTANG LINIMENT recently in a very severe case of sprain. The right hip was so badly sprained and bruised that fears were entertained that it was out of joint. I obtained a bottle of Mustang Liniment and used it freely for four days, when the soreness and pain were all gone and the hip joint was well.
I have also used the Liniment for the Piles, with which I have been afflicted for many years. Its effects were wonderful. Free applications night and morning for a week have perfectly cured me. Thousands of persons are suffering with this painful disease, and you are at liberty to make this statement public, that all may learn what will cure them.
My brother also states that he has used the Mustang Liniment with the most perfect success in two cases of severe bruises, at our factory in Williamsburgh, and says he considers it invaluable about an establishment where a large number of men and horses are at work, and constantly liable to serious accidents. EDWIN R. BARRON.
64 Duane st., New York, June 25, 1852.
☞ While hundreds are rejoicing in the happy escape from smarting pains, occasioned by Burns, Bruises and Sprains, thousands of others will buy the Mustang Liniment and experience the same happy results.
☞ The popularity of the Mustang Liniment is a "fixed fact," therefore those suffering with Ulcers, Old Sores, Eruptions, and like complaints, need not be reminded of its superiority to give it a trial.
☞ The Ladies will always rejoice at the happy experience of curing eruptions, sore nipples, broken or caked breasts, piles and corns, after a thorough trial of the Mexican Mustang Liniment.
☞ The Mustang Liniment will give the most undoubted satisfaction to any one giving it a trial for stiff joints, stiff neck, or sore throat; it has proved itself efficacious in these complaints in many very stubborn cases.
☞ If you have any ugly, painful corns upon your feet, get a bottle of Mustang Liniment and apply it twice a day for eleven days, and the trouble will be gone.

Poetry.

Never!

BY G. W. CUTTER.

I may be asked, as I have been asked, when I am for the dissolution of the Union! I answer, never, never, never!
HENRY CLAY.

You asked me when I'd rend the scroll
Our fathers' names are written o'er,
When I would see our flag unroll
Its mingled stars and stripes no more;
When with a worse than felon hand
Or felon counsels, I would sever
The Union of this glorious land—
I answer—never, never, never!

Think ye that I could brook to see
The banner I have loved so long,
Borne piece-meal o'er the distant sea,
Torn, trampled by a frenzied throng,
Divided, measured, parcelled out,
Tamely surrendered up forever,
To gratify a soulless rout
Of traitors?—never, never, never!

Give up this land to lawless might,
To selfish fraud and villain sway;
Obscure those hopes with endless night
That now are raising like the day;
Write one more page of burning shame,
To prove the useless, vain endeavor
Our race from ruin to reclaim,
And close the volume?—never, never!

The sculptor's art, the builder's power,
On yonder high and lovely steep,
Have reared a lofty funeral tower,
A landmark o'er the soldier's sleep.
There it will stand until the river
That flows beneath shall cease to flow;
Aye, till that hill itself shall quiver
With Nature's last convulsive throe.

Upon that column's marble base,
That shaft that soars into the sky,
There still is room enough to trace
The countless millions yet to die.
And I would cover all its height
And breadth, before that hour of shame,
Till space should fail whereon to write
Even the initials of a name.

Dissolve the Union! mar, remove
The last asylum that is known,
Where patriot's find a brother's love,
And truth may shelter from a throne;
Give up the hopes of high renown,
The legacy our fathers willed,
Tear our victorious eagles down,
Before their mission is fulfilled?

Dissolve the Union! while on earth
Yet lives a tyrant to be slain;
Destroy our freedom in its birth,
And give the world to bonds again?
Dissolve the Union! God of Heaven,
We know too well how much it cost;
Nay, spread aloft our banner folds,
High as the heavens they resemble,
That every race this planet holds,
Beneath their shadow may assemble;
And with the rainbow's dazzling pride,
Or clouds that burn along the skies,
Inscribe upon its margin wide,
HOPE, FREEDOM, UNION, COMPROMISE.

Minutes of the General Conference

Of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints,

Convened in the Bowery, adjoining the north end of the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, Commencing Saturday, Oct. 6, 1855, at 10 o'clock, A. M.

PRES. B. YOUNG presiding.

On the stand, Presidents B. Young, H. C. Kimball, and J. M. Grant.

Of the Twelve Apostles: P. P. Pratt, W. Woodruff, G. A. Smith, E. T. Benson, L. Snow, and E. Snow.

Seventies: Joseph Young, H. Herriman, Z. Pulsipher, and A. P. Rockwood.

High Priests' Quorum: David Pettegrew.

Presiding Bishop: Edward Hunter.

Presidency of the Stake: David Fullmer, T. Rhoads, and P. H. Young.

Clerk of Conference: Thomas Bullock.

Reporter: G. D. Watt.

Conference called, to order by Pres. B. Young.

Choir sung, "The morning breaks, the shadows flee."

Prayer by Pres. B. Young, as follows:

Thou God who dwells in eternity, even our God, the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the Father of our spirits, it is Thee whom we desire to worship and to whom we look; for we feel ourselves under obligations to Thee and owe to Thee our being upon this thine earth.

We look to Thee this morning in the name of thy Son Jesus Christ, whom thou hast given to be a ransom for our sins and for the sin of the whole world, and through whose name and atonement we expect life everlasting.

As Thou hast redeemed the earth and all things thereupon, we, thy creatures, who are endowed with intelligence, desire to worship Thee in spirit and in truth, praying Thee our Father, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the light of thy spirit to know how to worship Thee, to know how to build up thy kingdom, to know how to approach Thee acceptably and in a manner that shall be acceptable to all holy beings. It is our God whom we worship, and we are assembled this morning in thy name to transact business pertaining to the building up of thy kingdom on the earth.

We feel thankful unto Thee, our Father, that thou hast revealed thy will in this our day, that thou hast spoken from the heavens and bestowed the holy priesthood upon men, and again opened up the way of life and salvation, and that we are the happy partakers thereof.

Help us to appreciate the blessings that we enjoy. We have the privilege of assembling here to worship Thee, with none to molest or make us afraid; thou hast removed us far from our pursuers, from those that have sought to oppress us, and from those who have killed our prophet and destroyed many of thy Saints. We thank Thee that thou hast removed us to these mountains. Help us to realize that our blessings are far above those of many of our fellows; while millions are sitting in darkness, in the regions and shadow of death, suffering for food, suffering through the oppression of kings and rulers, bowed down in their iron fetters, having not the liberty of speaking or acting, or scarcely of thinking, for themselves; help us to realize the blessing of having our birth and education in more genial climes and among more hospitable people, where the laws and government under which we were born have tolerated us in freedom of thought and speech; and on this happy soil, even America, where thou hast brought forth the fullness of the gospel and the eternal priesthood of thy Son, where thou hast guaranteed to all the right to worship Thee according to the dictates of their consciences.

We thank Thee that we now enjoy that privilege. Help us to realize and appreciate these things.

While we look unto Thee, our Father, and contemplate our circumstances, and contrast them with the circumstances of the inhabitants of other climes, we can say that we approach Thee with shame-facedness when we look at thy Saints and those who profess to know Thee and at the same time behold that the little, frivolous, trifling affairs pertaining to this probation cause thy people to sin.

O Lord, we feel to beg and plead with Thee to have mercy upon our weaknesses—be compassionate unto us.

And as we have assembled this morning for the purpose of transacting business in the capacity of a general conference, we do pray Thee in the name of the Lord Jesus that thy spirit may influence each heart, that we may be enabled to worship Thee in spirit and in truth, to forsake all our sins and vanities, and to leave off those things that mar our peace and grieve the holy spirit of the Lord Jesus, for we desire to be thy faithful children.

We pray Thee that each heart may be suitably affected by the light of eternal truth, that we may understand thy will concerning us, that we may have a disposition to do thy will, to love the Lord our God with all our hearts, to love our neighbors, especially thy Saints, as ourselves, to cleave unto righteousness and to hate iniquity, and to do good even to our enemies. We pray that the influence of thy spirit may attend us through our conference, that the heavens may be propitious over our heads, and that the veil of darkness, even thick darkness, that covers the nations of the earth, may be taken from us, that we may see and know things as they are, and understand the mind and will of the Lord concerning us, that we may understand thy ways and thy goings forth among the inhabitants of the earth, that we may read the destiny of man, and the future destiny pertaining to us thy people, and to thy kingdom, and know and understand things past, present, and to come.

O Lord, we ask Thee to let thy spirit so rest upon us, that each one who has assembled here to worship Thee, may have their spiritual strength renewed, that each one who shall speak before this people may be filled with the power of God, that the Holy Ghost may inspire each heart to speak, to hear, to sing, to pray, to write, and to do those things pertaining to the business transactions of thy kingdom acceptably unto Thee, that thy kingdom may advance upon the earth, Zion be redeemed, and thine Israel be gathered, that we may be prepared for the coming of the Son of Man, be the happy partakers of thy grace from day to day, and be counted worthy to be numbered with the sanctified, who shall enjoy the presence of the Lord Jesus with delight and be caught up to meet him in the air.

Father in heaven, we ask for thy blessings upon those of thy Saints, not now assembled here, who inhabit these mountains. Wilt thou comfort their hearts, inspire them, encircle them in the arms of thy love and mercy, and hedge them about by thy power; and be thou a munition of rocks round about us, towering between us and our enemies, that they may have no power over us.

Inasmuch as the wicked mingle with thy people here, we pray that thy spirit may reach them the right way and convince them of the truth of the everlasting gospel, though it is despised by men in high places and set at naught by the nations; and though thy people and thy doctrine are held in derision, let those who are honest in heart have the light of thy spirit, that they may be influenced to acknowledge that thou art God, and be inclined to seek after thy righteousness, that they may know and understand for themselves the influences that are of God and the influences not of God.

We pray Thee our Father in heaven, to bless all thy missionaries in the midst of these mountains, on this continent, on the islands of the sea, and upon other continents. May thy angels be with them, may they go before them and be around about them, that they may be preserved from the power of the enemy and be inspired from on high by the power of the Holy Ghost, that they may have power to do good and bring souls to the knowledge of the truth, and build up thy kingdom and aid in preparing the way for the coming of the Son of Man. We ask for thy blessing upon all those who believe in their testimony.

We realize, our Father, that the earth is thine and the fulness thereof, that the gold and the silver are thine, that the wheat and the fine flour are thine, that the cattle upon a thousand hills are thine, and that it is for Thee to give and for thy people to receive. We ask Thee that thou wouldst so give that thy people may be gathered together from the islands of the sea and from distant lands.

Let thy spirit rest upon thy Saints, that the rich may feel that liberality and that charity towards the poor which they should, and that the poor may feel a heartfelt gratitude to the rich who bestow means upon them, insomuch that they will render to each and every man that which is his due, and not be covetous, neither be filled with idolatry; and may both poor and rich concentrate their efforts and means to the building up of Thy kingdom to the gathering of Thine Israel in the latter days, to the redemption of Zion, the re-establishment of Jerusalem, and the bringing forth of salvation to the inhabitants of the whole earth.

We ask Thee, our Father, to inspire us all to be of one heart and one mind, that our affections, faith and efforts may all be united and engaged in building up thy kingdom, and in the establishment thereof on the face of the earth. Wilt thou bless and heal up the sick among thy people, and comfort their hearts. We would remember before Thee those who are now upon the plains journeying to this place, and ask Thee to bring them safely to us: may the elements be favorable and propitious to them, and permit them to come to us without suffering, and let their hearts be inspired. Inasmuch as they suffer, toil and labor, to assemble with thy Saints, may they have thy holy spirit with them, and may Thine angels be round about them. Bless and preserve their teams and all they have with them.

We pray Thee, O Lord, to regard the interests of Thy kingdom among the nations of the earth; hasten the gathering of Israel and the redemption of Zion; and may the remnants of the Lamanites feel the power of thy spirit, that they may cease their wickedness and be divested of their blood-thirsty disposition, and receive hearts of flesh that they may see and understand the ways of the Lord. We dedicate ourselves unto Thee, our wives and our children, our home and our lands, our flocks, and our herds, with all that thou hast committed to our charge. We dedicate this conference to Thee, and pray for wisdom to transact the business that should be done, and that all things that are not right, and that are contrary to thy counsel and will may be taken from our minds. May all hearts be concentrated in that which will please Thee and advance thy kingdom, and cause and make the hearts of thy Saints to rejoice exceedingly that they live to be Saints in the latter-days.

Hear us, O Lord, and answer these our supplications. Be with us through our meeting, and through our future life, guide us to Thy praise, and prepare us for Thy kingdom and glory, and with the sanctified, bring us to thyself in Thy kingdom. These, with all needful favors and blessings, we ask in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

[REPORTED BY G. D. WATT.]

The Choir sung a hymn.

Pres. B. Young addressed the congregation on the subject of Faith, the Holy Spirit, the dealings of the Lord with this people, &c., and was followed by Pres. Kimball, who spoke upon the necessity of the Saints living their religion, or the ordinances would be of no benefit to them.

The choir chanted, "Behold a king shall reign in righteousness."—Isaiah.

Benediction by Pres. Joseph Young.

Adjourned to 2 o'clock, P. M.

Conference called to order by Pres. Kimball.

Singing by the Choir. Prayer by Pres. Grant. Singing.

Elder Nathaniel V. Jones, returned missionary, late from the Presidency of the Hindostan and Burman Empire mission, related his travels in those lands, and stated that the Elders of the Church of Jesus Christ had travelled from the Himalaya mountains to near the southern limits of the Peninsula, and said that a Mr. Wilson, Episcopalian Bishop of Calcutta, wrote to the clergy in all the military cantonments, to forbid the "Mormon" Elders preaching there, and the clergy faithfully obeyed the bishop.

Elder John Young bore testimony to the truth of the Gospel, and spoke upon good works, agency and revelation.

Pres. J. M. Grant briefly discussed the text: "Every man shall be rewarded according to his works."

Choir sung the anthem, "Hosannah in the highest."

Benediction by Elder E. T. Benson.

Adjourned.

In the evening the Seventies met in their Council Hall and the high Priests in the Social Hall.

Sunday, Oct. 7, 1855, 10 A. M.

Conference called to order by Pres. B. Young.

Singing by the Choir. Prayer by Pres. Kimball.

Choir sung, "O my Father, thou that dwellest."

Elder Parley P. Pratt addressed the assembly on a part of the 21st chapter of Luke, and stated that what prophecies had been fulfilled were literally fulfilled, and the remaining predictions will be in like manner fulfilled.

Choir sung, "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain."

Benediction by Elder Geo. A. Smith.

Adjourned to 2 P. M.

Called to order by Pres. Kimball.

Choir sung, "Come, come ye Saints, no toil or labor fear."

Prayer by Elder Lorenzo Snow. Singing.

Elder Orson Pratt addressed the immense congregation on the divine authenticity of this latter-day work, the inspiration of Joseph Smith, and the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon. During Elder Pratt's discourse, a blessing was asked on the bread by Bishop Edward Hunter, and on the water by Bishop L. D. Young.

Choir sung, "Judge me O Lord."

Benediction by Pres. Grant.

Monday, Oct. 8, 1855, 9 A. M.

Conference called to order by Pres. B. Young.

Choir sung a hymn. Prayer by Elder Woodruff.

Choir chanted a psalm.

Elder Ezra Luddington, late from the Siamese mission, narrated the prominent incidents in his journeyings.

Pres. B. Young remarked that he had been highly pleased with Bro. Luddington's narration, and that all the brethren who have returned have manifested the spirit of the gospel, a fact comforting to the Saints, and more joyful, to them than all the gold of India. He then took up the business of the Conference, when the authorities were severally called and unanimously sustained as follows:

Brigham Young, President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Prophet, Seer, and Revelator; Heber C. Kimball, First Counsellor, Prophet, Seer, and Revelator; Jedediah M. Grant, Second Counselor.

Orson Hyde, President of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, and Parley P. Pratt, Orson Pratt, Wilford Woodruff, John Taylor, George A. Smith, Amasa Lyman, Ezra T. Benson, Charles C. Rich, Lorenzo Snow, Erastus Snow, and Franklin D. Richards, members of said Quorum.

John Smith (eldest son of Hyrum), Presiding Patriarch.

David Pettegrew, President of the High Priests' Quorum, Reynolds Cahoon and George B. Wallace, his counsellors.

Joseph Young, Levi W. Hancock, Henry Herriman, Zera Pulsipher, Albert P. Rockwood, Benjamin L. Clapp, and H. S. Eldredge, Presiding Presidents over all the Seventies.

John Nebeker, President of the Elders' Quorum, James H. Smith and Aaron Sceva, his counsellors.

Edward Hunter, Presiding Bishop of the whole Church.

Lewis Wight, President of the Priests' Quorum, Geo. Dockstader and William Whiting, his counsellors.

McGee Harris, President of the Teachers' Quorum, Adam Spiers and David Bowman, his counsellors.

Alexander Herron, President of the Deacon's Quorum. John S. Carpenter and Fred. A. Mitchell, his counsellors.

Brigham Young, Trustee in Trust for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Daniel H. Wells, Superintendent of Public Works.

Truman O. Angel, Architect for the Church.

Brigham Young, President of the Perpetual Emigrating Fund to gather the poor: H. C. Kimball, W. Woodruff, O. Hyde, G. A. Smith, E. T. Benson, J. M. Grant, D. H. Wells, Edw. Hunter, Daniel Spencer, Thomas Bullock, John Brown, William Crosby, A. Lyman, C. C Rich, Lorenzo D. Young, P. P. Pratt, O. Pratt, F. D. Richards, and Daniel McIntosh, his assistants, and agents for said Fund.

David Fullmer, President of this Stake of Zion, Thomas Rhoads and P. H. Young, his counsellors.

Heman Hyde, Eleazer Miller, Phinehas Richards, Levi Jackman, Ira Eldredge, John Vance, Edwin D. Woolley, John Parry, Winslow Farr, William Snow, Daniel Carn, and Ira Ames, members of the High Council.

George A. Smith, the Historian and General Church Recorder.

Not one negative vote was given.

The President then spoke at some length upon the chastenings of the Lord, the principles that should govern those who have grain to sell, &c., and said, as we have now been together 3 1-2 hours, we will adjourn for one hour.

Choir sung the anthem, "Saints and Angels."

Benediction by Pres. B. Young.

Adjourned to 2 P. M.

Called to order by Elder E. Snow.

Singing by the Choir.

Prayer by Elder Erastus Snow. Singing

Pres. Grant, spoke a short time on the practical duties of Bishops and Teachers, the Big Cottonwood Canal, and expressed an anxiety for the time to arrive when he could preach the funeral sermon of all the drones.

Parley P. Pratt, Orson Pratt, Wilford Woodruff, Erastus Snow, Joseph Young, Zera Pulsipher, Henry Herriman, Joseph Hovey, Joseph L. Heywood, Jacob F. Hutchinson, Horace S. Eldredge, George B. Wallace, Joseph W. Johnson, Thomas D. Brown, John Lyon, Jacob Gates, and William Snow (who answere to their names), and Richard Cook, Gilbert Clements, Levi Richards, Aaron F. Farr, Wiliam Gibson, Thomas Grover, Joseph Bates Noble, George Woodward, Dominicus Carter and Daniel D. Hunt, were unitedly and unanimously voted to go on missions to the saints in Utah Territory.

Lorenzo Snow, Ezra T. Benson, and Pineas H. Young, were unanimously voted to go on a mission to Europe next spring.

James Townsend was unanimously voted to go on a mission to Carson Valley.

Pres. Kimball made a few remarks on the subject of the canal, marriage, &c.

Pres. B. Young followed, on the same subjects, and then called a vote of all who were in favor of completing the Big Cottonwood Canal, ready for the boats, between the first of May, and by the number of uplifted hands, all seemed willing to prosecute that work vigorously.

The President then continued on the subject of the P. E. Fund business, home trade, &c., and said, we will now adjourn this conference to the 6th day of April next at 10 A. M., at this place.

Pres. Kimball gave notice that in the morning he would commence giving endowments to persons from Iron, Fillmore, San Pete, and Weber counties.

Benediction by Pres. B. Young.

In the evening the Bishops, Priests, Teachers, Deacons, and their counsellors met in the Tabernacle, and were instructed in matters pertaining to their duties by Presidents Young and Grant, and by Bishop Edw. Hunter.

THOMAS BULLOCK,
Clerk of Conference.

CARSON VALLEY, Sept. 9th,
2 o'clock A. M., 1855.

Carson Valley—Western Boundary—Judge Stiles—Marshal Heywood, &c.

FRIEND CARRINGTON—Dear Sir: As you and your readers are ever anxious to know the state of affairs in all parts of the Territory, I cheerfully contribute what little I may have, to gratify your mutual desires.

We all arrived safely in this valley on the 17th and 18th of June last. Found a beautiful valley to look upon, at the eastern base of the Sierra Nevada mountains, called Carson valley. The best portions of it are all taken up by claimants whose modest inclinations towards the public domain have led them to grasp nearly all the land that joins them. This may all be right, yet it will preclude the possibility of a dense population, such as the valley is capable of sustaining, and which is so necessary for schools, meetings and mutual defence against the Warshaw and Pyute Indians, who are very numerous in this region, and may become troublesome.

This valley cannot compare with Salt Lake for wheat, corn, oats, or barley, neither for vegetables of any kind; but in the richness and luxuriance of its grapes it far surpasses Salt Lake and Utah valleys. There is now supposed to be about four hundred inhabitants, scattered along the river from 80 to 100 miles, and sparsely through some neighboring vallies. When the rain sets in, there will be many more people in this country, as the mines in gold kanyon can then be worked to advantage, having a sufficiency of water.

When we came here first, the people were much opposed to organization, the majority choosing to be a law unto themselves in preference to coming under "Mormon law." The doubtful location of the boundary line between Utah and California was a bar also to the co-operation of many. However the people soon became satisfied that it was not the laws of the Mormon Church, or ecclesiastical laws, under which they were to organize, but under the civil and constitutional laws of the land, and being a commissioner on the part of Utah, appointed by the Governor to procure the permanent establishment of the line, measures were adopted by a joint agency from California and Utah to establish the boundary between the golden lands of that noted and remarkable State, and the waste and howling deserts of this extensive basin Territory. The green and fertile spots, that adorn the margin of the streams, "are few and far between." But if we had no deserts or barren places, neither such as are solitary, "the wilderness and solitary places could not be glad for us; neither the desert rejoice and blossom as the rose." By the hand of persevering industry, the rivers and mountains are diverted from their wonted courses, awakening vegetation and spreading fertility over tens of thousands of acres, otherwise barren and parching plains.

The survey is nearly completed, and the people are mostly satisfied that the entire valley of Carson is in Utah Territory. Our special election is set for Thursday, the 20th inst. Whiggery, Democracy, Know-Nothingism, Mormonism, nor anti-Mormonism are hardly named. The people will join in and elect just such men as they want to fill the offices created for their protection and safety.

The District Court was held here on the first Monday in this month, in accordance with an act of the Legislature. There was not much business done at this term, yet enough to convince the people that his honor, Judge Stiles, is an able and efficient judicial officer. The ease and dignity with which he presided, the lucid manner in which he explained every doubtful and contested point, caused all prejudice to yield and melt away into the most profound respect and anxious desire on the part of the people for the county organization to be gone into at once.

Marshal Heywood has visited California with myself and Judge Stiles. He has been around among us all, and has served for acid, soda, and syrup. Though feeble himself, he has kept our spirits buoyant and sparkling with the mild and gentle hope that western Utah would hail with joy and gladness the agents of civil and constitutional law. This hope has proven not a vain one. The Marshal is truly a son of consolation, and moves with a dignity, liberality and highmindedness worthy of his elevated and responsible station.

For the last two and a half months, I have been climbing and scrambling about in the Sierra Nevada mountains, more or less, to find the line between the two countries. I look about as much like a grizzly as like a white man—fat, ragged and saucy. We have called sun, moon, and stars to our aid, and invited them to throw a friendly ray upon the angle, base and summit of our operations. But owing to the extreme height and ruggedness of the mountains, I think we have to run it down, tree it or hole it, before we can really lay our hands upon the immaginary thing.

Why could not Congress have acknowledged the natural boundary which nature's God has ordained and thrown up to meet the gaze of every eye, scientific or not? I mean the principal range of the Sierra Nevada mountains, instead of the 120th degree of west longtiude, where the 39th parallel of north latitude intersets it. Mercy! this angle drops right into Bigler lake, and a salmon might swallow it, or might not. From this angle the line shoots off in a tangent to the southeast, just as some pious folks do when we tell them that Abraham, David, and Solomon had more than one wife; and that polygamy is just as scriptural now as it was then. Why, if we find this line, we cannot see it. Hunting after a solemn nothing. It is like the idol god, "neither body, parts or passions."

California should never wish to extend her jurisdiction on this side of the mountains, where the snows of winter block the passes nearly six months in the year. Utah has made this section not only a county, but a judicial district, where they can do all their business at home, without crossing the mighty ranges of mountains, nor even the plains to Fillmore or Salt Lake city.

California is already too large for a prosperous state, and has too many conflicting interests. If she attempt to enlarge, the south end will drop off; and even if she do not enlarge the south half will be apt to split off, unless they handle her very carefully.

Friend Carrington, who is to pay me and my friends from Utah, for running up and down these mountains after this line? The Legislature has made me probate judge in this county, and as I am within the limits of my jurisdiction, none can object to the rulling of the court touching a matter of right and equity.

If Congress had made the Sierra Nevada mountains the line between Utah and California, every eye could have seen it, and nature's God would have been honored, and no need of any search; for they are the most conspicuous things in all this country. But as they have failed to make these the line, a search, not unlike that for a needle in a hay stack, has became necessary; and therefore my judgment is that Congress actually pay for all this time and labor; for we have worn out too many unmentionables "to lose the bill." Then they should make the main back bone of the mountains the line between the state and Territory; that would end every dispute, silence every cavil, and let the mountains be the witness between Utah and California. If I were in Congress, I would tell them so, and so should you, honorable Mr. Delegate from Utah. Truly Yours,

ORSON HYDE.

Is Mormonism a Religious Paradox?

ARTICLE II.

CONTINUED.

HAVING authority to administer in the ordinances of the gospel, power to bind on earth and in heaven, and having been taught by Jesus how to save men, he (Peter) told them to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus for the remission of sins; and when they believed and repented, he baptized them. Here, then, is the simple manner that the apostles adopted to introduce the gospel; there was no quibbling about doctrine, no uncertainty on the part of the apostles, nor yet of the people; the method was plain and simple—there was no telling them to believe in Jesus, when they already were believers; no ingenious methods introduced, to make them believe they were converted; when they repented and believed, they took them to the water and baptized them. Thus did John the Baptist; thus did Jesus; thus did Peter and the Apostles; thus did Philip; and thus do the Mormons. It is paradoxical to the christian world; it is, nevertheless, the gospel of Jesus Christ, and the way that he and his apostles taught the ordinances of their religion.

It is very evident, then, from the whole of the above, that repentance, faith and baptism were the introductory or initiatory ordinances of the gospel—that baptism was ministered to adults only, to those who had faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and had repented of their sins: both of which, infants are incapable of doing—that the mode was by immersion—and that it was for the remission of sins. If anything further is necessary, we might refer to Saul, in his celebrated conversion, who, when Annanias went to him, he said, "Why tarriest thou? arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord; and to Philip, who, when asked by the Ethiopian Eunuch, to whom he had been preaching Jesus, "Here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptized," answered, "If thou believest with all thy heart, thou mayest;" to which the eunuch replied, "I believe that Jesus Christ is the son of the living God." "And they went down both INTO the water, Philip and the eunuch, and he baptized him." "And when they were come up out of the water," &c. Can anything be more plain? and is it not astonishing, in the face of these plain matters of facts, that any one professing common sense, and faith in the scriptures, could believe anything else. For ourselves, in looking over this subject, we almost felt ashamed at having to descend to reason on such simple, plain, matter-of-fact principles among professedly intelligent men, and cannot but express our astonishment at the presumption of some men for teaching, and the gullibility of others for receiving, the ridiculous and absurd doctrines promulgated in relation to those subjects, as the commandments of and as the gospel of Jesus Christ. As so much has been written upon it, we shall not here attempt to examine the meaning of the word baptize; some say it might signify to sprinkle—unfortunately, however, for those quibblers, it does not in this case, and cannot fairly be so rendered.

Luther, in his translation of the New Testament into the English, called John the Baptist, Johannes der Täufer, or, emphatically, John the Dipper. The original, if fairly construed, and taken with the practice and context, cannot be shown to signify anything else. Some, in attempting to patch up their broken systems, will say that Paul baptized the household of the jailer. Does this prove that infants were baptized? This is rather too far-fetched, and shows a lame cause and a desire to patch up. Paul and Silas told the jailor to believe. Can infants believe? Paul and Silas preached the word of the Lord to all that were in his (the jailor's) house. Do infants know anything about preaching the word of the Lord? We too have baptized whole households in numerous instances, but never an infant. But again we are told that baptism might be by sprinkling, because the prepositions to and into might refer only to the bank of the water, instead of going into it. If we had not met with the above, among those who call themselves intelligent, we would not insult the common sense of our readers by introducing it; we will only remark, that if the baptising in Jordan because there is much water there; if the going of Jesus into the water and coming up out of the water; and the above-mentioned case of Philip, are to be interpreted thus, we have not learned the rules of translation and interpretation. This would be a free translation, with a vengeance; the which, if followed out, would destroy every principle of language. We must not either talk of ascending into heaven or descending into hell; it would be all a farce, and the farthest we could reach, would be the outside. But enough of this; we do not wish to follow religionists into the clouds and eat mouthfuls of moonshine. We have traced out definitely, and have fully demonstated, what was the rule of the apostles in relation to these principles thus far, if the scriptures are any testimony; and must leave it for others to show why they have departed from it.

Having traced out faith, repentance and baptism, and shown what was the practice of Jesus and the apostles in relation to these matters, we shall next enquire what was meant by the gift of the Holy Ghost.

TO BE CONTINUED.

News Summary.

THE long deferred President's Message has at length made its appearance, notwithstanding the failure of the House to organize. We publish the Message entire, which will be found to be very interesting. It breathes a spirit of nationality and liberality, that we admire; and we view it, coming at this particular crisis of political confusion, as important a document as has ever been presented to Congress. The President assigns as a reason for presenting the Message before the organization, that the "state of the Union" demands it.

The portion that treats of our relations with England, shows those relations to be very complicated, and a very material difference of construction between the two countries of the provisions of the treaty of 1850, with reference to Central America. Great Britain still holds to her former pretentions over the Musquito Coast, Honduras, etc., while this Government claims that by that treaty she relinquished those pretentions. These complicated interests says Mr. Pierce, must soon be settled or a termination of our friendly relations may be the result.

He maintains the broad constitutional ground of the popular sovereignty of the Territories, and we think explicitly and satisfactorily shows his reasons for so doing, which is very anoying to certain parties, and has been the source no doubt, of much of the ill-feeling now existing in a portion of the House, on the subject of the Message.

It will be seen by our Congressional news that no Speaker is yet elected, and what is still worse, the prospect of an election is less and less flattering. The last, which is the ninetieth vote, shows a lack of seven to effect an election. We suggest the propriety of casting lots for Speaker, and cutting this procrastination short in righteousness. Say, for instance, select some four or five, or more, as the case may be, of the best qualified for the office, and draw their names against as many blanks, save one, marked prize, against which let the lucky man be declared the Speaker elect, and proceed to business, if business is intended; but if quarrelling over local interests is to be the order of the day, perhaps they had better continue as they are, and refrain from mischief.

Since our last, the ship Emerald Isle has arrived at this port, bringing 346 Saints from Liverpool. They were under the Presidency of Elders Merrill, France and Stenhouse, and had a tolerably quick and prosperous passage over the sea. On the 3d inst. some 50 or 60 left for St. Louis per New York and Erie Railroad; quite a large proportion will remain in this vicinity until spring.

Elders Merrill and France intend spending a portion of the winter up in York State among their old friends and relatives. Elder Stenhouse will stop here for the present.

Elders Whitely and Sanderson, from Utah, leave here for Liverpool on the packet ship Columbia, on the 6th inst., in good health and spirits.

We gave last week a very interesting epistle from the Presidency of the Church in the Valleys of the Mountains, and this week on the outside will be found a brief account of the doings of the October Conference, taken from the Deseret News. We also republish from the News an interesting letter from Elder Orson Hyde, Probate Judge for Carson county. The length of the President's Message prevents the insertion in this issue of our usual amount of editorial matter.

The steamer Canada, now thirteen days out from Liverpool, has not yet arrived at Halifax, a heavy snow storm prevailing there at the present, 4th inst.

FOR THE MORMON.

Emigration Correspondence.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3d, 1856.

DEAR PRESIDENT TAYLOR:

Having had the presidency of the Saints on board the Emerald Isle committed to us by President F. D. Richards till our arrival in this city, we deem it our duty, in committing them to your charge, to place in your hands a record of the circumstances attending our voyage across the Atlantic Ocean. You will there perceive that we have had a prosperous voyage and been much blessed with peace and concord. Every comfort that could be expected on such a voyage has been shared by this company. Every officer has well discharged his duties, and the Lord be praised our record bears no trace of division or crime against any one.

Since we arrived in this port we have had much reason to be grateful to the brethren here for their wise and judicious counsels and untiring labors in our interest. Both the brethren and sisters residing here have taken much interest in those who need friends.

The authorities connected with the excellent institution, Castle Garden, deserve our best thanks. We have experienced much kindness and courtesy from all the municipal and other officers with whom we have had any business connection, and we trust that they will have seen, by our general conduct and readiness to carry out their instructions and suggestions, a high appreciation of their services.

We left Liverpool on the 30th of November, and reached here the 29th of December. Our company consisted of 3 Seventies, 1 High Priest, 40 Elders, 29 Priests, 14 Teachers, 11 Deacons, and 248 members. Three marriages were celebrated on board the ship; two children died on the passage, one since our arrival in the river, a fourth since we got ashore, and two births since we landed.

Having received votes of confidence and thanks from the Saints for our labors, and feeling that we have faithfully discharged our duties and carried out the instructions we received from President Richards, we now cheerfully remit all to you, hoping all things will meet your approval. We are thankful to God for his great goodness to us all, and we invoke his choicest blessings upon you and your fellow-laborers, and beg to subscribe ourselves, your brethren and fellow-laborers,

Thirty-Fourth Congress—First Session.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28, 1855.

Mr. Seward offered a resolution choosing Mr. Richardson Speaker of the House, as under the present differences of opinion no organization could be effected, without uniting all who agree on the doctrine of non-intervention as asserted by the Kansas Nebraska act, and proposing all differences on other subjects be postponed without compromise or concession on the part of members voting for the resolution.

Mr. Seward said this would relieve the American party from what they consider an insult, regarding their peculiar position on the Kansas Nebraska act. If there are national men enough in the House they should come for the election of a Speaker.

Several gentlemen explained their understanding of the Kansas Nebraska act.

The resolution meeting with little favor, it was withdrawn.

The House then voted four times for a Speaker and on the seventy-sixth or last ballot the vote stood as follows:

Banks	101	Fuller	81
Richardson	68	Pennington	3

Messrs. Letcher, Whitney, Packer, Williams and Orr one each.

Necessary to a choice 105. Adjourned.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29, 1855.

There was no debate to-day until six ballots had been taken, the second of which reaulted as follows:

Banks	103	Richardson	68
Fuller	32	Pennington	3
Scattering	5

Necessary for a choice 106.

The vote on the sixth ballot stood:

Banks	100	Richardson	68
Fuller	30	Pennington	5
Scattering	5

Necessary for a choice 105.

Mr. Smith, of Va., made a brief statement to show that Mr. Banks had left the American party and joined the fusionists for the express purpose and design of resisting what he calls the aggressions of slavery.

Mr. Grow, in reply, said that those voting for Mr. Banks understood their duties, without instruction or advice from the other side of the House.

Mr. Smith responded, saying he wished the country to understood the character of the man the fusionists were voting for.

Two further ballots were then taken, the last resulting as follows:

Banks	98	Richardson	66
Fuller	29	Pennington	6

Messrs. Whitney, Powell, Williams, and Orr, one each.

It was now half-past five o'clock, and Mr. Marshall moved an adjournment, which was negatived by 47 majority.

At six o'clock the motion to adjourn was renewed by Mr. Orr, and carried by 10 majority.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31, 1855.

No vote for Speaker to-day.

Immediately after the reading of the journal, Mr. Sidney Webster, private secretary of the President, appeared, announcing from the latter a message in writing.

Great excitement was produced by this, amid which Mr. Clingman moved that it be read, in order to hear what it was.

A lengthy and animated discussion then ensued which resulted in adjourning over to Wednesday without accomplishing anything.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2, 1856.

Mr. Giddings moved to correct the Journal of Monday's proceedings, in effect denying that the President's Message was received by the House, and asserting that it was announced and delivered to the Clerk by the President's Private Secretary without permission.

After a debate the proposition was tabled by 36 majority.

Mr. Knight offered a resolution to elect a Speaker by plurality vote.

Mr. Phelps moved to lay this on the table. Carried by 12 majority.

The House then resumed voting for a Speaker with the following result:

EIGHTY-FIFTH BALLOT.

Banks	103	Pennington	6
Richardson	72	Scattering	6
Fuller	32	Necessary to choice	110

Mr. Millson moved that the President's Annual Message be read. In his judgment it was an admirable State paper.

Mr. Stanton thought the President guilty of indecency in thrusting his message in the face of members. It was a most disreputable document, falsifying the truth of the history of the Government from the commencement till now. [Hisses.] He raised the point that no cognizance whatsoever could be taken of the message, till an organization was perfected.

Mr. Millson's motion was tabled by twenty-seven majority.

EIGHTY-SIXTH BALLOT.

Banks	101	Pennington	6
Richardson	71	Scattering	6
Fuller	30	Necessary to choice	107

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3, 1856.

After some unimportant debating two balloting were had the last resulting as follows:

NINETIETH BALLOT.

Banks	101	[illegible]	6
Richardson	72	Scattering	8
Fuller	30	Necessary to choice	108

Adjourned.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28, 1855.

BETWEEN fifty and sixty Democrats are assembled in caucus to-night at the Capitol. Mr. Jones of Tennessee is Chairman, and Messrs. Ruffin and English, Secretaries.

Speeches have been made by Messrs. Cobb of Georgia, Cadwallader, and others, counseling the Democrats to stand by their candidate and platform first named, and declaring their course is approved by their political brethren of the country.

Some thought a union with the Americans could not be effected, as several of the latter had declared in the House that a combination candidate must be taken from the American party.

At 10 o'clock no distinctive proposition had been submitted.

From Havana.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 28, 1855.

THE steamship Granada has arrived here with Havana dates to the 24th inst. Most of the passengers, and the mail saved from the wrecked steamer Crescent City, arrived at Havana on the 20th. The papers publish letters blaming the Captain for the disaster.

Mlle. Rachel had arrived at Havana. Six creoles, charged with sedition, had been arrested and sent to Spain.

The sentence of the American sailors, Chauncey and Winn, through the strenuous exertions of Consul Robertson, had been commuted to labor in the Arsenal, without the mark of degradation, and receiving a slight compensation for their labor.

MARKETS.—Several parcels of the old crop of sugar had been sold at a decline. There was but little now in the market. Contracts for new had been made at 8 1-2a10 3-4 reals per arobe.

From Nebraska.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 28, 1855.

WE have Nebraska dates to the 19th inst. The Legislature met on the 18th. R. R. Folsom was elected President of the Council. The House elected P. C. Sullivan Speaker.

From the Western Plains.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 28, 1855.

THE Santa Fe mail arrived at Independence last Saturday. There is no news of special importance. In the mountain regions of New Mexico the weather was unusually severe. The Indians were quiet and submissive.

The Weather.

OGDENSBURG, Dec. 29, 1855.

IT is very cold here. The thermometer, this morning at sunrise, stood at 20 degrees below zero. The river is frozen across a short distance above this place.

Melancholy Accident.

BOSTON, Dec. 29, 1855.

AT Felmouth, Maine, on Thuraday evening, a Mr. Coffin and two young ladies named Haskell, while "coasting," were precipitated over the bank of a river, a distance of forty feet, and Coffin and one of the ladies were drowned, and the other was so badly injured that it is feared she cannot survive.

From Washington

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30, 1855.

MR. BANKS, last week, on one or two occasions, obtained precisely votes enough for the election of a Speaker, but before the result could be announced several gentlemen, who had been sent for, hurriedly entered the House and cast their suffrages for another, thus turning the scale.

The report of the trial of Hertz, in the British enlistment case, published in the Pennsylvanian, has been sworn to by the phonographer as correct, and has been filed in the State Department as an authentic record of the proceedings.

Owing to the continued sickness of Chief Justice Taney, he is not expected to take his seat on the bench during the present term of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Destruction of the Gas Works at Middletown, Conn.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Dec. 30, 1855.

THE gas works in this place took fire about 2 o'clock this morning, from the purifier. The chain, to which was attached the weight, broke, and the weight fell upon the purifier, making a hole, and letter off the gas. A terrific explosion followed, tearing off the roof and forcing out the walls of the building.

Snow Storm in the East.

BOSTON, Dec. 30, 1855.

ABOUT eight inches of snow fell here last night. The weather has been cold and clear to-day, and there is excellent sleighing.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1, 1856.

IT is stated in a letter from London, from an unusually responsible source, that the British government, anticipating a demand from our government for the recall of Mr. Crampton, meditates transfering him to some other diplomatic station, as in the case of Sir Henry Bulwer, sent hither from Spain.

Sir Gore Ousley is named as Mr. Crampton's successor.

We have been favored with beautiful weather to-day, and all public business has been suspended. The diplomatic corps paid their respects to the President at eleven o'clock, in full costume. Mr. Crampton was prominent among them. Mr. Marcoletta attended as Minister from Nicaragua, and received marked attention from the other diplomatists present. At noon the doors were thrown open to the public, and thousands were in attendance during the day. A fine band was stationed in the mansion, and it was altogether a very joyous time.

The United States Treasury statement reports $22,752,700 subject to draft in all the treasuries on the 24th of December.

Jan. 2d.

Since the reception of the message and the diplomatic correspondence relative to Central America, several distinguished Senators have expressed their apprehension of an early rupture with England.

Col. Parker H. French made his appearance to-day in the lobby of the House, and was soon surrounded by members, who expressed the warmest sympathy for the Walker government. He will remain in Washington during the winter.

There is but little prospect for any organization of the House at present. Banks' friends are sanguine of final success.

From Kansas—More Abolition Ecorbacks.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2, 1856.

A LETTER dated Leavenworth, Kansas, Dec. 18, says the polls were not opened at some places on account of fear of violence from Missourians. At Leavenworth the ballot boxes and poll books were destroyed, and some of the clerks of election nearly killed. Threats were made to destroy the Register office. In several counties no election was held, the citizens being overawed by Missourians.

Message of Governor Gardiner, of Massachusetts.

BOSTON, Jan. 3, 1856.

GOVERNOR GARDINER'S message was delivered to the Legislature to-day. He recommends twenty-one years residence of foreign born citizens, and ability to read and write before they are allowed to vote; deprecates the passages of the Personal Liberty act by the last Legislature, and urges its speedy repeal; suggests a reduction of the number of members of the popular branch of the Legislature, and denounces lobbying legislation. The message is strongly native American in its tone.

Two Weeks Later from California.

Arrival of the George Law.

THE steamship George Law, Commander W. L. Herndon, U. S. N., left Aspinwall at 9 1-2 o'clock on the evening of the 19th December, and arrived at Quarantine at 3 o'clock, P. M., of the 28th, having experienced heavy northwesterly winds since passing the latitude of Charleston.

She brings the California mails of the 5th December, 275 passengers, and $1,405,392 in treasure, on freight, brought down on the Pacific by the P. M. S. S. Co.'s steamer Golden Age, which arrived at Panama on the evening of the 18th.

SUMMARY OF NEWS FOR THE FORTNIGHT ENDING DECEMBER 5.

The excitement in relation to Table Mountain continues. Gold is said to have been discovered on the peak, and it is believed that the whole mountain teems with the precious metal. Diamonds are also discovered in the gulches. Some late rains have improved the mining facilities.

Two Americans named Hill and Harris, charged with having stolen cattle, were executed by Lynch law at Union city, Alameda county, on the 29th ult.

On the 25th November, near Kanaka Flat, a man named Woods, charged with having stolen $1,200, was hung till nearly dead by a mob. Being let down, he informed his partner, named York, of his treatment. York went to the ground, got into a difficulty with one Peter McEvay, and cut the latter so that his bowels hung out.

In Siskiyou county, on November 2, an Indian boy was killed by a man named Thomas Duffy.

On November 16th, at Gibsonville, a man named Jennings was fatally stabbed by another named Garver.

A Mr. Israel Joiner was killed by a Mr. Jacobs, at Humbug Canon, on the 6th November.

The Georgian, a small steamer plying on the bay between San Francisco and Petaluma, blew up at the latter place on the 23d November. A Mr. Flood and Mr. Funk were killed, and several others badly wounded.

The Indian war in Oregon and Washington Territories still continues.

From Puget Sound we learn that the Clickitats, Puyallups, and a portion of the Nisqually Indians, have entered into an alliance to wage war upon the whites. An engagement occurred on November 3d, in the vicinity of Puyallup River, between the Indians and about a hundred whites, which lasted the whole day, and in which one white man and thirty of the Indians were killed. The Indians were driven from their ground and pursued.

The captains of the Nicaragua steamships Sierra Nevada and Cortes have been indicted for carrying on their respective ships a larger number of passengers than the law allows.

The election for Chief Engineer of the Fire Department of this city, held on the 3d inst., resulted in the election of James E. Nuttman.

One Week Later From Europe.

Arrival of the Pacific.

THE U. S. Mail steamship Pacific, Capt. Asa Eldridge, from Liverpool, arrived at this port Dec. 28th.

The Pacific arrived at Liverpool early on Sunday morning, the 9th; having reached the Bar off the entrance to the River Mersey at 12 25 A. M., but was obliged to anchor from thick weather. Her passage is estimated at 10 days 7 hours. On the passage out the passengers presented a highly complimentary letter to Capt. Eldridge.

The Pacific left Liverpool Dec 15, at 2 P. M. At Bell Buoy, passed ship Underwriter, bound in. Dec. 17, lat. 51 30, lon. 16 20, passed a ship, with double topsail yards on fore and main masts, single on mizzen; 18th, lat. 50 07, lon. 21, passed a bark, with broad, white streak, Forbes' rig, both bound east; 28th, 12 1-2 A. M., passed steamship Baltic, 163 miles from Sandy Hook. The Pacific has had severe gales the entire passage.

The news by this arrival comprises several features of interest. Kars has fallen by famine; and we surmise that Gen. Williams and the garrison are in the hands of the Russians. It is, however, merely surmise, for the latest advices come only to the precise point where the last morsel within the walls having been consumed, a flag of truce was being sent to Gen. Monravieff offering to capitulate.

Omar Pasha remained in front of Kutais, which the Russians hold in force.

In the Crimea an attack had been made by the Russians on the extreme lines of the French. After an hour and a half of fighting the Russians withdrew. There is nothing else noticeable from the Crimea. Both armies are comfortably housed and both are well provisioned. Firing continues between the north and south sides of Sebastopol.

Russia has opened a new loan of fifty millions of roubles.

Austria reduces her army to the usual effective force of the peace establishment.

Naples publishes a convention with the United States defining the rights of neutrals.

From France the only intelligence is that the assistance of the Bank alone prevented considerable financial embarrassment on last settlement day.

The English Parliament will open on the 31st January. It is known that considerable misunderstanding prevails between Lord Palmerston and his colleagues. Palmerston and Panmure continue to urge the war, while the rest of the Cabinet are desirous to embrace the present opportunity for peace, and to their (peace) view the Emperor Napoleon is stated to incline. Palmerston holds the threat of dissolution of Parliament over his colleagues' heads.

American Stocks, are not so well maintained this week. Liverpool Cotton Market advanced 1-3d. in the early part of the week, but efterward fell off to 1-16d.; week's sale 56,200 bales. Wheat and Flour close at fully last week's prices. Indian Corn 6d. lower. Moderate business in provisions. Sugar lower, but in some speculative inquiry. Consols declined, closing at 88 5-8.

THE WAR FALL OF KARS.

A brief telegraphic announcement conveyed the intelligence that Kars had capitulated to the Russians, but not one word of detail, excepting that Gen. Kmety and another officer had effected their escape, with the object of hastening the advance of Omar Pasha. The English Government organs admit the catastrophe, but are obstinately silent as to the particulars. The garrison of Kars numbered 8,000 men, and the English officers within the city were Gen. Williams, Col Lake, Maj. Teesdale, Capt. Thompson, Lieut. Churchill and Dr. Sandwith, all now prisoners of war.

At last previous accounts Omer Pasha was on the banks of the Mavani, three hours march from Kutais, awaiting the arrival of Mustapha Pasha's division, and of the Egyptian division 13,000 strong, which had been employed at Eupatoria and was ordered from thence to reenforce him. Omar was expected to be able to advance by the 11th inst., but the Russians were in force before him. Prince Bebutoff having established his headquarters at Kutais. Selim Pasha, with a large convoy of provisions was ready to advance to the relief of Kars, but had not done so until too late.

The Vienna Military Gazette states, that from Redout-Kale, that both the English Commissioner and Omer Pasha's envoy have totally failed in their negotiations with the Circassians, their chiefs having refused to leave the mountains for the purpose of making an attack upon Georgia. The relations subsisting between Omer Pasha and Schamyl are anything but satisfactory, and Omer's plan of crossing the Rion and advancing further into the interior of Georgia may be considered a failure.

A SKIRMISH IN THE CRIMEA.

Marshall Pelissier thus reports to the French Minister of War, an affair.

SEBASTOPOL, Dec. 8—1 P. M.

I have received the following dispatch from the General in command of the First Division of the First Corps: "A body of from 2,000 to 3,000 infantry and about 400 or 500 horse at daybreak this morning attacked Baga, Ourkousta, Skvaka. The enemy beat a retreat after a sharp fusillade which lasted for an hour and a half. Some thirty prisoners, two of whom were officers, were left in our hands; I do not know their number of killed and wounded. Our loss is insignificant."

(Signed.) PELISSIER.

Baga, Ourkousta and Skvaka are three villages, situated at the eastern extremity of the Valley of Baidar, and forming the extreme right of the French position, as well as of the allied army.

MESSAGE OF THE
PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES
TO THE
SENATE
AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Fellow-Citizens of the Senate and of the House of Representatives:

THE Constitution of the United States provides that Congress shall assemble annually on the first Monday of December, and it has been usual for the President to make no communication of a public character to the Senate and House of Representatives until advised of their readiness to receive it. I have deferred to this usage until the close of the first month of the session, but my convictions of duty will not permit me longer to postpone the discharge of the obligation enjoined by the Constitution upon the President "to give to the Congress information of the state of the Union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient."

It is matter of congratulation that the Republic is tranquilly advancing in a career of prosperity and peace.

FOREIGN RELATIONS—CENTRAL AMERICA.

Whilst relations of amity continue to exist between the United States and all foreign powers, with some of them grave questions are depending, which may require the consideration of Congress.

Of such questions the most important is that which has arisen out of the negotiations with Great Britain, in reference to Central America.

By the convention concluded between the two Governments on the 19th of April, 1850, both parties covenanted that "neither will occupy, or fortify, or colonize, or assume, or exercise any dominion over, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, the Mosquito coast or any part of Central America."

It was the undoubted understanding of the United States, in making this treaty, that all the present States of the former Republic of Central America, and the entire territory of each, would thenceforth enjoy complete independence; and that both contracting parties engaged equally, and to the same extent, for the present and for the future, that if either then had any claim of right in Central America, such claim, and all occupation of authority under it, were unreservedly relinquished by the stipulations of the convention; and that no dominion was thereafter to be exercised or assumed in any part of Central America, by Great Britain or the United States.

This Government consented to restrictions in regard to a region of country, wherein we had specific and peculiar interest, only upon the conviction that the like restrictions were in the same sense obligatory on Great Britain. But for this understanding of the force and effect of the convention, it would never have been concluded by us.

So clear was this understanding on the part of the United States, that, in correspondence cotemporaneous with the ratification of the convention, it was distinctly expressed, that the mutual covenants of non-occupation were not intended to apply to the British establishment at the Balize. This qualification is to be ascribed to the fact that, in virtue of successive treaties with various sovereigns of the country, Great Britain had obtained a concession of the right to cut mahogany or dye woods at the Balize, but with positive exclusion of all domain or sovereignty; and thus it confirms the natural construction and understood import of the treaty as to all the rest of the region to which the stipulations applied.

It, however, became apparent, at an early day after entering upon the discharge of my present functions, that Great Britain still continued in the exercise or assertion of large authority in all that part of Central America commonly called the Mosquito Coast, and covering the entire length of the State of Nicaragua and a part of Costa Rica; that she regarded the Balize as her absolute domain, and was gradually extending its limits at the expense of the State of Honduras; and that she had formally colonized a considerable insular group known as the Bay Islands, and belonging, of right, to that State.

All these acts or pretensions of Great Britain, being contrary to the rights of the States of Central America and to the manifest tenor of her stipulations with the United States, as understood by this Government, have been made the subject of negotiation through the American Minister in London. I transmit herewith the instructions to him on the subject, and the correspondence between him and the British Secretary for Foreign Affairs, by which you will perceive that the two Governments differ widely and irreconcilably as to the construction of the convention, and its effect on their respective relations to Central America.

Great Britain so construes the convention as to maintain unchanged all her previous pretentions over the Mosquito coast, and in different parts of Central America. These pretensions, as to the Mosquito Coast, are founded on the assumption of political relations between Great Britain and the remnant of a tribe of Indians on that coast, entered into at a time when the whole country was a colonial possession of Spain. It cannot be successfully controverted, that by the public law of Europe and America, no possible act of such Indians or their predecessors could confer on Great Britain any political rights.

Great Britain does not allege the assent of Spain as the origin of her claims on the Mosquito Coast. She has, on the contrary, by repeated and successive treaties, renounced and relinquished all pretensions of her own, and recognized the full and sovereign rights of Spain in the most unequivocal terms. Yet these pretensions, so without solid foundation in the beginning, and thus repeatedly abjured, were at a recent period revived by Great Britain against the Central American States, the legitimate successors to all the ancient jurisdiction of Spain in that region. They were first applied only to a defined part of the coast of Nicaragua, afterward to the whole of its Atlantic coast, and lastly to a part of the coast of Costa Rica; and they are now re-asserted to this extent, notwithstanding engagements to the United States.

On the eastern coast of Nicaragua and Costa Rica the interference of Great Britain, though exerted at one time in the form of military occupation of the port of San Juan del Norte, then in the peaceful possession of the appropriate authorities of the Central American States, is now presented by her as the rightful exercises of a protectorship over the Mosquito tribe of Indians.

By the establishment at the Balize, now reaching far beyond its treaty limits into the State of Honduras, and that of the Bay Islands, appertaining of right to the same State, are as distinctly colonial governments as those of Jamaica or Canada, and therefore contrary to the very letter as well as the spirit of the convention with the United States, as it was at the time of ratification and now is, understood by this Government.

The interpretation which the British Government, thus in assertion and act, persists in ascribing to the convention, entirely changes its character. While it holds us to all our obligations, it in a great measure releases Great Britain from those which constituted the consideration of this Government for entering into the convention. It is impossible, in my judgement, for the United States to acquiesce in such a construction of the respective relations of the two Governments to Central America.

To a renewed call by this Government upon Great Britain, to abide by, and carry into effect, the stipulations of the convention according to its obvious import by withdrawing from the possession or colonization of portions of the Central American States of Honduras, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica, the British Government has at length replied, affirming that the operation of the treaty is prospective only, and did not require Great Britain to abandon or contract any possessions held by her in Central America at the date of its conclusion.

The British Government, in its last communication, although well knowing the views of the United States, still declares that it sees no reason why a conciliatory spirit may not enable the two Governments to overcome all obstacles to a satisfactory adjustment of the subject.

Assured of the correctness of the construction of the treaty constantly adhered to by this Government, and resolved to insist on the rights of the United States, yet actuated also by the same desire, which is avowed by the British Government, to remove all causes of serious misunderstanding between the two nations associated by so many ties of interest and kindred, it has appeared to me proper not to consider an amicable solution of the controversy hopeless.

There is, however, reason to apprehend, that with Great Britain in the actual occupation of the disputed territories, and the treaty therefore practically null, so far as regards our rights, this international difficulty cannot long remain undetermined, without involving in serious danger the friendly relations, which it is the interest as well as the duty of both countries to cherish and preserve. It will afford me sincere gratification if future efforts shall result in the success, anticipated heretofore with more confidence than the aspect of the case permits me now to entertain.

This reply substitutes a partial issue in the place of the general one presented by the United States. The British Government passes over the question of the rights of Great Britain, real or supposed, in Central America, and assumes that she had such rights at the date of the treaty, and that those rights comprehended the protectorship of the Mosquito Indians, the exteded jurisdiction and limits of the Balize, and the colony of the Bay Islands, and thereupon proceeds by implication to infer that, if the stipulations of the treaty be merely future in effect, Great Britain may still continue to hold the contested portions of Central America. The United States cannot admit either the inference or the premises. We steadily deny that, at the date of the treaty, Great Britain had any possession there, other than the limited and peculiar establishment of the Balize, and maintain that, if she had any, they were surrendered by the convention.

This Government. recognizing the obligations of the treaty, has of course desired to see it executed in good faith by both parties, and in the discussion, therefore, has not looked to rights, which we might, independently of the treaty, in consideration of our geographical position, and of other circumstances, which create for us relations to the Central American States different from those of any Government of Europe.

ENGLISH RECRUITMENT.

One other subject of discussion between the United States and Great Britain has grown out of the attempt, which the exigences of the war in which she is engaged with Russia induced her to make, to draw recruits from the United States.

It is the traditional and settled policy of the United States to maintain impartial neutrality during the wars which, from time to time, occur among the great powers of the world. Performing all the duties of neutrality toward the respective belligerant States, we may reasonably expect them not to interfere with our lawful enjoyment of its benefits. Notwithstanding the existence of such hostilities our citizens retain the individual right to continue all their accustomed pursuits, by land or sea, at home or abroad, subject only to such restrictions in this relation as the laws of war, the usage of nations, or special treaties may impose, and it is our sovereign right that our territory and jurisdiction shall not be invaded by either of the belligerant parties, for the transit of their armies, the operations of their fleets, the levy of troops for their service, the fitting out of cruisers by or against either, or any other act or incident of war. And these undeniable rights of neutrality, individual and national, the United States will, under no circumstances, surrender.

In pursuance of this policy, the laws of the United States do not forbid their citizens to sell to either of the belligerent powers articles contraband of war, or to take munitions of war or soldiers on board their private ships for transportation; and although, in so doing, the individual citizen exposes his property or person to some of the hazards of war, his acts do not involve any breach of national neutrality, nor of themselves implicate the Government. Thus, during the progress of the present war in Europe, our citizens have, without national responsibility therefor, sold gunpowder and arms to all buyers, regardless of the destination of those articles. Our merchantmen have been, and still continue to be, largely employed by Great Britain and by France, in transporting troops, provisions and munitions of war to the principal seat of the military operations, and in bringing home their sick and wounded soldiers; but such use of our mercantile marine is not interdicted either by the international, or by our municipal law, and therefore does not compromise our neutral relations with Russia.

But our municipal law, in accordance with the law of nations, peremptorily forbids, not only foreigners, but our own citizens, to fit out within the limits of the United States a vessel to commit hostilities against any State with which the United States are at peace, or to increase the force of any foreign armed vessel intended for such hostilities against a friendly State.

Whatever concern may have been felt by either of the belligerent powers, lest private armed cruisers or other vessels, in the service of one, might be fitted out in the ports of this country to depredate on the property of the other, all such fears have proved to be utterly groundless. Our citizens have been withheld from any such act or purpose by good faith and by respect for the law.

While the laws of the Union are thus peremptory in their prohibition of the equipment or armament of belligerent cruisers in our ports, they provide not less absolutely that no person shall, within the territory or jurisdiction of the United States, enlist or enter himself, or hire or retain another person to enlist or enter himself, or to go beyond the limits or jurisdiction of the United States with intent to be enlisted or entered, in the service of any foreign State, either as a soldier, or a marine or seaman on board of any vessel of war, letter of marque, or privateer. And these enactments are also in strict conformity with the law of nations, which declares that no State has the right to raise troops for land or sea service in another State without its consent, and that, whether forbidden by the municipal law or not, the very attempt to do it, without such consent, is an attack on the national sovereignty.

Such being the public rights and the municipal law of the United States, no solicitude on the subject was entertained by this Government, when a year since the British Parliament passed an act to provide for the enlistment of foreigners in the military service of Great Britain. Nothing on the face of the act, or its public history, indicated that the British Government proposed to attempt recruitment in the United States; nor did it ever give intimation of such intention to this Government. It was matter of surprise, therefore, to find, subsequently, that the engagements of persons within the United States to proceed to Halifax, in the British province of Nova Scotia, and there enlist in the service of Great Britain, was going on extensively, with little or no disguise. Ordinary legal steps were immediately taken to arrest and punish parties concerned, and so put an end to acts infringing the municipal law and derogatory to our sovereignty. Meanwhile suitable representations on the subject were addressed to the British Government.

Thereupon it became known, by the admission of the British Government itself, that the attempt to draw recruits from this country originated with it, or at least had its approval and sanction; but it also appeared that the public agents engaged in it had "stringent instructions" not to violate the municipal law of the United States.

It is difficult to understand how it should have been supposed that troops could be raised here by Great Britain, without violation of the municipal law. The unmistakable object of the law was to prevent every such act, which, if performed, must be either in violation of the law, or in studied evasion of it, and, in either alternative, the act done would be alike injurious to the sovereignty of the United States.

In the meantime, the matter acquired additional importance, by the recruitments in the United States not being discontinued, and the disclosures of the fact that they were prosecuted upon a systematic plan devised by official authority; that recruiting rendezvous had been opened in our principal cities, and depots for the reception of recruits established on our frontier; and the whole business conducted under the supervision and by the regular co-operation of British officers, civil and military, in the North American Provinces, and some in the United States. The complicity of those officers in an undertaking, which could only be accomplished by defying our laws, throwing suspicion over our attitude of neutrality, and disregarding our territorial rights, is conclusively proved by the evidence elicited on the trial of such of their agents as have been apprehended and convicted. Some of the officers thus implicated are of high official position, and many of them beyond our jurisdiction, so that legal proceedings could not reach the source of the mischief.

These considerations, and the fact that the cause of complaint was not a mere casual occurrence, but a deliberate design, entered upon with full knowledge of our laws and national policy, and conducted by responsible public functionaries, impelled me to present the case to the British Government, in order to secure not only a cessation of the wrong, but its reparation. The subject is still under discussion, the result of which will be communicated to you in due time.

BRITISH RELATIONS GENERALLY.

I repeat the recommendation submitted to the last Congress, that provisions be made for the appointment of a Commissioner, in connection with Great Britain, to survey and establish the boundary line which divides the Territory of Washington from the contiguous British possessions. By reason of the extent and importance of the country in dispute, there has been imminent danger of collision between the subjects of Great Britain and the citizens of the United Sates, including their respective authorities in that quarter. The prospect of a speedy arrangement has contributed hitherto to induce on both sides forbearance to assert by force what each claim as a right. Continuance of delay on the part of the two governments to act in the matter will increase the dangers and difficulties of the controversy.

Misunderstanding exists as to the extent, character and value of the possessory rights of the Hudson Bay Company and the property of the Puget's Sound Agricultural Company, reserved in our treaty with Great Britain, relative to the Territory of Oregon. I have reason to believe that a cession of the rights of both companies to the United States, which would be the readiest means of terminating all questions, can be obtained on reasonable terms; and, with a view to this end, I present the subject to the attention of Congress.

The colony of Newfoundland, having enacted the laws required by the treaty of the 5th of June, 1854, is now placed on the same footing, in respect to commercial intercourse with the United States, as the other Britith North American provinces.

The commission, which that treaty contemplated for determining the rights of fishery in rivers and mouths of rivers on the coasts of the United States and the British North American provinces, has been organized and has commenced its labors; to complete which there is needed further appropriations for the service of another season.

SOUND DUES.

In pursuance of the authority, conferred by a resolution of the Senate of the United States, passed on the 3d of March last, notice was given to Denmark, on the 14th day of April, of the intention of this Government to avail itself of the stipulation of the subsisting convention of friendship, commerce and navigation between that kingdom and the United States, whereby either party might, after ten years, terminate the same at the expiration of one year from the date of notice for that purpose.

The considerations which led me to call the attention of Congress to that Convention, and induced the Senate to adopt the resolution referred to, still continues in force. The Convention contains an article, which, although it does not directly engage the United States to submit to the imposition of tolls on the vessels and cargoes of Americans passing into or from the Baltic Sea, during the continuance of the treaty, yet may, by possibility, be construed as implying such submission. The exaction of those tolls not being justified by any principle of international law, it became the right and the duty of the United States to relieve themselves from the implication of engagement on the subject, so as to be perfectly free to act in the premises in such a way as their public interests and honor shall demand.

I remain of the opinion that the United States ought not to submit to the payment of the Sound dues—not so much because of their amount, which is a secondary matter, but because it is in effect the recognition of the right of Denmark to treat one of the great maritime highways of nations as a close sea, and the navigation of it as a privilege for which tribute may be imposed upon those who have occasion to use it.

That Government, on a former occasion not unlike the present, signalized its determination to maintain the freedom of the seas, and the great natural channels of navigation. The Barbary States had for a long time coerced the payment of tribute from all nations, whose ships frequented the Mediterranean. To the last demand of such payment made by them, the United States, although suffering less by their depredations than many other nations, returned the explicit answer that we preferred war to tribute, and thus opened the way to the relief of the commerce of the world from an ignominious tax, so long submitted to by the more powerful nations of Europe.

If the manner of payment of the Sound dues differ from that of the tribute formerly conceded to the Barbary States, still their exaction by Denmark has no better foundation in right. Each was, in its origin, nothing but a tax on a common natural right, extorted by those who were at that time able to obstruct the free and secure enjoyment of it, but who no longer possess that power.

Denmark, while resisting our assertion of the freedom of the Baltic Sound and Belts, has indicated a readiness to make some new arrangement on the subject, and has invited the Governments interested, including the United States, to be represented in a Convention to assemble for the purpose of receiving and considering a proposition, which she intends to submit, for the capitalization of the Sound dues, and the distribution of the sum to be paid as commutation among the Governments, according to the respective proportions of their maritime commerce to and from the Baltic. I have declined in behalf of the United States to accept the invitation, for the most cogent reasons. One is, that Denmark does not offer to submit to the Convention the question of her right to levy the Sound dues. A second is, that if the Convention were allowed to take cognizance of that particular question, still it would not be competent to deal with the great international principle involved which affects the right in other cases of navigation and commercial freedom, as well as that of access to the Baltic. Above all, by the express terms of the proposition, it is contemplated that the consideration of the Sound dues shall be commingled with and made subordinate to a matter wholly extraneous, the balance of power among the Governments of Europe.

While, however, rejecting this proposition, and insisting on the right of free transit into and from the Baltic, I have expressed to Denmark a willingness on the part of the United States to share liberally with other powers in compensating her for any advantages which commerce shall hereafter derive from expenditures made by her for the improvement and safety of the navigation of the Sound or Belts.

I lay before you herewith sundry documents on the subject, in which my views are more fully disclosed. Should no satisfactory arrangement be soon concluded, I shall call your attention to the subject, with recommendation of such measures as may appear to be required, in order to assert and secure the rights of the United States so far as they are affected by the pretensions of Denmark.

FRANCE.

I announce with much gratification, that, since the adjournment of the last Congress, the question, then existing between this Government and that of France, respecting tne French Consul at San Francisco, has been satisfactorily determined, and that the relations of the two Government continue to be of the most friendly nature.

GREECE.

A question, also, which has been pending for several years between the United States and the Kingdom of Greece, growing out of the sequestration, by public authorities of that country, of property belonging to the present American Consul at Athens, and which had been the subject of very earnest discussion heretofore, has recently been settled to the satisfaction of the party interested and both Governments.

SPAIN.

With Spain, peaceful relations are still maintained, and some progress has been made in securing the redress of wrongs complained of by this Government. Spain has, however, not only disavowed and disapproved the conduct of the officers, who illegally seized and detained the steamer Black Warrior at Havana, but has also paid the sum claimed as indemnity for the loss thereby inflicted on citizens of the United States.

In consequence of a destructive hurricane which visited Cuba in 1844, the supreme authority of that island issued a decree permitting the importation, for the period of six months, of certain building materials and provisions free of duty, but revoked it when about half the period only had elapsed, to the injury of citizens of the United States, who had proceeded to act on the faith of that decree. The Spanish Government refused indemnification to the parties aggrieved until recently, when it was assented to, payment being promised to be made so soon as the amount due can be ascertained.

Satisfaction claimed for the arrest and search of the steamer Eldorado has not yet been accorded, but there is reason to believe that it will be, and that case, with others, continues to be urged on the attention of the Spanish Government. I do not abandon the hope of concluding with Spain some general arrangement, which, if it did not wholly prevent the recurrence of difficulties in Cuba, will render them less frequent, and whenever they shall occur, facilitate their more speedy settlement.

MEXICO.

The interposition of this Government has been invoked by many of its citizens, on account of injuries done to their persons and property, for which the Mexican Government is responsible. The unhappy situation of that country, for some time past, has not allowed its Government to give due consideration to claims of private reportation, and has appeared to call and justify some forbearance in such matters on the part of this Government. But if the revolutionary movements which have lately occurred in that Republic end in the organization of stable Government, urgent appeals to its justice will then be made, and, it may be hoped, with success, for the redress of all complaints of our citizens.

NICARAGUA.

In regard to the American republics, which, from their proximity and other considerations, have peculiar relations to this Government, while it has been my constant aim strictly to observe all the obligations of political friendship and of good neighborhood, obstacles to this have arisen in some of them, from their own insufficient power to check lawless irruptions, which, in effect, throws most of the task on the United States. Thus it is, that the distracted internal condition of the State of Nicaragua has made it incumbent on me to appeal to the good faith of our citizens to abstain from unlawful intervention in its affairs, and to adopt preventive measures to the same end, which, on a similar occasion, had the best results in re-assuring the peace of the Mexican States of Sonora and Lower California.

TREATIES.

Since the last session of Congress a treaty of amity, commerce and navigation, and for the surrender of fugitive criminals, with the kingdom of the two Sicilies; a treaty of commerce, friendship and navigation with Nicaragua; and a convention of commercial reciprocity with the Hawaiian kingdom, have been negotiated. The latter kingdom and the State of Nicaragua have also acceded to the declaration, recognizing as international rights the principles contained in the convention between the United States and Russia of the 22d of July, 1854. These treaties and conventions will be laid before the Senate for ratification.

TREASURY.

The statements made in my last annual Message, respecting the anticipated receipts and expenditures of the Treasury, have been substantially verified.

It appears from the report of the Secretary of the Treasury, that the receipts during the last fiscal year, ending June 30, 1855, from all sources, were sixty-five millions three thousand nine hundred and thirty dollars; and that the public expenditures for the same period, exclusive of payments on account of the public debt, amounted to fifty-six millions three hundred and sixty-five thousand three hundred and ninety-three dollars. During the same period, the payments made in redemption of the public debt, including interest and premium, amounted to nine millions eight hundred and forty-four thousand five hundred and twenty-eight dollars.

The balance in the Treasury at the beginning of the present fiscal year, July 1, 1855, was eighteen millions nine hundred and thirty-one thousand and seventy-six dollars; the receipts for the first quarter, and the estimated receipts for the remaining three quarters, amount, together, to sixty-seven millions nine hundred and eighteen thousand seven hundred and thirty-four dollars; thus affording in all, as the available resources of the current fiscal year, the sum of eighty-six millions eight hundred and fifty-six thousand seven hundred and ten dollars.

If, to the actual expenditure of the first quarter of the current fiscal year, be added the probable expenditures for the remaining three-quarters, as estimated by the Secretary of the Treasury, the sum total will be seventy-one millions two hundred and twenty-six thousand eight hundred and forty-six dollars, thereby leaving an estimated balance in the treasury on July 1, 1856, of fifteen million six hundred and twenty-three thousand eight hundred and sixty-three dollars and forty-one cents.

In the above estimated expenditures of the present fiscal year are included three million dollars to meet the last instalment of the ten millions provided for in the late treaty with Mexico, and seven millions seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars appropriated on account of the debt due to Texas, which two sums make an aggregate amount of ten million seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and reduce the expenditures, actual or estimated, for ordinary objects of the year, to the sum of sixty million four hundred and seventy-six thousand dollars.

The amount of the public debt, at the commencement of the present fiscal year, was forty million five hundred and eighty-three thousand six hundred and thirty-one dollars, and, deduction being made of subsequent payments, the whole public debt of the Federal Government remaining at this time is less than forty million dollars.

The remnant of certain other Government stocks amounting to two hundred and forty-three thousand dollars, referred to in my last Message as outstanding, has since been paid.

I am fully persuaded that it would be difficult to devise a system superior to that, by which the fiscal business of the Government is now conducted. Notwithstanding the great number of public agents of collection and disbursement, it is believed that the checks and guards provided, including the requirement of monthly returns, render it scarcely possible for any considerable fraud on the part of those agents, or neglect involving hazard of serious public loss, to escape detection. I renew, however, the recommendation heretofore made by me, of the enactment of a law declaring it felony on the part of public officers to insert false entries in their books of record or account, or to make false returns, and also requiring them on the termination of their service to deliver to their successors all books, records, and other objects of a public nature in their custody.

Derived as our public revenue is, in chief part, from duties on imports, its magnitude affords gratifying evidence of the prosperity, not only of our commerce but of the other great interests upon which that depends.

The principle that all moneys not required for the current expenses of the Government should remain for active employment in the hands of the people, and the conspicuous fact that the annual revenue from all sources exceeds, by many millions of dollars, the amount needed for a prudent and economical administration of public affairs, cannot fail to suggest the propriety of an early revision and reduction of the tariff of duties on imports. It is now so generally conceded that the purpose of revenue alone can justify the imposition of duties on imports, that, in re-adjusting the impost tables and schedules, which unquestionably require essential modification, a departure from the principles of the present tariff is not anticipated.

ARMY.

The army, during the past year, has been actively engaged in defending the Indian frontier, the state of the service permitting but few and small garrisons in our permanent fortifications. The additional regiments authorized at the last session of Congress have been recruited and organized, and a large portion of the troops have already been sent to the field. All the duties which devolve on the military establishment have been satisfactorily performed, and the dangers and privations incident to the character of the service required of our troops have furnished additional evidence of their courage, zeal and capacity to meet any requisition which their country may make upon them. For the details of the military operations, the distribution of the troops and additional provisions required, I refer to the report of the Secretary of War and the accompanying documents.

Experience, gathered from events which have transpired since my last annual Message, has but served to confirm the opinion then expressed of the propriety of making provision, by a retired list, for disabled officers, and for increased compensation to the officers retained on the list for active duty. All the reasons which existed when these measures were recommended on former occasions continue without modification, except so far as circumstances have given to some of them additional force.

The recommendations heretofore made for a partial re-organization of the army, are also renewed. The thorough elementary education given to those officers, who commence their service with the grade of cadet, qualifies them, to a considerable extent, to perform the duties of every arm of the service; but to give the highest efficiency to artillery requires the practice and special study of several years; and it is not, therefore, believed to be advisable to maintain, in time of peace, a larger force of that arm than can be usually employed in the duties appertaining to the service of field and siege artillery. The duties of the staff in all its various branches belong to the movements of troops, and the efficiency of an army in the field would materially depend upon the ability with which those duties are discharged. It is not, as in the case of artillery, a speciality, but requires, also, an intimate knowledge of the duties of an officer of the line, and it is not doubted that, to complete the education of an officer for either the line or the general staff, it is desirable that he shall have served in both. With this view, it was recommended on a former occasion that the duties of the staff should be mainly performed by details from the line; and with conviction of the advantages which would result from such a change, it is again presented for the consideration of Congress.

NAVY.

The report of the Secretary of the Navy, herewith submitted, exhibits in full the naval operations of the past year, together with the present condition of the service, and it makes suggestions of further legislation, to which your attention is invited.

The construction of the six steam frigates, for which appropriations were made by the last Congress, has proceeded in the most satisfactory manner, and with such expedition, as to warrant the belief that they will be ready for service early in the coming Spring. Important as this addition to our naval force is, it still remains inadequate to the contingent exigencies of the protection of the extensive sea coast and vast commercial interests of the United States. In view of this fact, and of the acknowledged wisdom of the policy of a gradual and systematic increase of the navy, an appropriation is recommended for the construction of six steam sloops-of-war.

In regard to the steps taken in execution of the act of Congress to promote the efficiency of the navy, it is unnecessary for me to say more than to express entire concurrence in the observations on that subject presented by the Secretary in his report.

POST OFFICE.

It will be perceived, by the report of the Postmaster-General, that the gross expenditure of the department for the last fiscal year, was nine million nine hundred and sixty-eight thousand three hundred and forty-two dollars, and the gross receipts seven millions three hundred and forty-two thousand one hundred and thirty-six dollars, making an excess of expenditure over receipts of two millions six hundred and twenty-six thousand two hundred and six dollars; and that the cost of mail transportation during that year was six hundred and seventy-four thousand nine hundred and fifty-two dollars greater than the previous year. Much of the heavy expenditures to which the treasury is thus subjected is to be ascribed to the large quantity of printed matter conveyed by the mails, either franked, or liable to no postage by law, or to very low rates of postage compared with that charged on letters; and to the great cost of mail service on railroads and by ocean steamers. The suggestions of the Postmaster-General on the subject deserve the consideration of Congress.

INTERIOR.

The report of the Secretary of the Interior will engage your attention, as well for useful suggestions it contains, as for the interest and importance of the subjects to which they refer.

The aggregate amount of public land sold during the last fiscal year, located with military scrip or land warrants, taken up under grants for roads, and selected as swamp lands by States, is twenty four millions five hundred and fifty-seven thousand four hundred and nine acres, of which the portion sold was fifteen millions seven hundred and twenty-nine thousand five hundred and twenty-four acres, yielding in receipts the sum of eleven millions four hundred and eighty-five thousand three hundred and eighty dollars. In the same period of time, eight million seven hundred and twenty-three thousand eight hundred and fifty-four acres, have been surveyed; but, in consideration of the quantity already subject to entry, no additional tracts have been brought into market.

The peculiar relation of the General Government to the District of Columbia renders it proper to commend to your care not only its material, but also its moral interests, including education, more especially in those parts of the district outside of the cities of Washington and Georgetown.

The commissioners appointed to revise and codify the laws of the District have made such progress in the performance of their task as to insure its completion in the time prescribed by the act of Congress.

Information has recently been received that the peace of the settlements in the Territories of Oregon and Washington is disturbed by hostilities on the part of the Indians, with indications of extensive combinations of a hostile character among the tribes in that quarter, the more serious in their possible effect by reason of the undetermined foreign interests existing in those Territories, to which your attention has already been especially invited. Efficient measures have been taken, which, it is believed, will restore quiet, and afford protection to our citizens.

In the Territory of Kansas there have been acts prejudicial to good order; but as yet none have occured under circumstances to justify the interposition of the federal executive. That could only be in case of obstruction to the federal law, or of organized resistance to territorial law, assuming the character of insurrection, which if it should occur, it would be my duty promptly to overcome and suppress. I cherish, the hope, however, that the occurrence of any such untoward event will be prevented by the sound sense of the people of the Territory, who by its organic law possessing the right to determine their own domestic institutions, are entitled, while deporting themselves peacefully, to the free exercise of that right, and must be protected in the enjoyment of it, without interference on the part of the citizens, or any of the States.

The southern boundary line of this Territory has never been surveyed and established. The rapidly extending settlements in that region, and the fact that the main route between Independence, in the State of Missouri, and New Mexico, is contiguous to this line, suggest the probability that embarrassing questions of jurisdiction may consequently arise. For these and other considerations, I commend the subject to your early attention.

CONSTITUTIONAL THEORY OF THE GOVERNMENT.

I have thus passed in review the general state of the Union, including such particular concerns of the Federal Goverment, whether of domestic or foreign relation, as it appeared to me desirable and useful to bring to the especial notice of Congress. Unlike the great States of Europe and Asia, and many of those of America, these United States are wasting their strength neither in foreign war nor domestic strife. Whatever of discontent or public dissatisfaction exists, is attributable to the imperfections of human nature, or is incident to all Governments, however perfect, which human wisdom can devise. Such subjects of political agitation as occupy the public mind consists, to a great extent, of exaggeration of inevitable evils, or over zeal in social improvement, or mere imagination of grievance, having but remote connection with any of the constitutional functions or duties of the Federal Government. To whatever extent these questions exhibit a tendency menacing to the stability of the Constitution or the integrity of the Union, and no further, they demand the consideration of the Executive, and require to be presented by him to Congress.

Before the Thirteen Colonies became a confederation of independent States, they were associated only by community of transatlantic origin, by geographical position, and by the mutual tie of common dependence on Great Britain. When that tie was sundered, they severally assumed the powers and rights of absolute self-government. The municipal and social institutions of each, its laws of property and of personal relation—even its political organization—were such only as each one chose to establish, wholly without interference from any other. In the language of the Declaration of Independence, each State had "full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and to do all other acts and things which independent States may of right do." The several Colonies differed in climate, in soil, in natural productions, in religion, in systems of education, in legislation, and in the forms of political administration; and they continued to differ in these respects when they voluntarily allied themselves as States to carry on the war of the Revolution.

The object of that war was to disenthral the United Colonies from foreign rule, which had proved to be oppressive, and to separate them permanently from the mother country; the political result was the foundation of a federal republic of the free white men of the colonies, constituted, as they are, in distinct and reciprocally independent State Governments. As for the subject races, whether Indian or African, the wise and brave statesmen of that day, being engaged in no extravagant scheme of social change, left them as they were, and thus preserved themselves and their posterity from the anarchy and the ever recurring civil wars which have prevailed in other revolutionized European colonies of America.

When the confederated States found it convenient to modify the conditions of their association, by giving to the General Government direct access, in some respects, to the people of the States, instead of confining it to action on the States as such, they proceeded to frame the existing Constitution, adhering steadily to one guiding thought, which was, to delegate only such power as was necessary and proper to the execution of specific purposes, or, in other words, to retain as much as possible, consistently with those purposes, of the independent powers of the individual States. For objects of common defence and security, they intrusted to the General Government certain carefully, defined functions, leaving all others as the undelegated rights of the separate independent sovereignties.

Such is the constitutional theory of our Government, the practical observance of which has carried us, and us alone, among modern republics, through nearly three generations of time, without the cost of one drop of blood shed in civil war. With freedom and concert of action it has enabled us to contend successfully on the battle field against foreign foes, has elevated the feeble colonies into powerful States, and has raised our industrial productions, and our commerce, which transports them, to the level of the richest and greatest nations of Europe. And the admirable adaptation of our political institutions to their objects, combining local self-government with aggregate strength, has established the practicability of a government like ours to cover a continent with confederate States.

The Congress of the United States is, in effect, that congress of sovereignties which good men in the Old World have sought for but could never attain, and which imparts to America an exemption from the mutable leagues for common action, from the wars, the mutual invasions and vague aspirations after the balance of power which convulse, from time to time, the Governments of Europe. Our co-operative action rests in the conditions of permanent confederation prescribed by the Constitution. Our balance of power is in the separate reserved rights of the States, and their equal representation in the Senate. That independent sovereignty in every one of the States, with its reserved rights of local self-government assured to each by their co-equal power in the Senate, was the fundamental condition of the Constitution. Without it the Union would never have existed. However desirous the larger States might be to re-organize the Government so as to give to their population its proportionate weight in the common counsels they knew it was impossible, unless they conceded to the smaller ones authority to exercise at least a negative influence on all the measures of the Government, whether legislative or executive, through their equal representation in the Senate. Indeed, the larger States themselves could not have failed to perceive that the same power was equally necessary to them, for the security of their own domestic interests against the aggregate force of the General Government. In a word, the original States went into this permanent league on the agreed premises, of exerting their common strength for the defense of the whole, and of all its parts; but of utterly excluding all capability of reciprocal aggression. Each solemnly bound itself to all the others, neither to undertake, nor permit any encroachment upon, or intermeddling with another's reserved rights.

Where it was deemed expedient, particular rights of the States were expressly guaranteed by the Constitution; but, in all things beside, these rights were guarded by the limitation of the powers granted, and by express reservation of all powers not granted, in the compact of union. Thus the great power of taxation was limited to purposes of common defense and general welfare, excluding objects appertaining to the local legislation of the several States, and those purposes of general welfare and common defense were afterward defined by specific enumeration, as being matters only of co-relation between the States themselves, or between them and foreign governments, which, because of their common and general nature could not be left to the separate control of each State.

Of the circumstances of local condition, interest and rights in which a portion of the States, constituting one great section of the Union, differed from the rest, and from another section, the most important was the peculiarity of a larger relative colored population in the Southern than in the Northern States.

A population of this class, held in subjection, existed in nearly all the States, but was more numerous and of more serious concernment in the South than in the North, on account of natural differences of climate and production; and it was foreseen that, for the same reasons, while this population would diminish, and, sooner or later, cease to exist, in some States, it might increase in others. The peculiar character and magnitude of this question of local rights, not in material relations only, but still more in social ones, caused it to enter into the special stipulations of the Constitution.

Hence, while the General Government, as well by the enumerated powers granted to it, as by those not enumerated and therefore refused to it, was forbidden to touch this matter in the sense of attack or offense, it was placed under the general safeguard of the Union, in the sense of defense against either invasion or domestic violence, like all other local interests of the several States. Each State expressly stipulated as well for itself as for each and all of its citizens, and every citizen of each State became solemnly bound by his allegiance to the Constitution, that any person, held to service or labor in one State, escaping into another, should not, in consequence of any law or regulation thereof, be discharged from such service or labor, but should be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such services or labor might be due by the laws of his State.

Thus, and thus only, by the reciprocal guaranty of all the rights of every State against interference on the part of another, was the present form of government established by our fathers and transmitted to us; and by no other means is it possible for it to exist. If one State ceases to respect the rights of another, and obtrusively intermeddles with its local interests—if a portion of the States assume to impose their institutions on the others, or refuse to fulfill their obligations to them—we are no longer united friendly States, but distracted, hostile ones, with little capacity left of common advantage, but abundant means of reciprocal injury and mischief.

Practically, it is immaterial whether aggressive interference between the States, or deliberate refusal on the part of any one of them to comply with constitutional obligations arise from erroneous conviction or blind prejudice, whether it be perpetrated by direction or indirection. In either case, it is full of threat and danger to the durability of the Union.

CONSTITUTIONAL RELATIONS OF SLAVERY.

Placed in the office of Chief Magistrate as the executive agent of the whole country, bound to take care that the laws be faithfully executed, and especially enjoined by the Constitution to give information to Congress on the state of the Union, it would be palpable neglect of duty on my part to pass over a subject like this, which, beyond all things at the present time, vitally concerns individual and public security.

It has been matter of painful regret to see States, conspicuous for their services in founding the Republic, and equally sharing its advantages, disregard their constitutional obligations. Although conscious of their inability to heal admitted and palpable social evils of their own, and which are completely within their jurisdiction, they engage in the offensive and hopeless undertaking of reforming the domestic institutions of other States wholly beyond their control and authority. In the vain pursuit of ends, by them entirely unattainable, ends which they may not legally attempt to compass, they peril the very existence of the constitution, and all the countless benefits which it has conferred. When the people of the Southern States confine their attention to their own affairs, not presuming officiously to intermeddle with the social institutions of the Northern States, too many of the inhabitants of the latter are permanently organized in associations to inflict injury on the former, by wrongful acts, which would be cause of war as between foreign powers, and only fail to be such in our system, because perpetrated under cover of the Union.

It is impossible to present this subject as truth and the occasion require, without noticing the reiterated, but groundless allegation, that the South has persistently asserted claims and obtained advantages in the practical administration of the General Government to the prejudice of the North, and in which the latter has acquiesced. That is, the States, which either promote or tolerate attacks on the rights of persons and of property in other States, to distinguish their own injustice, pretend or imagine, and constantly aver, that they, whose constitutional rights are thus systematically assailed, are themselves the aggressors. At the present time, this imputed aggression, resting as it does, only in the vague, declamatory charges of political agitators, resolves itself into misapprehension, or misinterpretation, of the principles and facts of the political organization of the new territories of the United States.

What is the voice of history? When the ordinance which provided for the government of the territory northwest of the River Ohio, and for its eventual subdivision into new States, was adopted in the Congress of the confederation, it is not to be supposed that the question of future relative power, as between the States which retained and those which did not retain, a numerous colored population, escaped notice, or failed to be considered. And yet the Concession of that vast territory to the interests and opinions of the Northern States, a territory now the seat of five among the largest members of the Union, was, in a great measure, the act of the State of Virginia, and of the South.

When Louisiana was acquired by the United States, it was an acquisition not less to the North than to the South; for while it was important to the country at the mouth of the River Mississippi to become the emporium of the country above it, so also was it even more important to the whole Union to have that emporium; and although the new province, by reason of its imperfect settlement, was mainly regarded as on the Gulf of Mexico, yet, in fact, it extended to the opposite boundaries of the United States, with far greater breadth above than below, and was in territory, as in everything else, equally at least, an accession to the Northern States. It is mere delusion and prejudice, therefore, to speak of Louisiana as an acquisition in the special interest of the South.

The patriotic and just men who participated in that act were influenced by motives far above all sectional jealousies. It was, in truth, the great event which, by completing for us the possession of the Valley of the Mississippi, with commercial access to the Gulf of Mexico, imparted unity and strength to the whole confederation, and attached together by indissoluble ties the East and the West, as well as the North and the South.

As to Florida, that was but the transfer by Spain to the United States of territory on the east side of the River Mississippi, in exchange for large territory which the United States transferred to Spain on the west side of that river, as the entire diplomatic history of the transaction serves to demonstrate. Moreover, it was an acquisition demanded by the commercial interests and the security of the whole Union.

In the meantime the people of the United States had grown up to a proper consciousness of their strength, and in a brief contest with France, and in the second war with Great Britain, they had shaken off all which remained of undue reverence for Europe, and emerged from the atmosphere of those transatlantic influences which surrounded the infantic republic, and had begun to turn their attention to the full and systematic development of the internal resources of the Union.

Among the evanescent controversies of that period, the most conspicuous was the question of regulation by Congress of the social condition of the future States to be founded in the Territory of Louisiana.

The ordinance for the government of the Territory northwest of the River Ohio had contained a provision, which prohibited the use of servile labor therein, subject to the condition of the extradition of fugitives from service due in any other part of the United States. Subsequently to the adoption of the Constitution, this provision ceased to remain as a law; for its operation as such was absolutely superseded by the Constitution. But the recollection of the fact excited the zeal of social propagandism in some sections of the confederation, and, when a second State, that of Missouri, came to be formed in the Territory of Louisiana, a proposition was made to extend to the latter Territory the restriction originally applied to the country situated between the Rivers Ohio and Mississippi.

Most questionable as was this proposition in all its constitutional relations, nevertheless it received the sanction of Congress, with some slight modifications of line, to save the existing rights of the intended new State. It was reluctantly acquiesced in by Southern States, as a sacrifice to the cause of peace and of the Union, not only of the rights stipulated by the treaty of Louisiana, but of the principle of equality among the States guaranteed by the Constitution. It was received by the Northern States with angry and resentful condemnation and complaint, because it did not concede all which they had exactingly demanded. Having passed through the forms of legislation, it took its place in the statute book, standing open to repeal, like any other act of doubtful constitutionality, subject to be pronounced null and void by the courts of law, and possessing no possible efficacy to control the rights of the States, which might thereafter be organized out of any part of the original Territory of Louisiana.

In all this, if any aggression there were, any innovation upon pre-existing rights, to which portion of the Union are they justly chargeable?

This controversy passed away with the occasion, nothing surviving it save the dormant letter of the statute.

But, long afterward, when by the proposed accession of the Republic of Texas, the United States were to take their next step in Territorial greatness, a similar contingency occurred, and became the occasion for systematized attempts to intervene in the domestic affairs of one section of the Union, in defiance of their rights as States, and of the stipulations of the Constitution. These attempts assumed a practical direction, in the shape of persevering endeavors by some of the Representatives in both Houses of Congress to deprive the Southern States of the supposed benefit of the provisions of the act authorizing the organization of the State of Missouri.

But the good sense of the people and the vital force of the Constitution triumphed over sectional prejudice and the political errors of the day, and the State of Texas returned to the Union as she was, with social institutions which the people had chosen for themselves, and with express agreement, by the re-annexing act, that she should be susceptible of subdivisions into a plurality of States.

Whatever advantages the interests of the Southern States, as such, gained by this, were far inferior in results, as they unfolded in the progress of time, to those which sprang from previous concessions made by the South.

To every thoughtful friend of the Union—to the true lover of their country—to all who longed and labored for the full success of this great experiment of republican institutions—it was cause of gratulation that such an opportunity had occurred to illustrate our advancing power on this Continent, and to furnish to the world additional assurance of the strength and stability of the Constitution. Who would wish to see Florida still a European colony? Who would rejoice to hail Texas as a lone star, instead of one in the galaxy of States? Who does not appreciate the incalculable benefits of the acquisition of Louisiana? And yet narrow views and sectional purposes would inevitably have excluded them all from the Union.

But another struggle on the same point ensued when our victorious armies returned from Mexico, and it devolved on Congress to provide for the territories acquired by the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo. The great relations of the subject had now become distinct and clear to the perception of the public mind, which appreciated the evils of sectional controversy upon the question of the admission of new States. In that crisis intense solicitude pervaded the nation. But the patriotic influences of the popular heart, guided by the admonitory advice of the Father of his Country, rose superior to all the difficulties of the incorporation of a new empire into the Union. In the counsels of Congress there was manifested extreme antagonism of opinion and action between some representatives, who sought, by the abusive and unconstitutional employment of the legislative powers of the Government, to interfere in the condition of the inchoate States, and to impose their own social theories upon the latter; and other representatives, who repelled the interposition of the General Government in this respect, and maintained the self-constituting rights of the States.

In truth, the thing attempted was in form alone, action of the General Government, while in reality it was the endeavor, by abuse of legislative power, to force the ideas of internal policy, entertained in particular States, upon allied independent States. Once more the Constitution and the Union triumphed signally. The new Territories were organized without restrictions on the disputed point, and were thus left to judge in that particular for themselves; and the sense of constitutional faith proved vigorous enough in Congress, not only to accomplish this primary object, but also the incidental and hardly less important one of so amending the provisions of the statute for the extradition of fugitives from service, as to place that public duty under the safeguard of the General Government, and thus relieve it from obstacles raised up by the legislation of some of the States.

Vain declamation regarding the provisions of law for the extradition of fugitives from service, with occasional episodes of frantic effort to obstruct their execution by riot and murder, continued for a brief time to agitate certain localities. But the true principle of leaving each State and Territory to regulate its own laws of labor according to its own sense of right and expediency, had acquired fast hold of the public judgment to such a degree that, by common consent, it was observed in the organization of the Territory of Washington.

When, more recently, it became requisite to organize the Territories of Nebraska and Kansas, it was the natural and legitimate, if not the inevitable consequence of previous events and legislation, that the same great and sound principle, which had been applied to Utah and New Mexico, should be applied to them; that they should stand exempt from the restrictions proposed in the act relative to the State of Missouri.

These restrictions were, in the estimation of many thoughtful men, null from the beginning, unauthorized by the Constitution, contrary to the treaty stipulations for the cession of Louisiana, and inconsistent with the equality of the States.

They had been stripped of all moral authority by persistent efforts to procure their indirect repeal through contradictory enactments. They had been practically abrogated by the legislation attending the organization of Utah, New Mexico and Washington. If any vitality remained in them, it would have been taken away, in effect by the new territorial acts, in the form originally proposed to the Senate at the first session of the last Congress. It was manly and ingenious, as well as patriotic and just, to do this directly and plainly, and thus relieve the statute book of an act, which might be of possible future injury, but of no possible future benefit; and the measure of its repeal was the final consummation and complete recognition of the principle, that no portion of the United States shall undertake, through assumption of the powers of the General Government, to dictate the social institutions of any other portion.

The scope and effect of the language of repeal were not left in doubt. It was declared, in terms, to be "the true intent and meaning of this act not to legislate slavery into any Territory or State, nor to exclude it therefrom, but to leave the people thereof perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the Constitution of the United States."

The measure could not be withstood upon its merits alone. It was attacked with violence, on the false or delusive pretext that it constituted a breach of faith. Never was objection more utterly destitute of substantial justification. When, before, was it imagined by sensible men, that a regulative or declarative statute, whether enacted ten or forty years ago, is irrepealable—that an act of Congress is above the Constitution? If, indeed, there were in the facts any cause to impute bad faith, it would attach to those only, who have never ceased, from the time of the enactment of the restrictive provision to the present day, to denounce and to condemn it; who have constantly refused to complete it by needful supplementary legislation; who have spared no exertion to deprive it of moral force; who have themselves again and again attempted its repeal by the enactment of incompatible provisions; and who, by the inevitable reactionary effect of their own violence on the subject, awakened the country to perception of the true constitutional principle, of leaving the matter involved to the discretion of the people of the respective existing or incipient States.

It is not pretended that this principle, or any other, precludes the possibility of evils in practice, disturbed as political action is liable to be by human passions. No form of government is exempt from inconveniences; but in this case they are the result of the abuse, and not of the legitimate exercise, of the powers reserved or conferred in the organization of a territory. They are not to be charged to the great principle of popular sovereignty: on the contrary, they disappear before the intelligence and patriotism of the people, exerting through the ballot box their peaceful and silent but irresistible power.

If the friends of the Constitution are to have another struggle, its enemies could not present a more acceptable issue than that of a State, whose Constitution clearly embraces "a republican form of government," being excluded from the Union because its domestic institutions may not in all respects comport with ideas of what is wise and expedient entertained in some other State. Fresh from groundless imputations of breach of faith against others, men will commence the agitation of this new question with indubitable violation of an express compact between the independent sovereign powers of the United States and of the Republic of Texas as well as the older and equally solemn compacts which assure the equality of all the States.

But, deplorable as would be such a violation of compact in itself, and in all its direct consequences, that is the very least of all the evils involved. When sectional agitators shall have succeeded in forcing on this issue, can their pretensions fail to be met by counter pretentions? Will not different States be compelled respectively to meet extremes with extremes? And if either extreme carry its point, what is that so far forth but dissolution of the Union? If a new State, formed from the territory of the United States, be absolutely excluded from admission therein, that fact of itself constitutes a disruption of union between it and the other States. But the process of dissolution could not stop there. Would not a sectional decision, producing such result by a majority of votes, either Northern or Southern, of necessity drive out the oppressed and agrieved minority, and place in presence of each other two irreconcilably hostile confederations?

It is necessary to speak thus plainly of projects, the offspring of that sectional agitation now prevailing in some of the States, which are as impracticable as they are unconstitutional, and which, if persevered in, must and will end calamitously. It is either disunion and civil war, or it is mere angry idle, aimless disturbance of public peace and tranquility. Disunion for what? If the passionate rage of fanaticism and partisan spirit did not force the fact upon our attention it would be difficult to believe that any considerable portion of the people of this enlightened country could have so surrendered themselves to a fanatical devotion to the supposed interests of the relatively few Africans in the United States, as totally to abandon and disregard the interests of the twenty-five millions of Americans—to trample under foot the injunctions of moral and constitutional obligation—and to engage in plans of vindictive hostility against those who are associated with them in the enjoyment of the common heritage of our national institutions.

Nor is it hostility against their fellow citizens of one section of the Union alone. The interests, the honor, the duty, the peace, and the prosperity of the people of all sections are equally involved and imperiled in this question. And are patriotic men in any part of the Union prepared, on such an issue thus madly to invite all the consequences of the forfeiture of their constitutional engagements? It is impossible. The storm of frenzy and faction must inevitably dash itself in vain against the unshaken rock of the Constitution. I shall never doubt it. I know that the Union is stronger a thousand times than all the wild and chimerical schemes of social change which are generated, one after another, in the unstable minds of visionary sophists and interested agitators. I rely confidently on the patriotism of the people, on the dignity and self-respect of the States, on the wisdom of Congress, and above all, on the continued gracious favor of Almighty God, to maintain against all enemies, whether at home or abroad, the sanctity of the Constitution and the integrity of the Union.

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the trangression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The fourth is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the 'laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Bien-aimés frères, je désire, en commencant cette publication, vous adresser quelques paroles. Le Seigneur, dans sa bonté et sa miséricorde, a jugé convenable de restaurer au monde l'Evangile primitif, dans toute la simplicité, la beauté et la pureté qu'il avait autrefois, parmi les chrétiens des premiers temps, aux jours de Jésus et de ses Apôtres.

La lumière de la vérité a éclaté au milieu des ténèbres et de la corruption des hommes, en ce temps où le monde est déchiré par mille opinions contradictoires.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Si nous suivons attentivement l'action de Dieu sur le genre humain, nous trouverons que tous ces maux proviennent de ce que les nations et les peuples se sont éloignés de Dieu; et rien moins qu'un retour à lui ne peut arrêter la terrible tempête, calmer la mer furieuse, tranquilliser les passions capricieuses des hommes, et rendre au monde moral, religieux et politique, cet ordre qui règne dans la création physique de Dieu.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui règle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

C'est la religion que vous croyez et que vous enseignez, qui est destinée à restaurer l'homme et la terre; c'est elle qui ramènera les peuples à Dieu, qui les retirera du chaos moral, religieux et politique du monde, et les rassemblera en un peuple qui sera conduit et reconnu de Dieu; qui sera honoré devant les hommes et les nations; et qui aidera à établir et à développer le royaume de Dieu dans ces derniers jours.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaîtraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? On devrait-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours?

Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconque demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Evangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés?" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit?" Nous le faisons aussi. Crurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains par la foi en Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "l'espoir en la résurrection?" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.!" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.!" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions à son Eglise actuelle.

Nous demanderons ce qu'il y a d'inconséquent en tout cela? Lequel est le plus inconséquent, de croire et de pratiquer les Ecritures, ou de dire, nous les croyons et puis de les nier à notre organisation, à nos doctrines, à nos œuvres.

Mais des visions, des prophèties, des révélations n'ont-elles pas une tendance à conduire à l'enthousiasme et au fanatisme? Oui, les visions humaines et les délusions de Satan l'ont. Mais si le Seigneur eût pensé que ses visions et ses révélations fussent préjudiciables aux hommes, pourquoi les aurait-il données dans les anciens temps? Si elles doivent être préjudiciables de nos jours, certainement elles l'eussent été autrefois. L'enthousiasme, la folie et le fanatisme des hommes est une chose; autre chose est Dieu révélant sa volonté aux peuples pour leur organisation, leur stabilité, leur consolation, leur union, leur savoir, leur édification, et pour l'établissement de son royaume.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaître Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Les philosophes ont scruté l'homme, la terre, les œuvres de la création pour trouver un vrai système. Ils ont tous eu leur jour. Ils ont introduit beaucoup de bons principes, mais quant à l'amélioration du monde, là, ils ont fait défaut. Leurs systèmes, quelque bons que soient plusieurs d'entre eux, sont bien loin d'embrasser l'objet désiré: "Ils ont été pesés dans la balance, et trouvés trop légers."

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaître que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence, ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les excès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lasciveté, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votre lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

A Card to the Saints.

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "THE MORMON." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish, you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
The Greatest Blessing of the Age for the Cure of Diseases of Man or Beast requiring External Application.
"BRING hither the poor, the halt, the lame and the blind," if you would have them healed of their many infirmities. We boldly and fearlessly assert that the Mustang Liniment will positively cure Rheumatism. Let any who are afflicted with that most painful complaint try it thoroughly according to directions, and if they are not cured we will give them their money back. What more can we say? It will also cure the Piles. Thousands have tried it—and all were cured. Bruises, Sprains, Sores or Eruptions fade away as if touched by the magician's wand. Its application to burn or scald acts like "oil upon the troubled waters." The tempest of pain and agony is soon stifled, and the patient is hushed to quiet and peaceful slumbers. "There is balm for every wound," and that balm is the Mustang Liniment. Everybody that sells medicine keeps it for sale. "Hold your horses," and if they are crippled, galled or sprained, use the Mustang Liniment.
READ THE FOLLOWING CERTIFICATES.
THROUGH BY EXPRESS!!!
This is to certify that the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT has been used quite extensively in the stables of Adams & Co.'s Great Southern, Eastern and Western Expresses, for curing galls, chafes, scrofulas, sprains and bruises, and it has proved very effectual. Many of their men have also used it on themselves and their families, and they all speak of its healing and remedial qualities in the highest terms. One of our ostlers got kicked and badly cut and bruised on his knee; as usual, the Liniment was resorted to, and the soreness and lameness was soon removed, and it was perfectly well in three or four days. We have no hesitation in recommending it as a valuable preparation to be used externally on man or beast.
J. DUNNING,
Foreman of Adams & Co.'s Express Stable, N. Y.
We take pleasure in recommending the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT to all our friends and customers as the best article we have ever used for sores, sprains or galls in horses. We have used it extensively and always effectually. Some of our men have also used it for severe bruises and sores, as well as rheumatic pains, and they all say it acts like magic—we can only say that we have entirely abandoned the use of any other Liniment.

MR. WILLIAM JOHNSON, for the last five years a citizen of Augusta, and now the proprietor of the fine hotel in Savannah, called the Marshall House, has favored us with the following certificate:
The MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT has been used in my family, and on my farm, for a great variety of diseases requiring an external application, and has never failed to give immediate relief and effect a permanent cure. I have cured several cases of rheumatism that had resisted the skill of our best physicians. It has cured ringworms by a single application, chilblains in a few days, toothache, frost bites, cuts, sores and corns by a few applications; nervous headache cured entirely. In fact, I have used it for almost everything, and it has always cured. I consider it the best medicine I have ever used. WILLIAM JOHNSON.
Savannah, June 24th, 1852.
June, 25th, 1852.
I have used the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT in my stables upon my horses in cases of sprains, bruises, galls and sores of different kinds, incident to a large number of horses. I used it upon a horse that had been saddle galled for nearly a year. I had tried many remedies, and one in particular, that I had been in the habit of using for years, and had generally proved successful. Nothing appeared to give it any relief until I tried the Mustang Liniment, which cured it in a very short time. I consider it an invaluable remedy, and would not be without it. WM. H. HOLMES.
SAVANNAH, Geo., June 25, 1852.
We have also used the MUSTANG LINIMENT extensively in our stable, and we find it to be the best remedy we have ever used for sores or lameness of any kind.

The above are from two of the largest livery stables in the State of Georgia.
B. H. MEEKINS, 189 Walnut street, Cincinnati, was confined to his bed under the treatment of a physician some six weeks, with Neuralgia, of the whole of his right side, leg, arm and face; his sufferings were indescribable, and the only cessation from the most agonizing pain, was while under the influence of opium or morphine. His doctor finally advised him to try the MUSTANG LINIMENT; he did so, and in two days was able to go about his business perfectly cured.
This is to certify that I have used the MUSTANG LINIMENT recently in a very severe case of sprain. The right hip was so badly sprained and bruised that fears were entertained that it was out of joint. I obtained a bottle of Mustang Liniment and used it freely for four days, when the soreness and pain were all gone and the hip joint was well.
I have also used the Liniment for the Piles, with which I have been afflicted for many years. Its effects were wonderful. Free applications night and morning for a week have perfectly cured me. Thousands of persons are suffering with this painful disease, and you are at liberty to make this statement public, that all may learn what will cure them.
My brother also states that he has used the Mustang Liniment with the most perfect success in two cases of severe bruises, at our factory in Williamsburgh, and says he considers it invaluable about an establishment where a large number of men and horses are at work, and constantly liable to serious accidents EDWIN R. BARRON.

☞ While hundreds are rejoicing in the happy escape from smarting pains, occasioned by Burns, Bruises and Sprains, thousands of others will buy the Mustang Liniment and experience the same happy results.
☞ The popularity of the Mustang Liniment is a "fixed fact," therefore those suffering with Ulcers, Old Sores, Eruptions, and like complaints, need not be reminded of its superiority to give it a trial.
☞ The Ladies will always rejoice at the happy experience of curing eruptions, sore nipples, broken or caked breasts, piles and corns, after a thorough trial of the Mexican Mustang Liniment.
☞ The Mustang Liniment will give the most undoubted satisfaction to any one giving it a trial for stiff joints, stiff neck, or sore throat; it has proved itself efficacious in these complaints in many very stubborn cases.
☞ If you have any ugly, painful corns upon your feet, get a bottle of Mustang Liniment and apply it twice a day for eleven days, and the trouble will be gone.

Poetry.

My Own Fireside.

BY ALLARIC WATTS.

It is a mystic circle that surrounds
Comforts and virtues never known beyond its hallowed limit.—[Bozzaby.

Let others seek for empty joys,
At ball or concert, rout or play;
Whilst far from Fashion's idle noise,
Her gilded domes and trappings gay,
I while the wintry eve away,
'Twixt book and lute the hours divide;
And marvel how I e'er could stray
From thee—my own fireside!

My own fireside! Those simple words
Can bid the sweetest dreams arise,
Awaken feeling's tenderest cords,
And fill with tears of joy mine eyes.
What is there my wild heart can prize,
That doth not in thy sphere abide;
Haunt of my home-bred sympathies,
My own—my own fireside!

A gentle form is near me now;
A small white hand is clasped in mine;
I gaze upon her placid brow,
And ask what joys can equal mine?
A babe, whose beauties half divine,
In sleep his mother's eye doth hide;
Where may Love seek a fitter shrine
Than thou—my own fireside!

My refuge ever from the storm
Of this world's passion, strife and care;
Though thunder-clouds the skies deform,
Their fury cannot reach me there;
There all is cheerful, calm and fair:
Wrath, Envy, Malice, Strife, or Pride,
Hath never made its hated lair
By thee—my own fireside!

Shrine of my household deities!
Bright scene of home's unsullied joys;
To thee my burdened spirit flies
When fortune frowns, or care annoys!
Thine is the bliss that never cloys;
The smile whose truth has oft been tried;
What then are this world's tinsel toys
To thee—my own fireside!

Oh, may the yearnings, fond and sweet,
That bid my thoughts be all of thee,
Thus ever guide my wandering feet
To thy heart-soothing sanctuary!
Whate'er my future years may be,
Let joy or grief my fate betide,
Be still an Eden bright to me,
My own—my own fireside!

Interesting Discoveries in Guatemala.

Traces of Early Migrations from the North.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune, writing from Guatamala, furnishes it with copies of letters received by him from the Abbe de Bourbourg, a Catholic priest and learned antiquary, who is now in Central America. The Abbe has visited the ruins of Cakyn and Tzak Pokoma, two large cities, which he describes. The ruins are extensive, and, the Abbe remarks, if they "do not offer that aspect of civilization and magnificence which has been observed in those of Palenque and Uxmal, they nevertheless give, an account of their position, the solidity, force, and extent of their constructions, a high idea of the culture of those who made them, and can be compared in a certain degree to the power and resources of those of the great vassal barons of the crown of France in the middle ages." The Abbe has had excellent opportunities of examining the old manuscripts of the country; and in exploring the archives, has made some discoveries of great interest. We re-produce his own account of them:

"The first thing that fell into my hands was a Cakchiquel grammar, by Padre Flores, printed in Antigua, Guatemala, in 1753. It was presented to me by the provisor and dean of the Cathedral. I afterward got some others, and now I possess four copies. It contains a comparison with the Quiche and Zutohil. These three metropolitan languages, as they are called here, are but dialects of the same; the Quiche differs a little more than the Zutohil, but they may be called sister languages, like the Ionic, Attic and Laconic dialects of Greece. It was my first occupation to learn them, as I was convinced that I could never do anything good for my purpose without that knowledge, and I have been working at them a great deal since. Meantime I have discovered the original MS. of Ximenes, of which only a part is copied in Ordones. This MS. is composed of two distinct parts. The first contains in three large volumes a history of the Conquest, but especially refers to the establishment of the Dominican order in the Kingdom of Guatemala, together with a great many interesting details of geography and natural history.

"The second part contains, first, a grammar, most complete and rather mixed: it is of the three metropolitan languages, compared in three columns one with another—then follows a catechism and confessionario in the same language and Spanish, and finally the old history of Quiche, in Spanish and Quiche. Here is the title of this very important and interesting book: "Compieazan las historias del origen de los Indios de esta provincia de Guatemala, traducido de la lingua. Quiche, en la Castillana para mas comodidad de los Ministros de el Santo Evangelico, por el Rev. Padre Fraile Francisco Ximenes, cura doctrina por el real patronato del pueblo de Santo Thomas, Chuila;" which in English reads: Summary of the histories of the origin of the Indians of this Vice-Royalty of Guatemala, translated from the Quiche language to Spanish, for the greater convenience of the ministers of the Church, by the Rev. Father Friar Francisco Ximenes, cure of the parish of Saint Thomas, in Chuila.

"This begins with the creation of the world as given by Ordones, who took it here; but there are pretty large discrepancies, and the latter has not always been very favorable to the original. It is the same history of the semi-gods, Hunappa and Xcalanque, but having the original narrative. I found out that with the exception of a few marvellous tales, the whole is a historical episode of the most interesting character. The scene is generally in the Quiche and Vera Paz—most of the places and localities I have been already able to discover, and I must add that I have taken a copy of the whole, in Quiche and Spanish, with my own hand. After the semi-fabulous part of the book comes the history of the passage of the Indians to these parts of America. They came from the east—not from the south-east, but from the north-east. I speak only of tribes of Quiche-Cakchiquel and Zutohil, &c., for long before them these countries were peopled and civilized. They came from the north-east—certainly passed through the United States, and, as they say themselves, they crossed the sea in darkness,' mist, cold, and snow. I suppose they must have come from Denmark and Norway. They came in small numbers, and lost their white blood by their mixtures with the Indians whom they found—whether in the United States or these regions, certainly there must have been a Tula in our North European countries.

"But what is more convincing of this migration or passage, I find the same result by a comparison of the languages. I cannot speak of the structure of them, but what I have observed is, that the fundamental forms and words of the languages of these regions (except the Mexican) are intimately connected with the Maya or Trendal, and that all the words that are neither Mexican nor Maya belong to our languages of Northern Europe, viz: English, Saxon, Danish, Norwegian, Swedish, Flemish and German; some even appear to belong to the French and Persian, and altogether they are really very numerous and astounding. It is perfectly plain that the invading tribes adopted the language of the vanquished, who were much more numerous than themselves, and that some words only of their own language remained—hence the Quiche, Cakchiquet, Zutohil, &c.

"Now, I leave your countrymen to make all the suppositions they wish upon these strange coincidences. Who knows but that mounds and fortifications found in Western New York, Ohio, Tennessee, Arkansas, &c., were not made by the same people, and by the colony of Northmen who were known to exist in Massachusetts, and disappeared after the tenth century?

"Beside the narrative of the passage of the Quiche, the manuscript gives the establishment of the Quiche empire, and a sketch of its history to the conquest, far different from Fuentes, although some names are the same. Here I end with Ximenes.

"Besides the grammar of Ximenes, I have been presented with some others—Quiche, Cakchiquel, Zutohil, Chanabal, Pocomain, &c.—all manuscripts; and I possess five dictionaries of these languages, also manuscripts more or less complete, besides some other old papers on Guatemala and Vera Paz. I have also come into possession of a manuscript history of Guatemala, in Spanish, which is very good, with large details on the astronomy and religion of these people; also of a manuscript history of San Salvador: also another of Vera Paz, another of the rebellion of the Tendals, &c.

"The Archbishop of Guatemala has presented me with a magnificent copy of the original Tonalamath or calendary of the Indians of Quiche as still used in secret by the Indians of Sania Catalina and Txtahuacan.

"But the most precious of my collection at present is one manuscript in the Cackchiquel language, written about three hundred years ago by one of the princes of Solola. The remains of this city exist near the lake of Atitlan. It was never translated before, but I am now finishing a translation into French and Spanish. It is full of details on the first passage of the Indians to these countries, of their early sufferings by sea and land, of the prodigies performed by their chiefs, of the four Tulas which existed—one in the East in darkness, one in the West, (probably that of Mexico) one God knows where, and the last in Xibilbay—that is to say in hell, says our reverend father Ximenes, but I have great reason to believe it was in this very country, about the Vera Paz, Yucatan, or on the river Uzumacinta.

"After this the author of the manuscript goes on in the history, of his country, of the several tribes of his own blood, of the establishment and foundation of the Quiches, the Cakchiquel, Zutohil, Zokil, Rapanal, etc., he arrives at the time of the Conquest. He saw Alvarado enter the capital Ximeche, now Teepan, Guatemala. He was but a boy then, but he remembers how frightful were the Spaniards—how much all the Indian princes and people were astonished at the sight of these strangers. He tells of all the cruelties of Alvarado; of all the princes and kings that were hanged or burned by his order—all things of which Fuentes never spoke. Very, very interesting is the whole of that manuscript, which contains the most complete details of the an cient kingdoms of Guatemala. The author says at the end that, seeing the destruction of their books and annals, and that every record was going to ruin, he assembled in his old age the few princes that remained of his own family and of the neighboring countries, and from their books and memory he collected what he wrote in Spanish letter to be preserved by his sons. After perusing the whole, I have concluded to give it this title in my French translation; "Memorial de Teepan Attitlan escrit en lanque Cakshiquel par Don Francisco Tiaz—Gebuta Quele," Teepan, Atitlan, is another name for Solola, and Francisco Tiaz (Diaz) is the Spanish name of Gebuta Quele, who saw the entrance of Alvarado into Tximeche.

"I was appointed in May last cure of Rabinal by the most reverend Archbishop, who expressly did so in order to favor my studies in the languages and traditions of these countries. My parish extends very far in the Vera Paz, peopled mostly by a set of very quiet Indians entirely the reverse of the warriors of old. I begin to talk with them, and this serves very much my purpose. Very few understand Spanish.

"There is no phsician here, and some six weeks ago I gave to one of them a remedy that cured him of a pretty severe illness. From gratitude he came afterward to me and told me that he was the lineal descendent of the kings of Tzak Pokoma. That by the order of his fathers he had learned by memory the whole of one of their bayles or dramatic dances in which he recited one of the principal parts in the time that they still danced and played it. Knowing that I had vainly asked for that bayle from the other Indians, he proposed to me that I should write it out under his dictation. I accepted in spite of the difficulty, for it was to be recited in the Quiche dialect of Rabinal, but improbus labor omnia vincit. After twelve days of the most arduous dictation that I ever did, even when I was at school, I got the whole of the bayle. With the aid of my grammar and dictionary I corrected the orthography, and now I can boast of possessing the only original American drama in the world. It is a historical drama in which is introduced their heroes and princes, and is full of interesting details of their early history. The scene is laid in the city of Tzak Pokoma. The great ruins of this city lie within a few miles of here. In dramatical effect, scenes, &c., this will compare favorably with the Gorman dramas of the middle ages.

Abolitionism and Disunion Synonomous.

We extract the two following paragraphs from a leading article in the Anti-Slavery Standard, of Dec. 8th, 1854. It openly and plainly defines the position, of the Abolitionists, as being disunionists, and admits that their object cannot be obtained short of a dissolution of the present Union. We admire the frankness with which the party thus acknowledges the facts in the case; but is the dissolution feature a new one, or is it but lately that they have grown honest or brave enough to acknowledge it? We recollect a few years ago to have told several of that party, that the object they advocated could only be obtained by a dissolution of the Union, and that all of their effort and influence was to that effect. Such was invariably denied at that time, and that too with vehemence and indignation. The present, however, indicates that "a change has come o'er the spirit of their dream" as follows—

"We are sometimes asked what we Disunionists expect to do. We will answer we have always expected to do just what we have done. We have made it plain to all Slaveholders and to all Non-Slaveholders, who are not eager to shut their eyes to the fact, that Slavery and the Union are one and indivisible. If earnest disclaimers and loud asseverations could have saved the Republican party from the ignominy of being Disunionists, they would have escaped scot-free. But the Anti-Slavery and Pro-Slavery men knew better than they, sincere as many of them unquestionably were, and would accept no words to offset actions. They knew instinctively that whatever word is uttered in earnest against Slavery is a counterspell against the charm by which it holds its life; that every blow aimed at the remotest extremity of the Body Politic of Slavery strikes straight at the common heart of the Nation, which sends the life-blood to feed the polypus that is consuming it as well as the organisms of health and strength. Instinct is a great matter, and it has told the friends of Slavery the truth. The Union has now become another word for Slavery, and Disunion and Anti-Slavery are perfectly synonymous terms in the mouths of the pro-slavery world. When men vapour about the Union and the Constitution, and pledge themselves to maintain them intact, everybody, that is not a fool, knows that it is an engagement to maintain those clauses and compromises which make the North the bond-maid of the South. Now, this is no small thing that we have done. We have made it clear that there is no such thing as serving two masters—that Christ and Belial are natural and eternal antagonisms—and that the followers of Belial, at least, understand perfectly well that whoever gathered not with them scattereth abroad. Politicians who are at all infected with Anti-Slavery cannot avoid the brand of Disunionism, let them resist ever so much, and they will do well to consider whether there is any other strong ground for them to take up, if they really wish their blows should tell.

* * * * * *

"As to what the Disunion Abolitionists mean to do, it is precisely what they have been doing, the results of which they see on all sides and rejoice. They will go on preparing the way of the next party that is to take the field against Slavery, as they have prepared that of all that have gone before. We shall continue to act on the mind, heart and conscience of the people, showing them the horrors of Slavery and the guilty part they take in maintaining them, and pointing out the only way of escape. We shall demonstrate to all willing to be taught that the whole frame of government is so infected with Slavery, that Slavery is so interwoven with the frame of our National Institutions, that they must stand or fall together. We shall prove, from history and from philosophy and religion, that the evil principle must prevail against the good as long as the attempt is made to unite them for a common benefit—that there is no deliverance for the Slave, and no safety or self-respect for ourselves, as long as we consent to make a part in this Conspiracy against God and Man. We shall show how safe, how easy, how blessed to bond and free will be this outward Revolution, as soon as the minds of the people are persuaded and their hearts converted—before which time of preparation, it cannot be fulfilled. And in due process of time the leaven of the Abolitionists, which has so often burst out in sudden and transient fermentations, will have leavened the lump sufficiently for the ends of health and strength. Then a true Republican party will arise, which will refuse to have alliance with Despotism, which will demand the reconstruction of the Government, so as to save themselves from the guilt of maintaining Slavery, and the Slaves from the crushing weight of the united nation. When such a party is ready to take the field, the Disunionists will not be found wanting to help put the finishing hand to their work."

Preservation of Potatoes for Seed.

Mr. J. N. Chandler, a correspondent of the Patent Office, speaking of the preservation of potatoes for seed, says the potatoe, when first obtained from its native mountain, was a small watery and bitter esculent, but by cultivation it has been brought into so high and refined a state that most of the countries of the civilized globe, look at it as one of the most important articles of food. In answering the question by what means has it been made a chief article of food, he says, it is by violating the laws of nature.

Every one who has ever noticed the difference between the flavor of a potatoe in the Fall when first dug, and one in Spring which has been kept in a large dry cellar, has observed that the flavor becomes impaired—much more so than those which are buried in holes in the earth, where they retain all their freshness and vitality. It has always been observed that farmers that have small and convenient cellars keep their potatoes in better condition than those who keep them in large cool ones. Hence, by storing them in the latter, and letting them wilt before planting they become weakened in their nature, and are subject to degeneracy, and finally to disease.

In order to obtain good potatoes for seed, make choice of a small spot of arable land on which water will not stand—an eastern slope and new ground are the best—ploughed early in the Spring, and furrowed four or five inches deep, two and a half feet apart. Select middle sized potatoes which have touched the ground during the winter previous, but do not cut them. Drop one every eight inches along the furrows, covering them with earth. Then put on them a top dressing of forest leaves or straw two inches deep. As soon as the tops of the plants are two inches high, pass between them with a shovel-plow, follow with a hoe, destroying the weeds, and leveling the ground; do not hill. This is all you have to do until Fall. When the ground begins to freeze, cover with straw, chaff or forest leaves six inches deep, to keep them from frost. Your potatoes will now have a chance to ripen and rest during the Winter. In this way you will have the greatest yield and best quality. Continuing this course from year to year, and the rot will not only disappear, but your crop will increase from 25 to 100 per cent. The third year you may increase your field crop by plowing in fine manure. You now have nature's course.

Wind Flouring Mills for the Prairies.

The Peoria Transcript is informed that the Rochester (N. Y.) Mill-Erecting Company intend to place in operation fifty mills on the Western Prairies during the year 1856, the motive power of which is to be wind alone. The Transcript adds:

"We hear a company is to be organized in Peoria for the immediate establishment of one of these wind-mills. We understand that the cost of a mill in operation, with two run of four-feet stones is only $5,000. That includes cost of building, machinery, and every requisite, including the right to use the patent. One on this plan is now in operation at Rochester, New York, and with two run of stones, thirty bushels of grain are ground in an hour. The running of the mill by wind power is ten months in the year, about the average time of steam power, deducting repairs, &c., and more time than most of the water mills. It is represented to be just what is wanted on the prairies."

A Beautiful Extract.

The past is secure. It is unalterable. The seal of eternity is upon it. The wisdom which it has displayed cannot be obscured; neither can it be debased by human folly or infirmity. The future is that which may well awaken the most earnest solicitude, both for the virtue and permanence of our republic. The fate of other republics—their rise, their progress, their decline and their fall, are written but too legibly upon the pages of history, if indeed they were not continually before us in the startling fragments of their ruins. They have perished and perished by their own hands. Prosperity enervated them, corruption debased them, and a venal populace consummated their destruction. They have sometimes been cheated out of their liberties by servile demagogues; sometimes betrayed into a surrender of them by false patriots. They have disregarded the warning voice of their best statesmen, and have persecuted and driven from office their best friends. They have reverenced power more in its high abuses and summary movements, than in its calm and constitutional energy. They have surrendered to faction what belonged to the country. Patronage and party, the triumph of a leader, and the discontents of a day, have outweighed all solid principles and institutions of government.

Such are the melancholy lessons of the past history of the republics, down to our own. Let the history of the Grecian and Italian States warn us of our danger. Let the American youth never forget that they possess a noble inheritance, bought by the toils and sufferings and blood of their ancestors, and capable, if wisely improved and faithfully guarded, of all the substantial blessings of life, the peaceful enjoyment of liberty, property, religion and independence. The structure has been erected by architects of consummate skill and fidelity; its arrangements are full of wisdom and order; its foundations solid and its defences are impregnable from without. It has been reared for immortality, if the work of man may justly aspire to such a title. It may, nevertheless, perish in an hour by the folly or corruption or negligence of its only keepers, the People.—Republicans are created by the virtue, public spirit and intelligence of the citizens. They fall when the wise are banished from the public councils, because they dare to be honest, and the profligates are rewarded because they flatter the people in order to betray them.

Fighting Indians with Bloodhounds.

Much has been said and written in condemnation of the conduct of the white man towards the Indian, and not, we must admit in the general, without a semblance of great truth: but, as among the most civilized, there are times and circumstances recurring when the exercise of an unlawful authority would seem to be justifiable. That the red men have been a most persecuted race cannot be gainsayed, yet, when life and property are constantly jeopardized by a settlement among them, the administration of dire punishment, as a means to secure self-preservation, at once ceases to be an act of unmerited persecution. In illustration of our point we subjoin an account of a skirmish between a notorious desperado of Texas, named Sam Jones, and a party of Lipan Indians, numbering fifteen, furnished by a correspondent of the N. O. Picayune. Jones was in his field, when they made their appearance, but managed to escape, with an old German, into his cabin. The Indians soon surrounded the house. The old man had but little ammunition, and was, of course, anxious that every shot should tell. When the Indians would attempt to break in the slight door he would shoot, and while he was loading, the German would keep them at bay, by pointing an unloaded gun at them through the crevices of the house. They managed in this way till the outside of the house was bristling with arrows, aimed at them between the logs, and the old man's powder had given out. At this moment the Indians retreated a short distance to hold a council. The besieged availed themselves of the chance to get the assistance of a dozen bloodhounds that were confined in an outbuilding. Under cover of the two unloaded guns, Mrs. Jones liberated the dogs. Here was a reinforcement the red scamps had not calculated upon, and, in the twinkling of an eye five of the Indians were hors du combat. The balance came to the rescue, and soon shot all of the remainder of their arrows into the dogs, and beat a retreat, bearing their wounded, beating off the dogs with their bows, their buckskins in tatters, and blood streaming from every one of them. After the fight, the field exhibited one dead Indian, three dead dogs, sundry pieces of buckskin, mingled with clotted masses of Indian flesh, hundreds of arrows and pieces of bows.—[Ex.

General Walker's Relations with the Pope.

We lay before our readers the subjoined correspondence which exhibits at once the position occupied by the high functionaries of the church in matters pertaining to State affairs, and Gen. Walker's very pious reply to the Bishop.

Holy Vicarship of the Bishopric of Leon, Leon Nov. 26, 1855.

To General William Walker:—

My Dear Sir—It has been many days since I had the desire of complying with the duty that harmony and friendship dictates me, which two things link the good relations that should always exist between authorities, and more so between friends; in consequence I now congratulate your Excellency for the victory obtained in favor of liberal principles, which are those that will illustrate our country and lead her to the emporium of her welfare. Such is my persuasion on account of your character and your philanthropic sentiments. I congratulate my country, for she shall now come out of the ruins in which she has been sunk for more than thirty years, and don't doubt that I shall very soon see the developement of civilization in commerce and other arts. May Divine Providence spare you; and meanwhile, please accept the considerations of esteem, and adhesion, with which I subscribe myself, your attentive friend and chaplain,

Jose H. Heldosie.

Granada, Nov. 29, 1855.

To the Capitular of the See of Nicaragua:

Reverend Sir—I had the pleasure and honor of receiving your note of the 26th inst, today. It is very acceptable for me to hear that the authority of the church will be used in favor of the existing government. Without the aid of religious sentiments and religious teachers there can be no good government, for the fear of God is the foundation of all social and political organizations. The opinions for which I have contended in Nicaragua are, I firmly believe, legitimate deductions from the doctrines of the immaculate Redeemer. In God I put my trust for the success of the cause in which I am embarked, and for the maintenance of the principles I advocate. Without his aid all human efforts are unavailing; but with his Divine assistance a few may triumph over a legion. Asking your prayers in behalf of all enterprises I may undertake, consonant with the precepts of the holy church, I remain humbly, your obedient servant, [El Nicaraguense, Dec. 1. Wm. Walker.

The piety of Mr. Walker reminds us of what we once heard a Cape Codman say, who had had seven years experience on board the U. S. Frigate Constitution, that on Sabbath morning the rough commanding tone of the Boatswain to the marines, was heard as follows:—"Away! Aft to prayers! you d—n'd suns of b—s!"

If they Don't Run, Kiss Em.—At Bolougne, during the reception of her Majesty Queen Victoria, a number of English ladies, in their anxiety to see everything, pressed with such force against the soldiers who were keeping the line, that the latter were, in some instances, obliged to give way, and generally were, to use the expression of our policemen, "impeded in the execution of their duty." The officer in command, seeing the state of affairs shouted out:

"One roll of the drum, then, if they don't keep back, kiss them all."

At the first sound of the parchment, the English ladies took to flight. "If they had been French," says a Parisian journalist, "they would have remained to a woman."

The Collins Steamers—Change of Day of Departure.—The sailing days of the steamers of this favorite line from New York have been changed from Wednesdays to Saturdays, henceforth they will leave this city every other Saturday. Returning they will leave Liverpool on Wednesdays instead of Saturdays, commencing on the 23d of January.

Is Mormonism a Religious Paradox?

ARTICLE II.

CONTINUED.

HAVING, in the foregoing, clearly demonstrated that faith, repentance and the baptism of adults, "for the remission of sins," were doctrines introduced by John the Baptist, taught also by Jesus and his disciples, we now wish to investigate its operations, and find out what is meant by the gift of the Holy Ghost. It is the more important that we should examine this thoroughly, for if this gift had been in the Church, there would not have been so much difficulty about doctrines that there has been.

THE gift of the Holy Ghost, although primarily imparted by the immediate outpouring of the Spirit of the Lord, upon the disciples assembled in an upper room in Jerusalem, according to promise; yet, when once given, the ordinary way of conferring that gift was by the imposition, or laying on of hands. Hence, when the Samaritans received the word of God, and were baptized, the Apostles that were at Jerusalem sent down Peter and John unto them, "who laid their hands upon them, and they received the Holy Ghost." Acts viii. And hence also Paul, after baptizing certain disciples, laid his hands upon them, and "the Holy Ghost came upon them, and they spake with tongues and prophesied." Acts xix. The laying on of hands is indeed spoken of, by Paul, as one of the first principles of the doctrine of Christ; and when exhorting the Hebrews to perseverance, he tells them to leave the first principles of the doctrine of Christ, and to "go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works; and of faith toward God; of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands." Heb. vi.

Here, then, is a plain, distinct thing, that if it had not been perverted, would certainly have needed no comment. The Roman Catholics, and the Church of England Churches do, now, lay on hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost; hence their bishops attend to what is called the confirmation of children, of a certain age; but as no signs follow the believer, as Jesus promised they should, and as we have noticed they did anciently, among primitive Christians, there must be some cause for this delinquency; both of the above named churches sprinkle little infants and call it baptism, whereas it is not the baptism of the Bible, which, as we have noticed, was administered to those who believed and repented, and was "for the remission of sins;" and as infants can neither believe nor repent, and have no sins to remit, for Jesus says, "of such is the kingdom of Heaven;" their sprinkling infants is not the doctrine of Christ and his Apostles; and consequently the blessings of the Gospel cannot follow their administration; for the Scriptures say, "He that transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God." Jesus did not say, "These signs shall follow the preaching of another Gospel; nor the sprinkling of infants;" but that "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved . . . . and these signs shall follow those that believe." It is the mutilation of the Gospel that has created all the difficulty; one lops off one branch, and another, another branch; each one follows his own way; some sprinkle little infants, others baptize by pouring, and others again by immersion; some do it for the remission of sins, others as a form, after what they call conversion; and others to satisfy their conscience. The Campbellites, a body of late reformers, profess a strict adherence to Scripture, and baptize for the remission of sins; but recognize no authority in the administrator, and do not believe the Scriptures that tell you to lay on hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. It is not our present purpose, however, to investigate the present systems; but to find out the ancient one, and if we are induced at all to notice others, it is for the purpose of exhibiting the contrast between truth and error; and to more clearly exhibit the principles we wish to lay before our readers. We again refer to the question, what is meant by the gift of the Holy Ghost? And here we must be permitted a little indulgence, by saying, it is not that thing that people think they get when they say they are converted. We would speak here with candor, and say that we believe many people to be very sincere who profess conversion, and think that they then possess the gift of the Holy Ghost; but here we beg most respectfully to state that neither sincerity nor insincerity alters principle. We cannot but believe that the Hindoos, the Chinese, the Mahommedans, the Jews, and other professors, are equally as sincere as us; they prove it by their works; but they nevertheless have not the Gospel; and the question naturally arises, if we have departed from the original simplicity of the Gospel, and introduced other doctrines, ordinances and principles, will the calling of our perversions, or abortions, by the name of Gospel, make them, en verity, the Gospel? The Gospel formerly was not simply a name or theory; but a principle of power and revelation. It brought life and immortality to light; and the gift of the Holy Ghost was a medium of communication between God and man, and was visibly recognized by its outward manifestations. Hence, when the Apostles laid on hands, the parties "spake with tongues and prophesied." "To one was given a tongue; to another a prophecy; to another a vision," &c. "The spirit dividing to each man severally as he will." It was different entirely in its manifestations to the thing which men, now, call the gift of the Holy Ghost. But, say some, when we are converted, when we feel happy, when we rejoice in a consciousness of right and an enjoyment of the Spirit of the Lord, is not that the gift of the Holy Ghost? No. All honest men have an approving conscience, who do right, whether belonging to a Church or not; but a devout honest man, who fears God and is wishful to keep his commandments, may perhaps have a greater abundance of this spirit; but this is not the gift of the Holy Ghost. When Philip went down to Samaria and preached the Gospel unto them, they believed and were baptized; "And there was great joy in the city." Say some, that joy was the fruits of the Holy Ghost. No. What then? a good spirit flowing from obedience to some of the ordinances of the Gospel, "For when the Apostles that were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God they sent down Peter and John, "who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost, for as yet he was fallen upon none of them; only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus; then laid their their hands on them and they received the Holy Ghost." Where is the use, then, in the face of such plain testimony, to try to make men believe that what sectarians profess is the gift of the Holy Ghost? Why, the very first operation of the gift of the Holy Ghost was "to lead into all truth; to bring things past to our remembrance, and show things to come." In possession of this, there could not be so many conflicting opinions; for it would "lead into all truth." In possession of this, men would not differ about the past; for "it shall bring things past to your remembrance." In possession of this, men would not have so many strange fantasies concerning the future; for "it shall show you things to come." It is emphatically a spirit of prophecy and revelation. Hence Paul, Peter, John, James, Jude, and all who testified of Jesus, were prophets. "for the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy," and wherever the gospel of Jesus exists there also exists this principle. The spirit, or Holy Ghost, is one of the witnesses that bears record in heaven, and also one of the witnesses upon the earth; and forms the medium of communication between the heavens and the earth. It is a comforter, and gives peace and joy; it imparts intelligence; leads into truth; opens the visions of eternity; gives tongues, visions, healings, miracles, and prophecy; reveals the past, present, future; enlightens, blesses, edifies; and is, in short, the manifestation of the goodness and power of God to man. John, in writing to a church in possession of this gift—one that had made some advancement in the blessings of the gospel—says, "But the annointing that you have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you; but as the same annointing teacheth you of all things." This is what Jesus promised to his disciples; this is what he said should follow the preaching and believing his gospel in all the world; this is what the apostles received on the day of Pentecost; this is what they, on that occasion, promised to those who repented and were baptized, and said it extended to all whom "the Lord our God shall call." This, as we have seen, was an ordinance that they administered in and associated with the gospel; this is a thing that the people received; this is a part of the primitive gospel; this is Mormonism—a paradox to the world—but nevertheless true.

The above is simply a brief outline of the gift of the Holy Ghost; of its operations and mode of administration. To enter into the details would be going beyond our prescribed limits in these articles.

THE RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD and eternal judgment are doctrines the Mormons believe in. They believe, however, in several resurrections. They believe that Jesus rose from the dead and ascended into heaven; they also believe that many of the saints who had lived before rose about that time, according to the Scriptures. They believe that when Jesus comes again there will be another resurrection; called, in Scripture, the "first resurrection." "That the dead in Christ shall rise first, and reign with Christ a thousand years; but that the rest of the dead live not again until the thousand years are expired."—Rev. It is in the first resurrection that the Mormons desire a part, and which they are looking and living for; then, after the thousand years, there is to be another resurrection; this we cannot make plainer than the following Scripture makes it; we believe just what it says: "And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works; and the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them; they were judged, every man, according to their works."—Rev. xx, 12, 13. It will be seen by this that in this last resurrection every man that has ever lived upon the earth, or that is in the sea or hell, who has not previously been resurrected, will then come forth; thus fulfilling the words of the Apostle Paul: "As in Adam all died; so in Christ shall all be made alive; but every man in his own order; Christ the first fruits; afterwards those that are Christ's at his coming; then cometh the end." This leads us to the ETERNAL JUDGMENT.—It is often asked of us, How do you believe that men will be judged? We answer just as the Scriptures say. A celebrated minister in England once asked us, Do you believe in eternal judgment? Yes, sir—we believe "that the wicked will be turned into hell, with all nations that forget God." But do you believe they will stay there worlds without end, and never come out? No, sir. Astonishing! Why, sir, I am a believer in the Bible. But does not the Bible say that "they shall go away into everlasting punishment?" Yes, sir. And does not the Bible also say that "the wicked shall be turned into hell?" Yes, sir; but it also says they shall come out, for "death and hell shall deliver up the dead that are in them." What do you make of the everlasting punishment? Just what the Scriptures make of it. It is God's punishment, based upon eternal, immutable principles; an eternal mode of punishment, or an eternal prison to which delinquents are sent, and remain according to the turpitude of their crimes, or their degrees of guilt; hence we have State prisons that may be called eternal prisons, but in which the prisoners stay according to their crimes, some two, some five, some fifteen, some twenty years, and some their life long. It would be a pity if the Lord were not as just as man. Some divines would have him more cruel and relentless; but he has said that "every one shall be judged according to the deeds done in the body." Hence the Antediluvians, who were destroyed in Noah's day, and sent to prison, were visited by Jesus, after his death. The Apostle Peter informs us that Jesus was "put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the spirit, by which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison, which sometime were disobedient when once the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah." Couple this passage with what Jesus came to do, viz: "to open the prison doors to them that are bound," and we have the result of his preaching and the deliverance from prison of those confined from the days of Noah. The Prophet Isaiah says that certain kings of the earth and the hosts of the high ones that are on high "Shall be gathered together, as prisoners are gathered in the pit; and shall be shut up in the prison; and after many days they shall be visited." Isaiah xxiv. It is certainly not a desirable place for the kings of the Earth; but there is deliverance even for them; for after many days they shall be visited. Associate with this the remarks of John the revelator, and the matter is very plain, "The sea gave up the dead that were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them, and they were judged every man according to their works." Thus we see that whatever power death and hell may have had, it is now broken, and they both deliver up their dead. It may be pleasing to some to talk about fire and brimstone to pourtray sinners writhing among dragons, and snakes, and scorpions, and flames; roasting on gridirons, and tossed by devils on pitchforks; and to sing

"Infinite years in torments must I spend,
And never, never, never, have an end!"

But to us it is cruel, unjust, untrue, at variance with Scripture, revolting to every noble and generous feeling of the human mind; a libel on Deity, and contrary to his revealed will and law. We should say from such doctrines, thoughts, and feelings, "Good Lord deliver us." And if ever we should be so unfortunate as to be under transgression, we should feel like David, "Let us fall into the hands of the living God;" but deliver us from such judgments as the above.

We have now traced out several of the most prominent doctrines, or first principles of the gospel, which we call Mormonism, we consider them Scriptural and incontrovertible, and are at the defiance of the religious world to prove them false; the Bible being the standard; we have demonstrated that faith, repentance, baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; the laying on of hands, for the Gift of the Holy Ghost, the resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment, were doctrines and ordinances taught and administered by the Apostles, and believed in, by the primitive saints; that this was then the gospel, and that as eternal truth does not change, the same must be the gospel in our day. We shall now inquire who, and what sort of men administered in the ancient Gospel?

TO BE CONTINUED.

Longevity of the Jews

An eminent M. D., at Frankfort-on-the-Main, has published a highly interesting work on the duration of life and cause of death, etc., in which he says:

"The average duration of life of the population is, thirty-seven years and three months—that of the Christian population, taken separately, thirty-five years and eleven months, while the average duration of life of the Jewish population of Frankfort rises as high as forty-eight years and nine months. The difference is so remarkable and so surprising, even if viewed independent of all other considerations, that it is well worth while to inquire into the cause whence it arises."

THE Woonsocket Patriot states that Mr. Jos. Mowry of Burrillville, has a turkey which has reared eighteen young ones this season, and laid one hundred and twenty-two eggs.

The Cherokees and the Mormons.

NOT long since we noticed that several companies of Mormon emigrants, under the leadership of chiefs, had passed through this State on their way to the Cherokee nation, there to erect the baneful system of polygamy and its attendant abominations, with which Utah is already disgraced. We are glad to learn by advices from the Southwest, that the brethren did not succeed in their mission. The Indians drove them out of the nation, and forbid the establishment of the beastly altar of Mormonism among them. All honor to the Cherokees, say we, for their conduct.—[St. Louis News, Dec. 29.

The above statement is on a par with many other sage sayings of some of our cotemporaries, and if that is the only "News" we can get of the Mormons and Cherokees, our information would be quite as reliable from the man in the moon, as from the St. Louis News.

In the first place, no Mormon emigration ever went through the State of Missouri to the Cherokee nation, neither did any Mormon emigration ever contemplate settling there. Elder Henry Miller, with one or two associates, went there a few months ago, for the purpose of preaching the gospel to the Cherokees, that he is driven away, we very much doubt, there were at least no symptoms of it in the last communication we saw from him, some three or four weeks ago.

Concerning the baneful system of polygamy that the virtuous and sage editor of the News is afraid of being erected among the Indians, we would advise him to study their history before he writes another article on this subject. In the meanwhile, for his special benefit, we would inform him, that the "baneful system of polygamy" has been in existence among the Indians for generations, and consequently cannot be introduced. They are polygamists; where they have become corrupted, lascivious and degraded, it is monogamists who have done it.

Railways in Iowa.

WE have received an invitation to attend the celebration at Iowa City, of the opening of the Mississippi and Missouri Railway to the capital of Iowa. This unites Iowa to New York City, by way of Chicago, and is half the distance to the terminus on the Pacific of the National Trunk Railway by the Northern route. The celebration, to-day, will be both important and interesting.—[New York Herald.

We are glad to find that the above mentioned Railroad is so far completed, and that while many of our public functionaries are wrangling about local interests, and neglecting the great highway to the Pacific, that private enterprise is pushing the rail and the iron horse into the far far west. Already they have crossed the Father of waters, and penetrated to the Capitol of our extreme western state, Iowa; and from the steady enterprise and energy already displayed, by this company, we may soon anticipate that the iron-sinewed charger will be puffing and blowing, snorting and rollicking on the banks of the upper Missouri in its onward course to the Rocky Mountains; such we are informed, is the design by those most competent to know. Success, we say, to the enterprise; a little more energy on their part, and the initiatory of the Pacific Railroad will be taken. A Railroad track laid down to the Missouri River, will be found to be a more practical matter-of-fact argument, and will force itself with more potency upon the minds of intelligent men, than all the nice spun theories in existence, however pretty they may appear on paper. Let this railroad progress, and then, the Missouri Pacific Railroad form a junction some distance up the Platte, and the victory is won. They will form the two main leading arteries of the Great Trunk to the Pacific, and besides being a more central position and a direct line, they will compass a richer and greater extent of country than any other contemplated route.

A Noise in the West.

IT is some time since we have read, in so short a space, so much wheezing, shouting, snorting, thundering, sounding of gongs, hallooing and rejoicing, as is contained in the two following extracts. The Mirror cries "Give us joy, Mr. Bugle, sound your trumpet—the iron horse, the cars—the, cars, have come," and he dances, and frolics, and jumps, and bellows, until the bugle catches the sound, and then such vociferation, such antics, such notes, such jollification, even in anticipation, never was perpetrated in editordom. We will join in the chorus, and sing Hurrah for Council Bluffs!—then three cheers, loud and long, for the next stopping place—Salt Lake City:

Cars Arrived.

SOUND the Hong-gong! pass the news along! Mr. Reporter at the State Capital; and you, Mr. Bugle, at Council Bluffs, blow the sound of your horn across Nebraska and over the Rocky Mountains, that, on this day, the 28th of November, A. D. 1855, the irresistible Iron Horse on his passage from the Atlantic has arrived at this place, en route for the Pacific; and thus placed us in immediate connection with the great East and the "rest of mankind:" in consideration whereof, Lyons and Fulton City will celebrate this distinguished arrival with due magnificence on the 8th day of January, 1856.—[Clinton (Lyons) Mirror.

We give you joy, neighbors, and take courage ourselves. The wheezing snort of the thundering Iron Horse will be sweet music to us, and we live in high hopes speedily, and in less than three years, of being aroused from our pleasant slumbers by the clutter of the hoops of the iron monster, as he comes plunging up to take a drink of the waters of the boiling Missouri, ere long again to start for his distant goal, the golden lands of the Pacific shores. Shout aloud in your joyous acquisition, and after doing yourselves justice, spare three shouts, long and loud for the next stopping-place—Council Bluffs.—[Council Bluffs Bugle.

IT is stated that a coal mine of great value has been discovered within four miles of Iowa City. The vein already opened is five feet in thickness.

News Summary.

SINCE our last, a severe snow storm has visited our Atlantic coast from Maine to North Carolina at least, and extending into the interior, probably to the great back bone of the continent—the Rocky Mountains.

In this city it is estimated that snow fell to the depth of eighteen inches on a level, and some of the narrow streets are banked up some four or five feet above the sidewalk. Vehicles have ceased to traverse most of the streets, and the difficulty of getting up and down town has been very annoying to a large portion of the business community that live up about the avenues. In the Northeast part of the New England States the snow is said to have fallen deeper than for "seventy years" previous. In Boston and vicinity, travelling was completely suspended for a time, and it is estimated that not less than five thousand persons were occupying cars on the night of the 5th of January, unable to proceed or recede, within eight miles of that city. Passengers between this city and New Haven, and also Philadelphia, shared the same fate.

We could hardly help contrasting the beautiful mantle of immaculate whiteness that lay in ample folds over this metropolitan giant—New York city—with the more sable deeds of members which compose in the aggregate his giant form. A bird's-eye view of New York on Sunday morning, the 6th inst., would convey a very imperfect idea of the character wrapped up in such gaudy exterior: yet this is but a fair representation of what may be seen on a smaller scale at any season of the year; hence those who are captivated by gew-gaws and tinsels that radiate and dazzle the eyes of the unitiated, may be admonished by this circumstance never to judge a man by the cloth he wears, or a woman by her gauze.

The U. S. Mail steamship Arago arrived here on the 6th from Havre, via, Southampton, with news up to the 19th ult., four days later than our last.

It is stated by the Hamburg correspondent of the "London News," that the King of Sweden has ratified a treaty with England and France. The parties agreed to communicate and reciprocate on all propositions coming from Russia. Rumors of peace, without a knowledge why, were rife in France and England. Austria still acts as mediator between the belligerent powers; it is said that she is becoming somewhat impetuous towards Russia, and threatens to withdraw her Ambassador, if the Czar fails to accede to certain propositions.

The surrender of Kars with its garrison of about sixteen thousand Turks and English, into the hands of the Russians, is confirmed.

The Empress of Austria had a narrow escape from serious injury by the running away of her coach and four, without a driver, he having been accidentally thrown from his box. The horses were stopped by coming in contact with vehicles in the street.

Since the arrival of the Arago, we have received additional news three days later per steamship Canada at Halifax. We give the details in another column, which will be found to be merely a confirmation of that received by the Arago. Neither of them convey anything showing a disposition on the part of Russia to accede to any proposition yet made by the Allies, and her present prosperity in Asia, will have a tendency, probably, to prolong the war, rather than bring about peace, as some of the English papers contend. The Russians report having taken 10,000 prisoners at Kars, instead of 16,000, as before, and 130 cannon, besides a large amount of stores and ammunition.

Late advices from Mexico inform us that Gen. Comonfort is now President in place of Alvarez, resigned and returned to the South. There are strong talks of still another change by placing Gen. Almonte at the head of affairs.

It is rumored that there has been an uprising of the people of Nicaragua, and that the Walker dynasty will be overthrown; but this needs confirmation. That country is, however, in a very unsettled state; and the course of Walker with Gen. Coral and others, no doubt, sticks hard in the crops of many of the Nicaraguans, and they would want but a slight pretext to cause them to exhibit their real feelings towards their Walker King.

"No Speaker yet!" This phrase has become as stereotyped as that of "Sabastapol not taken yet" was a few months ago. It seems, however, to be the feeling of a majority of the members of the House, that Banks will be elected in a few days. The Richardson men have determined to vote against all moves for adjournment until an election is effected.

A large gathering and feast of the National Democrats took place at the Metropolitan Hotel on the evening of the 8th inst., to celebrate the anniversary of the battle of New Orleans—Elijah Ward, Esq., presiding. Eating, drinking, toasting, speaking, and reading political letters from abroad, was the order of the evening.

The weather sat in severely cold here on the 8th, and we hear of numbers of frost-bitten extremities. Old Boreas is now making visible his mark in high northern latitudes, as he passes on in his bleak and dreary car, to exchange civilities with his antipodal, less frigid, friend Notus.

A sad accident occurred on the 9th on the Hudson River Railroad. Three persons were killed and a number wounded—some fatally. The accident occurred by one train stopping on account of some defect in the track, and another train coming up behind ran in to the standing train, and smashed up the two hindmost cars, killing, bruising, and scalding the passengers inside; though fortunately, a number of the passengers were removed in time to get forward out of danger, thus preventing a much more destructive result than already reported.

Correspondence.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 27, 1855.

PRESIDENT TAYLOR,—

Dear Sir:—Presuming you have no regular Correspondent for "The Mormon" in this city, I have thought that an occasional communication from un compagnon de voyage might not be uninteresting to you and the readers of your very excellent journal; and with your kind permission and indulgence, I shall feel happy to be enrolled in your list of correspondents.

It is upwards of eight years since I had the honor to become a member of the Church of Jesus Christ, of Latter Day Saints; and my only regret since that period, has been, that I did not, years before, identify my interests with the interests of Prophets and Saints. When I remember the heartless persecutions, wholesale robberies, and cold-blooded murders they have had to encounter for the truth's sake, and observe their present position and standing, and the work they have accomplished in this and other nations, I am astonished; and am constrained to say in the language of the Prophets:—"It is a marvelous work, and a wonder." For notwithstanding its proscription and expatriation, it laughs at its proscribers, and bids defiance to its most merciless inquisitors.

Ten years have not yet passed away, since the Governor of Utah, the members of the Legislature, and other gentlemen, who now constitute the government of that Territory, with twenty or thirty thousand of her citizens, were under the ban of their inhuman oppressors, and driven from their peaceful homes; were compelled, as exiles, to seek an asylum in the dreary desert. And who can tell what mighty changes will be effected during the next ten or fifteen years?

It is not an uncommon thing, even in this age of intelligence and refinement, for the soi disant Christian ministers to use religion as a scare-crow to induce the timerous and weak-minded to subscribe to and support their respective creeds, irrespective of reason or revelation. The Sable demon with cloven foot and horns, the bottomless pit, and its sulphurous flames, with certain tragic representations of the reception and education of the damned, constitute the chief capital of the advocates of modern Christianity. And those pseudo-divines who can bring these things to bear with the greatest intensity of feeling, and produce the greatest revival, are generally considered the smartest men, and in most cases can command the best pay. If I ever entertained any fear of these hocus-pocus scenes, or respect for their mundane representatives, I certainly lost all when I became acquainted with Mormonism. I did not, therefore, embrace it through fear of these things, neither was I governed by a hasty spirit of enthusiasm, for I had devoted two whole years to the study of the subject, before I was fully resolved to join issue with the then expatriated and persecuted people of God, and be a Saint. And even then, I took hold with a trembling hand, fearing lest there might be something behind the screen that would indicate a frail origin, and furnish evidence of imposture. I therefore crossed the threshhold with a faltering step; but no sooner was I initiated, than my fears and suspicions were dissipated like the gentle dew by the summer's sun. And each year, month, and day, since that period, have furnished me additional evidence of the truth of Mormonism, and correspondingly enhanced my appreciation of the Prophets, Joseph, Hyram and Brigham, and other pioneers of the dispensation of the fulness of times.

The temperature has been extremely cold here during the last several days. On Monday, the 24th inst., it was twenty degrees below zero. On Tuesday I took dinner with the brethren of the Alton Ward, when from one hundred and thirty to one hundred and fifty sat down to a most bounteous supply of the good things of this life. The evening was spent in social festivity. Songs, recitations, and volunteer toasts were the order of the evening, which were sustained with considerable interest and spirit until a late hour. On arriving at Illinois Town the following day, I found it impossible to cross the river. Some several hundred persons were waiting to get across; many of them had been there two days, and had come from various parts of the State, with the intention of spending Christmas-day in St. Louis. One person attempting to cross on the floating ice, when near the center, was precipitated into the current, and perished. A great number of spectators observed the circumstance, but were unable to afford any aid. Illinois Town is a miserable place. It reminded me very forcibly of "Portbail," on the coast of France, where we were detained, as you will recollect, contre la volonte, pendant, huit jours. I returned to Alton in the evening; and on the following day succeeded in making the transit, by walking two thirds of the distance on the ice, where we were taken up by the ferry boat, and landed safely in this city, and thus relieved from a very awkward and unenviable situation.

Fearing my correspondence is growing too lengthy, I must conclude. With kind regards, Yours truly, JAMES H. HART.

We shall be pleased to hear from Br. Hart often.—ED.

WAPELLO, Iowa, Dec. 20, 1855.

BR. JOHN TAYLOR—Dear Sir: Enclosed you will find twenty dollars; please to accept the small amount to aid you in the publication of your beautiful sheet, the "MORMON." The same comes regular to me every week, and it is a great feast for me.

My health has been very poor all the fall, on account of a bad cold, but it is somewhat better now.

I left the State of Maine the latter part of September, and came through to this place in four days in the cars, (that is what I call travelling with speed swiftly in the last days,) and have spent most of my time ever since in this place. Several of my brothers and sisters in the Kingdom came on with me, and we have meetings among ourselves on Sundays—the Spirit of the Lord is with us—and we are making all preparations for crossing the plains in the Spring. I went through Quincy, Ill., last Fall a year, and collected a few old members together one evening at Mother Pinkam's house, and organized a branch, and appointed Bro. Thos. H. Giles, an English brother, to preside and to hold meetings, and the Lord has blest him in his labors. I was down there a few weeks ago, and held several meetings among them, and found that a good spirit prevailed among them, and that Bro. Giles had baptised and re-baptised twenty-two, and many of them intent on going to the Valley in the Spring.

We have had fine weather all the Fall until within the past week; it has been very cold, and the ground is frozen hard; the rivers are not yet closed, but ice is floating in abundance.

Crops in this part of the State come in heavy. Corn is now selling at 25 cents per bushel; wheat at one dollar, and pork at 5 cents per lb.

Which route had I better take in the Spring—North or South side of Platte?

Remember me to all of the Brothers that are with you.

Your Brother in the Covenant,
E. B. TRIPP.

We have now some competent men in the West investigating the different routes and other facilities for the Spring emigration. They will, at the same time, find out the value of cattle, wagons, flour, and other provisions necessary for an outfit across the Plains, of which due notice will be given in THE MORMON.

In the Spring persons will be appointed to superintend the emigration department; and individuals, parties, or companies going, under our administration, will have to be subject to their counsel and direction.—ED.

Arrival of the St. Louis.

Progress of the Ninth Regiment.

THE St. Louis left New York at 3 1-2 P. M., Dec. 11, for Old Port Comfort, Va., and arrived at 5 1-2 P. M., 12th. Sailed from Old Boint, 15th, 6 P. M., having on board the 9th Regiment Infantry, consisting of 800 officers and privates. Encountered heavy weather crossing the Gulf, and reached Aspinwall at 5 P. M., Dec. 23, seven days and twenty-two hours from Cape Henry.

The troops disembarked early on the morning of the 24th, and were conveyed by railroad to Panama, and placed on board steamers Oregon and Golden Age—all in fine health—before sundown of the same day. The Oregon left for San Francisco at 5:30 P. M. on the 26th, to be followed by the Golden Age immediately upon the arrival of the steamer (20th) from New York.

The St. Louis left Aspinwall for New York, Dec. 27, at 6 P. M. Experienced strong gales with heavy head sea from 27th to 31st. From Cape Hatteras to Capes of the Delaware encountered a succession of very heavy gales from northeast to northwest. Made the Highlands at 4 A. M. on the 7th.

The Isthmus was remarkably healthy, and the railroad to Panama in excellent order—passengers crossing from ocean to ocean in four hours.

The British mail steamer Dee, for St. Thomas and Southampton, left Aspinwall 24th, with $700,000 in specie.

The British mail steamer Solent, from St. Thomas, arrived on the 24th, with mails and 750 packages of merchandise.

The following is a list of the officers of the Ninth Regiment Infantry, passengers by the St. Louis, from Fort Monroe, Old Point Comfort, Va., to Aspinwall:

Colonel Commanding, Geo. W. Wright, wife, daughter, son and servant; Lieutenant-Colonel Silas Casey; Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel E. J. Steptoe; Captain and Brevet Major P. Lugenbeel, wife, three children and servant; Lieutenant and Quartermaster J. Van Voast, wife and servant; Lieutenant and Adjutant T. C. English, wife and servant; Assistant Surgeon J. B. Brown, wife and three children, and Miss Crawford; Assistant Surgeon Sukely; Acting Assistant Surgeon Randolph; Captain Charles S. Winder and wife; Captain Guthrie; Captain Fletcher; Capt. Archer and servant; Captain Bowman, wife, daughter and Miss Connor; F. T. Dent, wife and child.

Lieutenants Harvie, Charles A. Reynolds, McKibbon, Wickliffe, Douglass, S. Bissell, J. Miller, Wood, Owen, Davis, Fleming, Howard and Allen.

Sutler J. P. Chiffle and wife, Miss Beatty, Mr. Armstrong, Sutler, and 736 non-commissioned officers and privates.

Passengers from Aspinwall to New York—P. Consuegra, Mrs. Doran and child, C. Barriolhet, Charles Meig, Captain J. Arnold, Captain E. R. Bowman, Captain J. W. Williams, S. Forman, E. Roger, P. Osbeck, Peter Leavant, John Keenan.

Vessels left at Panama—Brig Byni, Coaxer, from Liverpool; schooner Sholiho, from Honolulu, S. I.; steamer Columbus, for ports in Mexico, soon; British Mail steamer Voldivia, for Callao, H. B. M. sloop-of-war Brisk was hourly looked for from Acapulco with $2,000,000 specie for England. The U. S. steamer Massachusetts was expected in a few days.

STANDING UP FOR REPUTATION AND COMMERCE!—An English paper says that the magistrate in Lemington has discountenanced all prosecutions of persons for keeping houses of ill-fame, on the ground that it would drive all the gentlemen away, and ruin the town!

THERE are several Chinese firms in California that have invested over $500,000 in their business; and there is more than two millions of dollars capital invested in the trade between San Francisco and China, owned and controlled by Chinamen residing in that city.

THE MORMON.

Thirty-Fourth Congress.—First Session.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

JAN. 4, 1856.

Mr. Boyce rose to make a personal explanation. He said he had frequently expressed his opinion that circumstances are at work which are hurrying us almost irresistably to a disruption of the Union. He saw, with a most profound regret, a party formed at the North based on the single idea of hostility to the institutions of the South, which party holds that freedom is national and slavery sectional. The Constitution recognizes slavery, the formation of that instrument being the result of conciliation and compromise. If that party obtains possession of the Government—and he thought it would—disunion would be the result. He did not desire this, and God forbid that it should ever happen.

Mr. Allison replied, saying he had no disposition to make war on Slavery in the States, but he opposed its further extension.

The House then proceeded to vote for a Speaker.

NINETY-FIRST BALLOT.

Banks	104	Pennington	6
Richardson	73	Scattering	6
Fuller	34	Necessary to choice	111

Messrs. Porter, Orr, and Williams, each 1.

Mr. Dunn appealed to the Massachusetts men to surrender their personal preference, which stands in the way of effecting their great end, and unite on Mr. Leiter, whom he eulogized as eminently fitted for the Speakership.

Mr. Knowlton replied that Massachusetts alone does not ask the election of Mr. Banks, but the great spirit of freedom has laid her hand upon him. He said that Mr. Dunn and a few other gentlemen elected on the Anti-Nebraska issue could, if they would, relieve the House from its entanglement.

Messrs. Jones of Tennessee, and Houston, regarded Mr. Dunn's resolution declaring Mr. Leiter, the Speaker, as nothing more than a nomination; and denied the right to thus nominate, and require the House to vote for or against.

The resolution was tabled by 160 against 39.

Mr. Underwood offered a resolution which must, he said, necessarily result in an election, namely: That the first gentleman named on the list of members be put in nomination, and failing to receive a majority of a quorum, the next one be voted for, and so on till an election be effected.

This was also tabled. The ninety-second vote was then taken, with precisely the same result as the previous one. Adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

JAN. 5, 1856.

Mr. Etheridge said the action of the House demonstrated two propositions—first, the gentlemen voted for to have enthusiastic friends; second, if either is elected he will not decline the honor of the chair. He did not believe any successful candidate would so conduct himself as to occasion just reprehension for his official conduct. In the present condition of the public mind, it will be injurious to the country to elect as Speaker a gentleman who is the embodiment of the extreme sentiment of either section. He proposed, as a compromise, Mr. Millson of Va., who was opposed to the alien suffrage feature in the Nebraska bill, voted against its passage, and was not in the Democratic caucus which nominated Mr. Richardson. He appealed to the moderate and conservative men to assist him in putting an end to this strife.

Mr. Brown did not agree with Mr. Etheridge in his willingness to descend from their exalted position and pursue the course suggested. Let all who were electetd on the paramount issue of Americanism come together and agree on a candidate, or, let the House adopt the resolution which he offered, namely—that the friends and supporters of the prominent candidates be requested to withdraw them from the further action of the House, and that the members representing the different parties in the House meet, and each party appoint a committee of five—these various committees to confer in joint committee with a view of selecting a compromise candidate for the Speakership.

Mr. Millson was surprised that his name had been announced for that position. He requested Mr. Etheridge to withdraw the nomination for reasons personal to himself. He had been associated with his Democratic friends in their earnest efforts to elect Mr. Richardson, and the proposition placed him and his friends in an attitude neither wished to assume.

Mr. Etheridge reluctantly withdrew his motion.

Mr. Stephens opposed the resolution of Mr. Brown, considering it wholly impracticable. He also reviewed, with disapprobation, the principles of the "American" party.

A running debate, involving the merits of the several political parties—particularly the "American"—succeeded, after which Mr. Brown's resolution was tabled.

The House then voted twice for a Speaker. The last ballot was as follows:

NINETY-FOURTH BALLOT.

Banks	98	Pennington	6
Richardson	72	Scattering	4
Fuller	29	Necessary to choice	105

Adjourned.

SENATE.

JAN. 7, 1856.

Mr. Brodhead called up his resolution directing the Committee on Finance to inquire into the expediency of reporting the general appropriation bills, or adopting more speedy action on them, to avoid the evils of night sessions, at the close of each Congress, and the scenes which a sense of delicacy prevented him from describing. He was in favor of doubling the compensation of members to the shorter sessions.

Mr. Clayton had no doubt of the power to originate these bills. Twenty-seven years ago the evil referred to was as great as now—no measures competent having been taken to arrest it.

Mr. Toombs did not think this the true remedy. The difficulty was occasioned by large numbers of amendments being tacked on to bills at a late period of the session.

Mr. Seward, while favoring the resolution, would not commit himself as to the propriety of the remedy proposed.

The resolution was adopted, and the Senate adjourned to Thursday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The House proceeded to vote for Speaker.

NINETY-FIFTH BALLOT.

Banks	101	Fuller	29
Richardson	73	Pennington	6
Scattering	5

Necessary to a choice 108.

Three additional votes were taken. The last was as follows:

NINETY-EIGHTH BALLOT.

Banks	99	Richardson	72
Fuller	30	Pennington	9
Scattering	6

Necessary to a choice 108.

During the proceedings an enlivening episode took place.

Mr. Eustis, in defining the position of the American party in Louisiana, repudiated the eighth section of the Philadelphia platform, preferring that his right arm should wither rather than that he should be connected with any party whose purpose was to persecute or proscribe American Catholics.

Mr. Smith of Alabama took issue with Mr. Eustis. He was opposed to Roman Catholicism because it owed allegiance to the Pope above the Constitution. There has never been a time when the priests in their assemblies did not cast their power against the people.

Mr. Florence referred Mr. Smith to the Irish Catholics under Father Murphy, at Vinegar Hill. [Laughter.]

Mr. Taylor of Louisiana referred to history to show that in the French Revolution the priests joined the people in their successful warfare against the two other estates—nobles and clergy.

Mr. Walker of Ala, conceived that the purpose of the American party was political. If he thought religious persecution was a prominent feature he would cut loose from such an organization.

Adjourned to Wednesday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

JAN. 9, 1856.

Mr. Smith of Tenn., defended the Democratic party and the President from the charge, that they are responsible for the non-organization of the House.

Mr. Whitney defended the 8th section of the Philadelphia Platform, declaring that the "American" party were not against individuals, but against the systems and principles of the Romish Church.

Mr. Knight offered a resolution to elect a Speaker by a plurality vote. After a short discussion the resolution was laid on the table by 11 majority.

Four ballotings were afterwards had, the last one 103d, resulting as follows:

Banks	92	Pennington	6
Richardson	67	Scattering	4
Fuller	29

Mr. Etheridge moved that the House adjourn until Saturday. Negatived.

Mr. McMullen moved that the resolution restricting members to ten minutes in debate be rescinded. He was opposed not only to this gag but to starving gentlemen into an election. The motion was laid on the table.

Members continually going out for refreshments—preparing for a long siege, most of them in excellent good humor. Various unsuccessful efforts were, from time to time, made to adjourn.

Mr. Bowie said: We are in the midst of a revolution, though bloodless as yet. He hoped the spirit of patriotism would rise superior to surrounding circumstances and relieve the House from the reproach of being unable to organize.

Mr. Bowie was followed by various other gentlemen—some in a spirit of pleasantry, provoking merriment; others grave and serious.

Mr. Meacham objected to the proceedings of gentlemen.

Mr. Bowie—No man, while the House is disorganized, has a right to object. He would not say cast pearls before swine—but waste the sweet fragrance of their voices on desert air. [Laughter.]

The slavery question was discussed at length.

At 11 o'clock a motion to adjourn was negatived, by 30 against 159.

Mr. Sneed offered a resolution that Mr. Orr be requested to take the chair till a Speaker is elected. The resolution was laid on the table by one majority. The House at 1 o'clock was still in session.

Telegraphic.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4, 1856.

A letter from a staff officer of the free State forces at Lawrence, Kansas, claims a bloodless triumph over Gov. Shannon in the recent treaty—they having yielded no principle at issue. The letter further states that Gov. Shannon and Sheriff Jones talk of resigning, if the people of Missouri will not keep quiet and mind their own business.

All speculation as to the speakership is at an end—many thinking there will be no election during the month.

From Kansas.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 4, 1856.

A letter published in The St. Louis Democrat, dated Leavenworth, December 28th, says the office of The Territorial Register, an Administration paper, was mobbed, the type thrown into the river and a lot of paper burned. The mob was composed principally of Missourians.

The free State party, at their convention on the 22d of December, nominated Charles Robinson for Governor, Y. Y. Roberts for Lieut. Governor, and M. W. Delaby for Congress. The election takes place on the third Tuesday in January. Col. Lane, who was Robinson's opponent for the nomination, was defeated by a vote of 55 to 22.

Navigation of the Ohio.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 4, 1856.

The navigation of the Ohio is entirely suspended—the river being blocked up with ice. The weather here is intensely cold.

Arrests in Cincinnati for Alleged Violation of the Neutrality Laws.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 5, 1856.

Nine persons, all Irish, were arrested in this city last evening by the U. S. Marshal, on charge of violation of the Neutrality Laws. They were this morning held to bail in the sum of 1,000 each, to appear on Monday afternoon. It is the impression that they were acting in concert with parties in New York and elsewhere, having in view a descent upon Ireland.

The Storm Eastward.

BOSTON, Jan. 6, 1856.

A foot and a half of snow fell in this vicinity lait night and greatly drifted. All the railroads are blocked up, and travel is nearly suspended. Dispatches from the north and east report the storm as unprecedented for years in severity, but as yet we have heard of but little damage. The bell boat on the Harding Ledge broke adrift and went ashore on Nantucket Beach. At Cape Cod, Highland Light, the keeper reports the gale as most severe. His doors and windows were blown in. The brig Vesta, from Galveston for Boston, went ashore a mile north of the Light, this morning, at 8 1-2 o'clock. Crew saved and vessel tight; her sails were all blown away.

The schooner Mary E—— broke adrift and sunk at the Marine Railway. The British schooner Emma, from Lunenburg for New York, is aground, but will float at high water.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Jan. 6—P. M.

A foot of snow in this vicinity fell last night and drifted badly. The afternoon train from New York yesterday has not yet arrived here. All the roads are blocked up.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 6, 1856.

The train from New York due here at 7, o'clock last night did not arrive until 1 o'clock this afternoon. The Canal Road cars of Saturday night were fast in the snow at Plainville to-day, with sixty passengers, out of fire and provisions.

The Storm South.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 6, 1856.

All the mails are delayed by the storm. The Pilot Line from New York last night arrived at noon to-day. The Baltimore train of last evening arrived this afternoon, but brings no Washington mail.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 6, 1856.

No trains have arrived here from Philadelphia or the west. The roads are all blocked up with snow.

Non-Arrival of the Canada—The Snow Storm at Halifax.

HALIFAX, Jan. 6—3 P. M.

The steamship Canada has not been heard of up to the present hour. A furious gale and snow storm prevails here. The snow is already four feet deep and there are no immediate prospects of an abatement. Of course there is but little if any chance of the expected steamer making this port to-night.

From Washington

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7, 1856.

Between forty and fifty Democratic members of the House met in caucus to-night. Mr. Jones of Tenn. took the chair, and Messrs Ruffin and English as Secretaries. After an interchange of views it was represented that Mr. Richardson was willing to be dropped, provided another could be nominated with a better prospect of success. It was contended that the withdrawing of him would be an abandonment of the platform. Some Democrats considered this caucus unnecessary, and probably nothing definite will be accomplished.

BOSTON, Jan. 7 1856.

The railroads are being slowly relieved from the blockade of snow, but serious detention to trains still exists. The New York mail train of this morning due here at 5 P. M. reached Springfield at 7, and will not probably arrive before morning. It is estimated that no less than five thousand people passed Saturday night in the cars within eight miles of Boston.

During the storm on Sunday morning the bark Tammany and brig Emma, from New Orleans for Boston, dragged ashore at Holmes Hole. They remain tight, but will have to discharge cargo.

PHILADELAMIA, Jan. 7, 1856.

It commenced snowing here again at 9 o'clock this evening. The mail due from the West to day has not yet arrived. The mail from the West of yesterday was brought down in a sleigh from Morgan's Corner, and the mail for the West was sent the same way. All the other roads are open, and the mails are arriving and departing as usual.

WASHINGTON, D. C., P. M., Jan. 7, 1856.

It is again snowing here. The road between here and Petersburgh, and even south of that is blocked with snow. Two trains are between Aquia Creek and Fredericksburg. The snow is six inches keep at Raleigh and badly drifted. Thermometer at three o'clock 33 degrees above zero.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 7, 1856.

A heavy snow has fallen here to-day, and still continues. The roads are in a good condition as yet.

CHICAGO, Jan. 7, 1856.

It is very cold here. Considerable snow but the roads are clear.

The New Mail Route to New Orleans.

CAIRO, Illinois, Jan. 7, 1856.

The steamer Fannie Bullit arrived here in six days from New Orleans, bringing the first daily mail under the new contract.

The new depot at the Mound City branch of the Illinois Central Railroad blew down this morning.

Death of Dr. Stephen W. Taylor.

UTICA, Jan. 7, 1856.

Stephen W. Taylor, L. L. D., President of the Madison University, died at Hamilton this morning, aged sixty-five years.

National Agricultural Society.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9, 1856.

The National Agricultural Society met at the Smithsonian Institute. There was a respectable attendance. President Wilder delivered the annual address. The Treasurer's report shows a balance of upward of $4,000 on hand. The invitation of Mayor Conrad of Philadelphia, to hold the next annual exhibition in that city, was accepted.

The President read a series of resolutions adopted by the Legislature of Illinois, asking Congress to donate to each State an amount of land of not less than $500,000 in value, for the establishment of Industrial Universities. The subject was referred to a committee consisting of Prof. Henry, the Hon. Mr. De Bow, and L. H. Byington, Esq., of Connecticut, with authority to present the same to Congress. Several subjects were discussed, and the Executive Committee was authorized to take such steps for the domestication of Rocky Mountain sheep as might be deemed expedient. A resolution providing for the importation of seed wheat was adopted.

Adjourned till to-morrow.

Latest News from Europe.

Arrival of the Canada at Halafax.

HALIFAX, Tuesday, Jan. 8, 1856.

The Royal Mail Steamship Canada, Capt. Stone, from Liverpool at 10 o'clock A. M. on Saturday, the 22d ult., arrived here at 12 1-2 o'clock to-day.

The Canada sailed at 3:20 P. M. with a stiff breeze from the southeast, accompanied with snow, for Boston, where she will be due early on Thursday morning.

The steamship Washington from New York, arrived off the Weser on the 21st, and put back to Southampton after landing the mails and passengers, as the ice prevented her from reaching Bremen.

NEGOTIATIONS.—The present position of peace prospects is this: It may be remembered that Austria made a suggestion of certain terms not known to the public, which the Austrian Cabinet considered might constitute a basis for pacific negotiations. These suggestions Austria sent to Paris through the French Minister at Vienna. The French Government sent a copy of said suggestions to London. Much correspondence ensued between London and Paris, resulting in the original suggestions being sent back, altered by France and England, to Vienna.

The Austrian Cabinet expresses mortification that the suggestions were not adopted sipliciter. More correspondence ensued, resulting in Austria agreeing to append her name jointly with France and England to the modified proposals. The proposition thus amended was on Sunday, December 16, as notified by the Arago, sent from Vienna in charge of Count Esterhazy to St. Petersburg. The contents of this ultimatum are kept profoundly secret. If the Czar refuses, France and England threaten to continue the war, and Austria to cease diplomatic relations and afterward to be governed by the consequences.

Simultaneously with the transmission of peace proposals to Russia, The Paris Moniteur publishes the treaty entered into between the Allies and Sweden, guaranteeing the existing limits of Sweden against Russian aggression. As Russia does not at present threaten Sweden, this ill-timed treaty may be viewed by Russia as an intentional insult, and a cause for the rejection of the peace proposals. The terms of the treaty are very stringent. It is declared that the treaty is concluded to prevent every complication of a nature to trouble the balance of power in Europe.

By article 1st the King of Sweden engages himself not to cede to Russia, nor exchange with her, nor to allow her to occupy any portion of the territory belonging to the crown of Sweden and Norway. He engages, moreover, not to cede to Russia any right of pasturage or fishing ground, or of any other nature whatever, of the said territories or of the coast of Sweden and Norway, and to reject any pretension Russia might raise to establish the existence of any of the above named rights.

ARTICLE 2. In case Russia should make any proposition to the King of Sweden or any demand with a view to obtain either the cession or exchange of any portion whatever of the territory belonging to the crowns of Sweden and Norway, be it permission to occupy certain points of said territory or the cession of fishing or pasturage rights, or any other on the same territories or on the coast of Sweden and Norway—the King of Sweden engages to communicate immediately such proposition to the Emperor of France and Queen of England, and they engage to provide Sweden with sufficient naval and military forces, with those of Sweden, to resist the claims or aggressions of Russia. The nature, the importance, and the destination of the forces in question, shall, the case occurring, be decided by a common agreement between the three powers.

A secret clause is appended to the treaty providing for Sweden eventually taking the field against Russia.

Vienna private correspondence intimates that the Austrian Government declined an invitation made by Prussia on the 17th of September, to join Prussia in a pacific intervention; also, that Napoleon refused the invitation of Prussia, conveyed by Baron Prokesch to Paris, to open negotiations, but that in the middle of November, Count Buol, in the name of Austria, invited the Western Powers to reopen at Paris the Peace Conference of Vienna; recommending also that the guarantees shall be maintained as the basis of negotiations, but that the third point of guarantee, respecting Russian domination in the Black Sea, should be modified.

Russia had not replied to the proposal, but would send representatives to the conference, hence has arisen the rumor that the Austrian Anglo-French proposal is merely to define the meaning of the third point, and that if an understanding be come to the Vienna Conference, so called, will be re-opened in Paris in the middle of January. It is stated that the Swedish Ambassador at Vienna has formally announced to the Austrian Government that Sweden adheres to the Allies' interpretation of the four points. It is also stated that Count Stackelberg had brought to Vienna a Russian proposal for peace in terms different from those proposed by the Allies. This, however, is doubtful.

The English Government is said to have demanded an explanation from the Court of Vienna as to the intention of Austria in reducing the Austrian army. The Army Board of that country is selling no fewer than seventy thousand horses. The present position of affairs may be thus expressed: France is less peaceful and England less warlike than they seem.

THE CRIMEA.

A hurricane had occurred in the Crimea. The Tchernaya River had overflowed its banks, doing considerable damage. There is nothing later than Gen. Codrington's dispatch of the 4th, saying that the Russians continued to fire heavily from the north side doing much damage. The ground was covered with snow. Savings Banks are to be opened in the British army.

ASIA.

There are few additional particulars concerning the surrender of Kars, which took place on the 28th of November. On November 14, Gen. Mouravieff summoned the garrison to surrender. Gen. Williams held a council of war on the 15th, and after the council the garrison sent a flag of truce, asking ten days suspension of hostilities and permission to send a courier to Erzeroum. Gen. Mourazieff offered to grant an honorable capitulation, and allowed an English Captain Tomson to go to Erzeroum. Tomson returned from Erzeroum and reached Kars on the 22d. Gen. Williams then demanded an interview with Mouravieff for the 24th. By this time the garrison had no food except some horse flesh for the sick in the hospitals. Here the narrative breaks off, and we have no details of the surrender.

Private accounts without dates [rather doubtful] say that Omer Pasha had driven in the Russians and taken possession of Khoni, five leagues from Kutais, and was preparing to attack the latter city, which was garrisoned by ten thousand Russians. Mouravieff had detailed a part of his force to oppose Omer. The Turks are said to have found 12,000 fur coats in Khoni.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Attention is entirely occupied in discussing the probabilities of peace. It is remarked that the general public speak more in favor of carrying on the war now than at any previous period. The Queen has sent a jeweled decoration to Miss Nightingale.

Heavy gales had prevailed during the week, and numerous casualities were reported on the British coast, but no American ships are known to be damaged. The Spanish brig Bravo, from Barcelona for Havana, was wrecked on the night of the 10th inst., off Giberaltar. Forty-five passengers were drowned, including seven ladies.

FRANCE.

A treaty of amity and commerce between France and Persia is concluded, and an envoy has left Paris to exchange ratifications. Gen. Canrobert will be named Marshal of France.

SPAIN.

The Cubans have sent a protest against the impolicy of laying additional taxes on Colonial produce as the new tariff proposes.

HOLLAND.

The first steamer of the New York line, the Belgique, was formally baptised at Antwerp on the 15th by the Cardinal Archbishop of Malines and a crowd of clergymen.

DENMARK.

Denmark has requested the Governments interested to adjourn the conferences on the Sound Dues. A Copenhagen letter says that only two States have as yet pronounced in favor of Denmark's views, namely—Russia and Mechlenberg. The Russian Finance Minister some time since stated that he could not raise the large sum required to capitalize, and therefore preferred remaining as they are. Lord Clarendon has announced that if the United States' ships pass without tolls, British ships will pass also. The trial of the ex-Ministers had been postponed till January 12.

GERMANY.

Frankfort papers publish an Imperial Ukase authorising the new Russian loan.

TURKEY.

The new Ministry under Redschild Pasha is to be re-organized.

GREECE.

The new Ministry cultivate friendly relations with the Allies.

THE LATEST.

By Telegraph from London to Liverpool.

The London Times' City article, dated Friday evening, says a temporary diminution of confidence in the result of the mission of Count Esterhazy to St. Petersburg, caused Consols to open at a re-action of one qurter per cent. from the improved rates of yesterday. The amount of business throughout the day was small, but the demand for money was generally active. The present returns of the stock of the Bank of England contain the result of the increased amount of circulation recently granted by the order in Council.

The letters from Paris to-day state that the Exchange on London continues flat, but that the presure for money has slightly subsided.

There is no news of importance.

SARDINIA.

The war budget of the Kingdom of Sardinia just presented to the Piedmontese Chambers, fixes the expenses of the war during 1855 and 1856, at 74,239,532 francs, including 11,386,401 francs for the Navy.

SURRENDER OF KARS.

HAMBURG, FRIDAY.—The Invalide Russe contains a dispatch from Gen. Mouravieff. He reports that he has taken possession of one hundred and thirty cannon, large stores of amunition and standards, with 10,000 prisoners, besides those already reported, six thousand being Turkish regulars, and 4,000 Redies.

Defense of Stephen A. Douglas.

THE assertion that Senator Douglas "wedded plantations and slaves," is as unmanly as it is untrue. Senator Douglas did marry; he married a lady to whom on account of her personal accomplishments, the brilliant qualities of head and heart, he had become attached. His affection was fully reciprocated, and up to the hour of her death, their mutual respect and devotion had known no abatement. When he married her she owned no slaves; upon their marriage Senator Douglas was tendered a large property, including slaves, and he promptly declined it. His desire and wishes were so plainly and unmistakeably made known, that had it not been for an unforseen affliction he nor any attached to him would have had any interest in slave property. By the sudden and unexpected death of his father-in-law, his wife, and through her his children, inherited the property held by her father in his lifetime.

In this way and not by any procurement of Senator Douglas, his motherless boys became the proprietors af her estate. In the face of these facts this venomous scribbler, one of "the best men in Southern Illinois," steps upon her grave, and pointing to it, exclaims, "Here is the creature through whom Douglas wedded slaves!" We can tell this man, and we care little who he may be, that that pure woman, that devoted mother, and inestimable wife—the memory of whose sweet and winning voice and manners, will ever live in the hearts of all who knew her—passed through this life without encountering a being so foully villanous as to asperse her motives or her purity.

Being dead it is the fitting office of such as he to slander and defame the buried mother of Senator Douglas's children. He does it anonymously; even he, lost to all sense of manly bearing, dare not put his name to his publication, but through an appropriate newspaper anonymously, in the "cause of human freedom," publishes to the world that the wife of Senator Douglas purchased a father for her children and the price was human slaves.

In the name of the best and worst citizens of Southern and Northern Illinois, we repudiate that man from all honorable association. If he have sons who wish to be considered men, they will repudiate association with the brute who could mock and taunt a wife and mother in her grave. If he have daughters, they too will despise the wretch who in the name of humanity, would stoop to such infamy.—[Chicago Times.

Foolscap Paper.

EVERYBODY knows what "Foolscap paper" is, but would perhaps be puzzled to tell how it came to bear that singular cognomen. Well, when Charles I. found his revenues short, he granted certain privileges amounting to monopolies, and among these was the manufacture of paper, the exclusive right of which was sold to certain parties, who grew rich and enriched the government at the expense of those who were obliged to use paper. At this time all English paper bore in water marks the Royal Arms. The Parliament under Cromwell made jests and jeers at his law in every conceivable manner, and among other indignities to the memory of Charles, it was ordered that the Royal Arms be removed from the paper, and the fool's cap and bells be substituted. These also were removed when the Rump Parliament was prorogued, but paper of the size of the Parliament's Journals still bears the name of "Foolscap."—Scientific American.

DISCOVERY OF THE BRITISH ARTIC SHIP RESOLUTE 23. ult,—The British ship Resolute abandoned in the Arctic ice, was brought by Capt. Budington into the port of New London with all her armament, stores and equipments on board. She was a new and handsome vessel, and worth $100,000. When found she had drifted over 1,000 miles from the place where she was abandoned.

RELIGIOUS POSITION OF THE EARTH.—The latest and apparently the fairest estimate of the religious condition of the earth, is as follows: Pagans, 676,000,000; Christians, 320,000,000; Mahommedans, 140,000,000; Jews, 14,000,000. Of Christians, there are 170,000,000 Catholic; 90,000,000 Protestant; and 70,000,000 of the Greek Church.

MARRIED.

At Tom's River, N. J., Jan. 14th, 1856, by Elder Wm. C. Reamer, Mr. JAMES GULICK, Jr., to Miss CAROLINE PHILLIPS. Also, Mr. CHARLES WEBB to Miss HANNAH WILBERT, all of Ocean county, N. J.

Letter Notice.

WE are constantly receiving letters from Europe, addressed to our care, with the postage unpaid. Now, we are willing to accommodate men, but we can't pay their postage, as one out of ten perhaps is not called for. This is to inform all such persons that no such letters will be taken out of the office, by us, in future.

THE MORMON.

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the trangression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The fourth is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the 'laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Bien-aimés frères, je désire, en commencant cette publication, vous adresser quelques paroles. Le Seigneur, dans sa bonté et sa miséricorde, a jugé convenable de restaurer au monde l'Evangile primitif, dans toute la simplicité, la beauté et la pureté qu'il avait autrefois, parmi les chrétiens des premiers temps, aux jours de Jésus et de ses Apôtres.

La lumière de la vérité a éclaté au milieu des ténèbres et de la corruption des hommes, en ce temps où le monde est déchiré par mille opinions contradictoires.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Si nous suivons attentivement l'action de Dieu sur le genre humain, nous trouverons que tous ces maux proviennent de ce que les nations et les peuples se sont éloignés de Dieu; et rien moins qu'un retour à lui ne peut arrêter la terrible tempête, calmer la mer furieuse, tranquilliser les passions capricieuses des hommes, et rendre au monde moral, religieux et politique, cet ordre qui règne dans la création physique de Dieu.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui règle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

C'est la religion que vous croyez et que vous enseignez, qui est destinée à restaurer l'homme et la terre; c'est elle qui ramènera les peuples à Dieu, qui les retirera du chaos moral, religieux et politique du monde, et les rassemblera en un peuple qui sera conduit et reconnu de Dieu; qui sera honoré devant les hommes et les nations; et qui aidera à établir et à développer le royaume de Dieu dans ces derniers jours.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaîtraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là. dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? Ou devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours?

Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconque demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Pére et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Évangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés?" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit?" Nous le faisons aussi. Crurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains par la foi en Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent, ils "l'espoir en la résurrection?" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.?" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.?" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions á son Eglise actuelle.

Nous demanderons ce qu'il y a d'inconséquent en tout cela? Lequel est le plus inconséquent, de croire et de pratiquer les Ecritures, ou de dire, nous les croyons et puis de les nier à notre organisation, à nos doctrines, à nos œuvres.

Mais des visions, des prophèties, des révélations n'ont-elles pas une tendance à conduire à l'enthousiasme et au fanatisme? Oui, les visions humaines et les délusions de Satan l'ont. Mais si le Seigneur eût pensé que ses visions et ses révélations fussent préjudiciables aux hommes, pourquoi les aurait-il données dans les anciens temps? Si elles doivent être préjudiciables de nos jours, certainement elles l'eussent été autrefois. L'enthousiasme, la folie et le fanatisme des hommes est une chose; autre chose est Dieu révélant sa volonté aux peuples pour leur organisation, leur stabilité, leur consolation, leur union, leur savoir, leur édification, et pour l'établissement de son royaume.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaître Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Les philosophes ont scruté l'homme, la terre, les œuvres de la création pour trouver un vrai système, Ils ont tous eu leur jour. Ils ont introduit beaucoup de bons principes, mais quant à l'amélioration du monde, là, ils ont fait défaut. Leurs systémes, quelque bons que soient plusieurs d'entre eux, sont bien loin d'embrasser l'objet désiré: "Ils ont été pesés dans la balance, et trouvés trop légers."

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaître que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence. ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les ecès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lasciveté, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votre lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

A Card to the Saints.

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "THE MORMON." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish, you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
The Greatest Blessing of the Age for the Cure of Diseases of Man or Beast requiring External Application.
"BRING hither the poor, the halt, the lame and the blind," if you would have them healed of their many infirmities. We boldly and fearlessly assert that the Mustang Liniment will positively cure Rheumatism. Let any who are afflicted with that most painful complaint try it thoroughly according to directions, and if they are not cured we will give them their money back. What more can we say? It will also cure the Piles. Thousands have tried it—and all were cured. Bruises, Sprains, Sores or Eruptions fade away as if touched by the magician's wand. Its application to burn or scald acts like "oil upon the troubled waters." The tempest of pain and agony is soon stifled, and the patient is hushed to quiet and peaceful slumbers. "There is balm for every wound," and that balm is the Mustang Liniment. Everybody that sells medicine keeps it for sale. "Hold your horses," and if they are crippled, galled or sprained, use the Mustang Liniment.
READ THE FOLLOWING CERTIFICATES.
THROUGH BY EXPRESS!!!
This is to certify that the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT has been used quite extensively in the stables of Adams & Co.'s Great Southern, Eastern and Western Expresses, for curing galls, chafes, scrofulas, sprains and bruises, and it has proved very effectual Many of their men have also used it on themselves and their families, and they all speak of its healing and remedial qualities in the highest terms. One of our ostlers got kicked and badly cut and bruised on his knee; as usual, the Liniment was resorted to, and the soreness and lameness was soon removed, and it was perfectly well in three or four days. We have no hesitation in recommending it as a valuable preparation to be used externally on man or beast.
J. DUNNING,
Foreman of Adams & Co.'s Express Stable, N. Y.
We take pleasure in recommending the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT to all our friends and customers as the best article we have ever used for sores, sprains or galls in horses. We have used it extensively and always effectually. Some of our men have also used it for severe bruises and sores, as well as rheumatic pains, and they all say it acts like magic—we can only say that we have entirely abandoned the use of any other Liniment.

MR. WILLIAM JOHNSON, for the last five years a citizen of Augusta, and now the proprietor of the fine hotel in Savannah, called the Marshall House, has favored us with the following certificate:
The MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT has been used in my family, and on my farm, for a great variety of diseases requiring an external application, and has never failed to give immediate relief and effect a permanent cure. I have cured several cases of rheumatism that had resisted the skill of our best physicians. It has cured ringworms by a single application, chilblains in a few days, toothache, frost bites, cuts, sores and corns by a few applications; nervous headache cured entirely. In fact, I have used it for almost everything, and it has always cured. I consider it the best medicine I have ever used. WILLIAM JOHNSON.
Savannah, June 24th, 1852.
June, 25th, 1852.
I have used the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT in my stables upon my horses in cases of sprains, bruises, galls and sores of different kinds, incident to a large number of horses. I used it upon a horse that had been saddle galled for nearly a year. I had tried many remedies, and one in particular, that I had been in the habit of using for years, and had generally proved successful. Nothing appeared to give it any relief until I tried the Mustang Liniment, which cured it in a very short time. I consider it an invaluable remedy, and would not be without it. WM. H. HOLMES.
SAVANNAH, Geo., June 25, 1852.
We have also used the MUSTANG LINIMENT extensively in our stable, and we find it to be the best remedy we have ever used for sores or lameness of any kind.
SAWYER, HOLLISTER & CO.
The above are from two of the largest livery stables in the State of Georgia.
B. H. MEEKINS, 189 Walnut street, Cincinnati, was confined to his bed under the treatment of a physician some six weeks, with Neuralgia, of the whole of his right side, leg, arm and face; his sufferings were indescribable, and the only cessation from the most agonizing pain, was while under the influence of opium or morphine His doctor finally advised him to try the MUSTANG LINIMENT; he did so, and in two days was able to go about his business perfectly cured.
This is to certify that I have used the MUSTANG LINIMENT recently in a very severe case of sprain. The right hip was so badly sprained and bruised that fears were entertained that it was out of joint. I obtained a bottle of Mustang Liniment and used it freely for four days, when the soreness and pain were all gone and the hip joint was well.
I have also used the Liniment for the Piles, with which I have been afflicted for many years. Its effects were wonderful. Free applications night and morning for a week have perfectly cured me. Thousands of persons are suffering with this painful disease, and you are at liberty to make this statement public, that all may learn what will cure them.
My brother also states that he has used the Mustang Liniment with the most perfect success in two cases of severe bruises, at our factory in Williamsburgh, and says he considers it invaluable about an establishment where a large number of men and horses are at work, and constantly liable to serious accidents. EDWIN R. BARRON.
64 Dunne st., New York, June 25, 1852.
☞ While hundreds are rejoicing in the happy escape from smarting pains, occasioned by Burns, Bruises and Sprains, thousands of others will buy the Mustang Liniment and experience the same happy results.
☞ The popularity of the Mustang Liniment is a "fixed fact," therefore those suffering with Ulcers, Old Sores, Eruptions, and like complaints, need not be reminded of its superiority to give it a trial.
☞ The Ladies will always rejoice at the happy experience of curing eruptions, sore nipples, broken or caked breasts, piles and corns, after a thorough trial of the Mexican Mustang Liniment.
☞ The Mustang Liniment will give the most undoubted satisfaction to any one giving it a trial for stiff joints, stiff neck, or sore throat; it has proved itself efficacious in these complaints in many very stubborn cases.
☞ If you have any ugly, painful corns upon your feet, get a bottle of Mustang Liniment and apply it twice a day for eleven days, and the trouble will be gone.

BY ROBERT NICOL.

I ask not for his lineage,
I ask not for his name;
If manliness be in his heart,
He noble birth may claim.
I care not though of this world's wealth
But slender be his part,
If "yes" you answer, when I ask—
Hath he a true man's heart.

I ask not from what land he came,
Nor where his youth was nursed;
If pure the stream, it matters not
The spot from whence it burst.
The palace or the hovel,
Where first his life began,
I seek not of: but answer this—
Is he an honest man?

Nay, blush not now—what matters it
Where first he drew his breath?
A manger was the cradle-bed,
Of Him of Nazareth.
Be nought, be any, everything,
I care not what you be,
If "yes" you answer, when I ask—
Art thou pure, true, and free?

AN ACT

TO ESTABLISH A

TERRITORIAL GOVERNMENT FOR UTAH.

SEC. 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled. That all that part of the Territory of the United States included within the following limits, to wit: bounded on the west by the State of California, on the north by the Territory of Oregon, and on the east by the summit of the Rocky Mountains, and on the south by the thirty-seventh parrallel of north latitude, be, and the same is hereby, created into a temporary government, by the name of the Territory of Utah; and when admitted as a State, the said Territory, or any portion of the same, shall be received into the Union, with or without slavery as their Constitution may prescribe at the time of their admission: Provided, That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to inhibit the Government of the United States from dividing said Territory into two or more Territories, in such manner and at such times as Congress shall deem convenient and proper, or from attaching any portion of said Territory to any other State or Territory of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Executive power and authority in and over said Territory of Utah, shall be vested in a Governor, who shall hold his office for four years, and until his successor shall be appointed and qualified, unless sooner removed by the President of the United States. The Governor shall reside within said Territory, shall be Commander-in-Chief of the Militia thereof, shall perform the duties and receive the emoluments of Superintendent of Indian Affairs, and shall approve all laws passed by the Legislative Assembly before they shall take effect; he may grant pardons for offences against the laws of said Territory, and reprieves for offences against the laws of the United States until the decision of the President can be made known thereon; he shall commission all officers who shall be appointed to office under the laws of the said Territory, and shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That there shall be a Secretary of said Territory, who shall reside therein, and hold his office for four years, unless sooner removed by the President of the United States; he shall record and preserve all the laws and proceedings of the Legislative Assembly hereinafter constituted, and all the acts and proceedings of the Governor in his Executive department; he shall transmit one copy of the laws and one copy of the Executive proceedings, on or before the first day of December in each year, to the President of the United States, and at the same time, two copies of the laws to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the President of the Senate, for the use of Congress. And in case of the death, removal, resignation, or other necessary absence of the Governor from the Territory, the Secretary shall have, and he is hereby authorized and required to execute and perform all the powers and duties of the Governor during such vacancy or necessary absence, or until another Governor shall be duly appointed to fill such vacancy.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the Legislative power and authority of said Territory, shall be vested in the Governor and a Legislative Assembly. The Legislative Assembly shall consist of a Council and House of Representatives. The Council shall consist of thirteen members, having the qualifications of voters as hereinafter prescribed, whose term of service shall continue two years. The House of Representatives shall consist of twenty-six members, possessing the same qualifications as prescribed for members of the Council, and whose term of service shall continue one year. An apportionment shall be made, as nearly equal as practicable among the several counties or districts, for the election of the Council and House of Representatives, giving to each section of the Territory representation in the ratio of its population, Indians excepted, as nearly as may be. And the members of the Council and of the House of Representatives shall reside in, and be inhabitants of, the district for which they may be elected respectively. Previous to the first election, the Governor shall cause a census or enumeration of the inhabitants of the several counties and districts of the Territory to be taken, and the first election shall be held at such time and places, and be conducted in such manner as the Governor shall appoint and direct; and he shall, at the same time, declare the number of members of the Council and House of Representatives to which each of the counties or districts shall be entitled under this act. The number of persons authorized to be elected having the highest number of votes in each of said Council districts for members of the Council, shall be declared by the Governor to be duly elected to the Council; and the person or persons authorized to be elected having the highest number of votes for the House of Representatives, equal to the number to which each county or district shall be entitled, shall be declared by the Governor to be duly elected members of the House of Representatives: Provided, That in case of a tie between two or more persons voted for, the Governor shall order a new election to supply the vacancy made by such a tie. And the persons thus elected to the Legislative Assembly shall meet at such place, and on such day as the Governor shall appoint; but, thereafter the time, place, and manner of holding and conducting all elections by the people, and the apportioning the representation in the several counties or districts to the Council and House of Representatives, according to population, shall be prescribed by law, as well as the day of the commencement of the regular sessions of the Legislative Assembly: Provided, That no one session shall exceed the term of forty days.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That every free white male inhabitant above the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of said Territory at the time of the passage of this act, shall be entitled to vote at the first election, and shall be eligible to any office within the said Territory; but the qualifications of voters and of holding office, at all subsequent elections, shall be such as shall be prescribed by the Legislative Assembly: Provided, That the right of suffrage and of holding office shall be exercised only by citizens of the United States, including those recognized as citizens by the treaty with the Republic of Mexico, concluded February second, eighteen hundred and forty-eight.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the Legislative power of said Territory shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation, consistent with the Constitution of the United States and the provisions of this act; but no law shall be passed interfering with the primary disposal of the soil; no tax shall be imposed upon the property of the United States; nor shall the lands or other property of non-residents be taxed higher than the lands or other property of residents. All the laws passed by the Legislative Assembly and Governor shall be submitted to the Congress of the United States, and if disapproved shall be null and of no effect.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That all Township, District, and County officers, not herein otherwise provided for, shall be appointed or elected, as the case may be, in such manner as shall be provided by the Governor and Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Utah. The Governor shall nominate, and, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council, appoint all officers not herein otherwise provided for; and in the first instance the Governor alone may appoint all said officers who shall hold their offices until the end of the first session of the Legislative Assembly, and shall lay off the necessary districts for members of the Council and House of Representatives, and all other offices.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That no member of the Legislative Assembly shall hold or be appointed to any office which shall have been created, or the salary or emoluments of which shall have been increased while he was a member, during the term for which he was elected, and for one year after the expiration of such term; and no person holding a commission or appointment under the United States, except postmasters, shall be a member of the Legislative Assembly, or shall hold any office under the Government of said Territory.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the Judicial power of said Territory shall be vested in a Supreme Court, District Courts, Probate Courts, and in Justices of the Peace. The Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and two Associate Justices, any two of whom shall constitute a quorum, and who shall hold a term at the seat of Government of said Territory annually, and they shall hold their offices during the period of four years. The said Territory shall be divided into three judicial districts, and a district court shall be held in each of said districts by one of the justices of the Supreme Court, at such time and place as may be prescribed by law; and the said judges shall, after their appointments, respectively, reside in the districts which shall be assigned them. The jurisdiction of the several courts herein provided for, both appelate and original, and that of the probate courts, and of justices of the peace, shall be as limited by law: Provided, That justices of the peace shall not have jurisdiction of any matter in controversy when the title or boundaries of land may be in dispute, or where the debt or sum claimed shall exceed one hundred dollars; and the said supreme and district courts respectively shall possess chancery as well as common law jurisdiction. Each district court, or the judge thereof, shall appoint its clerk, who shall also be the register in chancery, and shall keep his office at the place where the court may be held. Writs of error, bills of exception, and appeals, shall be allowed in all cases from the final decisions of said district courts to the supreme court, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law; but in no case removed to the supreme court shall trial by jury be allowed in said court. The supreme court, or the justices thereof, shall appoint its own clerk, and every clerk shall hold his office at the pleasure of the court for which he shall have been appointed. Writs of error and appeals from the final decision of said supreme court, shall be allowed, and may be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States, in the same manner and under the same regulations as from the circuit courts of the United States, where the value of the property or the amount in controversy, to be ascertained by the oath or affirmation of either party, or other competent witness, shall exceed one thousand dollars, except only, that in all cases involving title to slaves, the said writs of error or appeals shall be allowed and decided by the said supreme court, without regard to the value of the matter, property, or title in controversy; and except, also, that a writ of error or appeal, shall also be allowed to the Supreme Court of the United States, from the decisions of the said supreme court created by this act, or of any judge thereof, or of the district courts created by this act, or of any judge thereof, upon any writ of habeas corpus involving the question of personal freedom; and each of the said district courts shall have and exercise the same jurisdiction in all cases arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States as is vested in the circuit and district courts of the United States; and the said supreme and district courts of the said Territory, and the respective judges thereof, shall and may grant writs of habeas corpus in all cases in which the same are granted by the judges of the United States in the District of Columbia; and the first six days of every term of said courts, or so much thereof as shall be necessary, shall be appropriated to the trial of causes arising under the said Constitution and laws; and writs of error and appeal, in all such cases, shall be made to the supreme court of said Territory, the same as in other cases. The said clerk shall receive in all such cases the same fees which the clerks of the district courts of Oregon Territory now receive for similar services.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That there shall be appointed an attorney for said Territory, who shall continue in office for four years, unless sooner removed by the President, and who shall receive the same fees and salary as the attorney of the United States for the present Territory of Oregon. There shall also be a marshal for the Territory appointed, who shall hold his office for four years, unless sooner removed by the President, and who shall execute all processes issuing from the said courts, when exercising their jurisdiction as circuit and district courts of the United States; he shall perform the duties, be subjected to the same regulation and penalties, and be entitled to the same fees as the marshal of the district court of the United States for the present Territory of Oregon; and shall, in addition, be paid two hundred dollars annually as a compensation for extra services.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That the governor, secretary, chief justice and associate justices, attorney, and marshal, shall be nominated, and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appointed by the President of the United States. The governor and secretary to be appointed as aforesaid shall, before they act as such, respectively, take an oath or affirmation, before the district judge, or some justice of the peace in the limits of said Territory, duly authorized to administer oaths and affirmations by the laws now in force therein, or before the chief justice or some associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, to support the Constitution of the United States, and faithfully to discharge the duties of their respective offices; which said oaths, when so taken, shall be certified by the person by whom the same shall have been taken, and such certificates shall be received and recorded by the said secretary among the executive proceedings; and the chief justice and associate justices, and all other civil officers in said Territory, before they act as such, shall take a like oath or affirmation, before the said governor or secretary, or some judge or justice of the peace of the Territory who may be duly commissioned and qualified, which said oath or affirmation shall be certified and transmitted by the person taking the same, to the secretary, to be by him recorded as aforesaid; and afterwards, the like oath or affirmation shall be taken, certified, and recorded, in such manner and form as may be prescribed by law. The Governor shall receive an annual salary of fifteen hundred dollars as Governor, and one thousand dollars as Superintendent of Indian Affairs. The Chief Justice and Associate Justices shall each receive an annual salary of eighteen hundred dollars. The Secretary shall receive an annual salary of eighteen hundred dollars. The said salaries shall be paid quarter-yearly, at the Treasury of the United States. The members of the Legislative Assembly shall be entitled to receive three dollars each per day during their attendance at the sessions thereof, and three dollars each for twenty miles' travel, in going to and returning from the said sessions, estimated according to the nearest usually traveled route. There shall be appropriated annually the sum of one thousand dollars, to be expended by the Governor to defray the contingent expenses of the Territory. There shall also be appropriated annually, a sufficient sum, to be expended by the secretary of the Territory, and upon an estimate to be made by the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, to defray the expenses of the Legislative Assembly, the printing of the laws, and other incidental expenses; and the Secretary of the Territory shall annually account to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States for the manner in which the aforesaid sum shall have been expended.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Utah, shall hold its first session at such time and place in said Territory as the Governor thereof shall appoint and direct; and at said first session, or as soon thereafter as they shall deem expedient, the Governor and Legislative Assembly shall proceed to locate and establish the seat of government for said Territory, at such place as they may deem eligible; which place, however, shall thereafter be subject to be changed by the said Governor and Legislative Assembly. And the sum of twenty thousand dollars, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, is hereby appropriated and granted to said Territory of Utah to be applied by the Governor and Legislative Assembly to the erection of suitable public buildings at the seat of government.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That a Delegate to the House of Representatives of the United States to serve during each Congress of the United States, may be elected by the voters qualified to elect members of the Legislative Assembly, who shall be entitled to the same rights and privileges as are exercised and enjoyed by the delegates from the several other Territories of the United States to the said House of Representatives. The first election shall be held at such time and places, and be conducted in such manner, as the Governor shall appoint and direct; and at all subsequent elections, the times, places, and manner of holding the elections shall be prescribed by law. The person having the greatest number of votes shall be declared by the Governor to be duly elected, and a certificate thereof shall be given accordingly: Provided, That said delegate shall receive no higher sum for mileage than is allowed by law to the delegate from Oregon.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That the sum of five thousand dollars be, and the same is hereby, appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended by and under the direction of the said Governor of the Territory of Utah, in the purchase of a library, to be kept at the seat of government for the use of the Governor, Legislative Assembly, Judges of the Supreme Court, Secretary, Marshal, and Attorney of said Territory, and such other persons, and under such regulations as shall be prescribed by law.

SEC. 15. And be it further enacted, That when the lands in said Territory shall be surveyed under the direction of the Government of the United States, preparatory to bringing the same into market, sections numbered sixteen and thirty-six in each township in said Territory shall be, and the same are here hereby, reserved for the purpose of being applied to schools in said Territory, and in the States and Territories hereafter to be erected out of the same.

SEC. 16. And be it further enacted, That temporarily, and otherwise provided by law, the Governor of said Territory may define the judicial districts of said Territory, and assign the Judges who may be appointed for said Territory to the several districts, and also appoint the times and places for holding Courts in the several counties or subdivisions in each of said judicial districts, by proclamation to be issued by him; but the Legislative Assembly, at their first or any subsequent session, may organize, alter, or modify such judicial districts, and assign the Judges, and alter the times and places of holding the Courts, as to them shall seem proper and convenient.

SEC. 17. And be it further enacted, That the Constitution and laws of the United States are hereby extended over and declared to be in force in said Territory of Utah, so far as the same, or any provision thereof, may be applicable.

Approved September 9, 1850.

UPON the 9th, the coldest day of this "cold term," the thermometer at 7 o'clock in the morning, at Philadelphia, stood at 2 1-2 degrees below zero. At Baltimore, at the same hour, 8 deg. above zero; at Pitrsburg, 12 deg. below zero; at Buffalo, 4 deg. below zero; at Cleveland, 17 to 18 degrees below zero; at Cincinnati, 11 deg. below zero; at Marietta, (O.,) 11 deg. below zero; at Springfield, (Mass.,) 14 deg. below zero; at Hartford, (Conn.,) 21 deg. below zero; at Boston, 3 deg. below zero. The great fall of snow and the terrible cold accompanying it have detained the mails and travel generally throughout the country—at the South as well as the North, the storm South being a deluge of rain instead of snow.

A GENTLEMAN from Buckingham county informs the Petersburg Express, that he has among his domestic animals a large rat, which was caught twelve months ago by a cat; instead of devouring it, the cat nursed and fed it, and they now play and sleep together like cat and kitten.

Courtship of the Elder Adams.

SOME ten years since I spent a college vacation in the town of Weymouth, Norfolk Co., Mass. While there I attended church one Sunday morning, at what was called the old Weymouth meeting house, and heard a sermon from the venerable pastor, Rev. Jacob Norton. About the same time I made Mr. Norton a visit and became much interested in the old gentleman. I mentioned my agreeable visit to an old lady of the parish, whose acquaintance I had made. She informed me that Mr. Norton was ordained their pastor when he was twenty-one years old, and had been with them nearly forty years. She observed that most of his present parishioners could remember his predecessor, the Rev. Mr. Smith, and that he and Mr. Norton had filled the same pulpit for the better part of the last eighty years.

"Mr. Smith" said she "was an excellent man, and a very fine preacher, but he had notions of himself and family—in other words, he was something of an aristocrat."

One day she told me the following anecdote of Parson Smith, and several persons of distinction.

Mr. Smith had two charming daughters. Mary, was the name of the oldest, the other's name I have forgotten. They were admired by the beaux, and envied by the belles of the country around. But while the careful guardians of the pastor's honor were holding a consultation on the subject, it was rumored that two young lawyers—I think both of the neighboring town of Quincy—a Mr. Cranch and a Mr. Adams—were paying their addresses to the Misses Smith. As every man, women and child of a country parish in New England, is acquainted with whatever occurs in the parsons family, all the circumstances of the courtship soon transpired.

Mr. Cranch was of a respectable family of some note, was considered a young man of promise, and altogether worthy of the alliance he sought. He was very acceptable to Mr. Smith and family, and was treated with great respect and cordiality. He was received by the eldest daughter as a lover, and was in fact a young man of great respectibility. He afterwards rose to the dignity of Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Massachusetts, and was the father of the late Judge Cranch of the district of Columbia.

The suiter of the other daughter was John Adams, who afterwards became President of the United States. But at that time, in the opinion of Mr. Smith and family, he gave but little promise of the distinction to which he afterwards arrived. His pretensions were scorned by the family except the young lady to whom his addresses were especially directed. Mr. Smith showed him none of the ordinary civilities of his house; he was not asked to partake of the table; and it was reported that his horse was doomed to share with his master the neglect and mortification to which he was subject, for he was frequently seen shivering with cold and gnawing the post at the parson's door, of long winter evenings. In short it was reported that the parson had intimated to him that his visits were unacceptable, and that he would confer a favor by discontinuing them.

He told his daughter that John Adams was unworthy of her—that his father was an honest man and a tradesman; who had tried to initiate John in the art of husbandry and shoemaking, but without success, and that he had sent him to college as the last resort. He begged her not to think of making any alliance with one so much beneath her.

Miss Smith was one of the most dutiful daughters, but she saw Mr. Adams through a medium very different from that which her father viewed him. She would not for the world disobey or offend her father; but John saw something in her that seemed to say "Persevere," and on that hint he acted.

Mr. Smith, like a good parson and affectionate father, had told his daughter that if they married with his approbation he would preach each of them a sermon on the Sabbath after the joyful occasion; and that they should have the privilege of choosing the text.

The espousal of the eldest daughter, Mary, arrived and she united with Mr. Cranch in the holy bonds, with the approval, the blessing, and the benediction of her parents and friends.

Mr. Smith then said "My dutiful child, I am now ready to prepare your sermon for next Sunday. What do you select four your text?"

"My dear father" said Mary, "I have selected the last verse of the 10th chapter, of Luke—'Mary hath chosen that good part which shall never be taken from her.'"

"Very good my daughter" said he and so a sermon was preached.

Mr. Adams persevered in his suit, in defiance of all opposition. It was many years after on a different occasion, and in resistence of a very different opposition when he uttered these memorable words—"Sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish, I give my heart and hand to this measure." The circumstance was different, the spirit was the same. Besides he had already carried the main point of attack—the heart of the young lady—and he knew the surrender of the citidel must soon follow.

After the usual hesitation and delay that attended such an unpleasant affair, Mr. Smith seeing that resistance was in vain, surrendered with as much grace as possible, as many a prudent parent has done before and since that time, and Mr. Adams was united to the lovely Miss Smith.

After the marriage was over and all things were settled in quiet, Mrs. Adams remarked to her father, "You preached sister Mary a sermon on the occasion of her marriage. Won't you preach me one likewise?"

"Yes, my dear girl!" said Mr. Smith, "choose your text and you shall have a sermon."

"Well," said the daughter, "I have chosen the thirty-third verse of the seventeenth chapter of Luke—'For John came neither eating bread nor drinking wine, and ye say he hath a devil."

"If Mary was the most beautiful daughter, the other had the most wit."

The old lady, my informant, looked me archly in the face, when she repeated this passage and observed:

I could not ascertain whether the last sermon was ever preached.

It may not be in appropriate to remark how well these ladies justified the preference of the distinguished individuals who had sought them in marriage. Of them it will hardly be extravagent to say, they were respectively an honor to their husbands, the boast of their sex, and the pride of New England.

Mrs. Adams in particular—who from the elevated position in which her husband was placed before the world, was brought before the public eye—was supposed to hold the same elevated rank with the gentle sex that Mr. Adams did among men; and is reported to have rendered her husband much assistance in his multiplied labors of the pen.

Tunnels.

THE United States has 67 tunnels on canals and railways, the longest of which is about 1 mile.

England has 48 canal tunnels, of an aggregate length of 40 miles, the longest being over 3 miles, on the Huddersfield Canal. She has also 79 railway tunnels, 49 of which amount to 33 miles, the longest being 3 miles.

The longest tunnel of which we have record is one in the district of Schemnitz, in Hungary. Its length is variously stated at from 10 1-2 to 11 1-2 miles. It is used to drain an extensive series of mines, and also for the transportation of ore on railway cars.

In France there are 56 tunnels on railways, and 8 on canals, 36 of which are of an aggregate length of 45.4 miles. The largest of small size is 7.45 miles, and that of large dimensions, 3.5 miles. The Rouen and Havre road has 8 tunnels; Paris and Lyons also 8.

On the German railways are 10 tunnels.

In Sardinia there is a tunnel 2 miles long, through Mt. Giovi, on the Genoa and Turin railway. On this road, in 25 miles through the Apennines, are 9 tunnels.—[Scientific American.

THERE were found in the United States in 1850, 2,555 persons over 100 years of age. This shows that one person in 9,000 will be likely to live to that age. The French census of 1851 shows only 102 persons over 100 years old, though their population was larger, by more than one third, than the population of this country. Old age is, therefore, attained among us much more frequently than in France.

Is Mormonism a Religious Paradox?

ARTICLE II.

CONTINUED.

IT now becomes our duty to inquire into the nature and calling of the officers, or administrators, of the Church and Kingdom of God; and to ascertain who are duly authorized to administer in the ordinances of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

In every age of the world whenever or wherever God has had a people, he has had duly authorized messengers, who have communicated unto that people his will. Adam was the immediate mouth-piece of God, in his day, to his own descendants. Enoch was a prophet of God, and bore a message from the Lord to the people in his day; he walked and talked with the Lord, and finally the Lord translated him. Noah was a prophet, also, and "a Preacher of Righteousness;" he held direct communications with the Lord, and was instructed by him in relation to all the moves that he made, in regard to his preaching, as well as the deliverance of his household, and the building of the ark. Abraham, besides being "the father of the faithful," was also a prophet of God, and was under the Lord's directions in all things; he conversed with angels, and communed with the Lord, and was under his guidance. If he had a promise of posterity, it was from the Lord; if he offered up his son, it was because the Lord told him to do it; and if he afterwards was prevented from offering the sacrifice, it was because the Lord interposed; if he went from his own country, it was because the Lord said to him, "Get thee up from thy father's house and kindred, and go to a land that I will show thee of, that I will give unto thee, and to thy seed, for an inheritance;" "and he went up not knowing whither he went." Lot was also a prophet of God, and was led and directed by the angels of the Lord from Sodom. Isaac and Jacob were also prophets; had communication with the Lord and angels, prophesied and blessed their children, were priests over their households, and were heirs with Abraham, of the promises made to their illustrious predecessor. Moses was also a prophet, and had a direct and especial commission, from the Lord, to lead the children of Israel from Egyptian bondage. Aaron had a direct commission from the Lord, and was set apart, by express revelation, to be the mouth-piece of Moses to the children of Israel; he officiated also in the Priesthood, which was after him called the Aaronic Priesthood, and which no person had a right to officiate in, except he were "a literal descendant of Aaron and of the tribe of Levi." The prophets all came with the burthen of the word of the Lord, and all "holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." And any, or all messengers, or administrators, either under the Antediluvian, the Patriarchal, or Mosaic economy, going without being sent, were considered as imposters, and treated accordingly: and hence Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and others, utter the heaviest denunciations upon prophets who "prophesy in their own name, when God has not sent them;" the great evil is that they speak their own words instead of the words of the Lord. Jer. xiv says, "The prophets prophesy lies in my name; I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, neither spake unto them. . . . . By sword and famine shall these prophets be consumed . . . . . and the people to whom they prophesy shall be cast out." Ezekiel xiii says, "Mine hand shall be upon the prophets that see vanity and divine lies; they shall not be among the assembly of my people; neither shall they be written in the writing of the house of Israel."

When John the Baptist came preaching repentance and baptism for the remission of sins, he was set apart for this especial purpose; first, as a legitimate Aaronic priest, being son of Zachariah, who was priest of the Jews, and therefore had a legitimate right, by birth, to officiate; and secondly, by direct appointment, through an holy angel, (Gabriel,) as the forerunner and precurser of Jesus Christ, who "came to prepare his way, and make his path straight." When Jesus came his birth was also proclaimed by the same angel; he acknowledged and obeyed John's baptism, and so strong did this belief prevail that the Jews dare not say that John's baptism was not valid, and that he was not a prophet sent of God. John, in his turn, bears testimony of Jesus, and says, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world;" he was the promised Messiah, the annointed of the Lord.

The Twelve Apostles were called, set apart and ordained by Jesus, as his witnesses; as well as the Seventies. The Twelve were to be his special witnesses, among all nations; and the Seventies being set apart by him, were also to preach the Gospel, and bear witness of Jesus. Like the ancient Prophets, the disciples had no hand in their own calling or election, hence Jesus said, "Ye have not chosen me; but I have chosen you." And as Jesus said, "The words that I speak I speak not of myself; but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works." So the disciples were told not to "think beforehand what they should speak, nor to premeditate; for it should be given unto them in the same hour what they should speak;" hence, like other prophets, "they spake as they were moved upon, by the Holy Ghost;" their decisions, in cases of difficulties, were also decided in this way; hence when the Apostles met to decide upon the question of circumcision, they said, "It seemeth good unto us, and to the Holy Ghost." They were authorized to act in the name of the Lord; thus, it was said, "He that receiveth you, receiveth me, and receiveth him that sent me; and he that rejecteth you, rejecteth me, and rejecteth him that sent me." Their acts were also recognized by the Lord, as his sent ambassadors; it was said of them, "Whatsoever you shall bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever you shall loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven; whosesoever sins you remit, shall be remitted; and whosesoever sins ye retain, shall be retained." Thus they stood, as the Lord's representatives, with authority to administer, in the ordinances of the Gospel, upon the earth. Hence the church was "built upon the foundation of Apostles, and Prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." In writing to the Ephesians, Paul speaks of other officers, who were also authorized to administer in the Gospel; he says, "And he gave some apostles; and some prophets; and some evangelists; and some pastors and teachers." We find also the offices of elders, bishops and deacons, elsewhere specified. Hence Timothy is called a bishop, and his duties defined. Peter, in writing to churches scattered abroad, says, "The elders which are among you I exhort; who am also an elder . . . feed the flock of God which are among you taking the oversight . . . not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind."

We gather from the above, that the officers in the primitive church were apostles, prophets, pastors, teachers, evangelists, elders, bishops and deacons; and all of these held their offices, or priesthood, by divine appointment: for not only were the Apostles called and chosen; but the others were also. Hence Paul was called by the Lord Jesus, and afterwards ordained by Annanias; and seven Deacons also, after being chosen, by the Apostles, to administer in temporal things, were by them ordained to that office. Acts vi. Timothy was "set apart by prophecy, and by laying on of hands." And Paul, in speaking of the Gospel ministry, priesthood, or authority, says, "No man taketh this honor upon himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron." The question necessarily arises, how was Aaron called? God spake to Moses, and told him to set apart his brother Aaron for his spokesman, and said: "I will be with thy mouth, and with his mouth, and will teach you what ye shall do; and he shall be thy spokesman unto the people; and he shall be, even he shall be to thee instead of a mouth, and thou shalt be to him instead of God." Exo. v. I know of no better phrase to use here than one made use of in the Church of England, "As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be worlds without end, amen." For as prophets and patriarchs, seers and revelators, were called by revelation and set apart by the Lord in all ages, so were apostles, prophets, pastors, teachers, evangelists, elders, bishops, deacons, and all the officers of the church, in the Apostles' days, under the Gospel dispensation, and we know of no other way than that appointed by the Lord, and cannot conceive of the propriety of any other administration, than one duly authorized of the Lord, as anciently. Paul does indeed write to Timothy, and tells him to "preach the word, be instant, in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all, long suffering and doctrine; for the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine." Timothy might very reasonably have asked, how will they get clear of it? for if they had prophets, they would come with the burthen of the word of the Lord. If they had apostles, elders, inspired men, they would speak as they were moved by the Holy Ghost; and with such men as were then in the church called of God, and set apart to the ministry, they could not avoid hearing the truth, "whether they would hear, or whether they would forbear." Paul, however, explains the matter; they would go, he says, to manufacturing preachers of their own, who would not be particular what they taught; as if men-made preachers had anything to do with God. He says, "After their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." 2 Tim. iv. That Paul was a true prophet is very evident from the present state of things, in the religious world. For if the religion taught by Jesus and his Apostles be true, the present systems of religion are false. If the present doctrines and ordinances are true, those taught by Jesus and his disciples were false; for they are not alike, either in doctrines, ordinances, administrations or authority. Have they Apostles? No. Prophets? No. Pastors, Teachers, and Evangelists? (inspired men)? No. They do not even believe in inspired men. Do they baptize adults, by immersion, for the remission of sins, having authority? No. Do they lay hands, on those baptized, as above, for the gift of the Holy Ghost? No. Do they speak in tongues and prophecy? No. When persons are sick, do they send for the elders of the church to pray for them and anoint them with oil in the name of the Lord? see James v. No. Have they visions and revelations? No. Does the Holy Spirit lead them into all truth? No. Have they one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism? No. What have they? Just what Paul said they should have "a form of godliness; but deny the power." They have "heaped to themselves teachers who have turned away their ears from the truth and turned them unto fables," even the theories, dogmas and opinions of men. It is because the Mormons believe in the religion of Jesus that they are denounced and persecuted, and the religion of the Apostles is as much a paradox to the present professors of religion, as Mormonism is. There is not a church in existence, but the Mormon, that would admit Jesus, Paul, Peter, or any of the ancient Apostles, to preach to them. They call their churches after them, and profess to believe in them dead, but would reject the living testimony; like the ancient Jews, who "garnished the sepulchres of the Prophets," dead, and killed all the live ones that came. But lest we should be considered too censorious, let us recapitulate in brief.

We have proved from Scripture that they taught, anciently, faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; repentance of sins, and baptism of adults, by immersion, in the name of Jesus, for the remission of sins; the laying on of hands, for the gift of the Holy Ghost; that the Holy Ghost gave dreams, visions, prophecy, tongues, interpretations; that it led into all truth, brought things past to remembrance, and showed things to come. That this same spirit, and these gifts and blessings, were to be continued wherever the gospel was preached, and believed in. We have referred to the resurrection of the dead and eternal judgment. We have shown that there were Apostles, Prophets, Pastors, Teachers, Evangelists, Elders, Bishops, Deacons, &c., and that all these were inspired men. Now, if we have not got these things in full, both in doctrines, ordinances, and priesthood, we have not the Gospel, but something else; and Paul says, "If we or an angel from heaven preach any other doctrine than that which we have preached, let him be accursed." A gentleman with whom we conversed on this subject, in Liverpool, England, President of the Bible Society, who criticised severely the principles as we proceeded, remarked, "I cannot contradict your statements, sir, the Scriptures sustain you, throughout;" but on viewing the whole subject, exclaimed, "These are fearful conclusions; why, you unchurch us all!" We replied, "Are the Scriptures true, sir? If so, you have unchurched yourselves. I merely quote the words of your own Bible. Which is better, to manfully meet the truth, or fearfully to hide our heads, smother our conscience, and shun the investigation?" On another occasion, whilst descanting on this subject, in the city of Newry, Ireland, after speaking at some length to a large congregation, a gentleman rose, and said, "Will you inform me, sir, what is to become of our ancient fathers?" "Be easy," interrupted another. "Sure, and I won't be easy at all. There's my father, and grandfather, and great-grandfather, all of them laying among the silent dead, and this gentleman comes and tells us we are all wrong; sure, and I won't be easy, and see the dead disturbed." "The gentleman will explain that matter, Murphy," was replied. Whereupon, we thought it our turn to speak; which we did, by informing them that the dead were in the hands of God, and that it was the living we had to do with; that we were simply explaining the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and had pointed out the officers, doctrines, and blessings associated with that Gospel; that perhaps an apology was due to the citizens of that place, by us, as they had a variety of churches among them. Now, if the Church of England, the Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists, or any of the various orders, taught faith, repentance, baptism to adults, by immersion, for the remission of sins, and the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost; if they had Apostles, Prophets, Pastors, Teachers, Evangelists, gifts, healings, tongues, miracles, &c., &c., we asked their pardon. As these things were associated with the ancient Gospel, and it was only those churches which did not possess these blessings, that we considered false.

In attempts to cover over the naked, threadbare, patched, and fabulous systems of the present day, every kind of clumsy subterfuge is brought into requisition. On the one hand, we are told that forms are of no use, it is the spirit and power that we want; when they are again asked for the gifts and blessings of the Holy Ghost, healings, visions, revelations, and other manifestations of the power of God; we are very gravely told these were only intended for the Apostles' day. Thus, when we talk of ordinances and forms, we are presented with power; when we ask for power we are told it is not needed. Now we think if attention to form was of so much importance that for preaching another Gospel men should be accursed; and the observance of ordinances was of so much importance that "except a man was born of water and the spirit, he should in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven," that a departure from these things is rather a serious matter; and furthermore, Apostles, prophets, pastors, teachers and evangelists were not placed in the church for the establishment of Christianity; but Paul says, "For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ," and for how long? During the Apostles' day only? No; "Until we all come, in the unity of the faith and the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, &c. Ephe. iv. But these men-manufactured preachers must find some pretext to cover their shame. No wonder that they are indignant at Mormonism. It is too plain, too scriptural, and too straightforward. We have noticed how men of God, in former days, were called to the ministry, and empowered to officiate in the gospel; let us briefly notice how men make their ministers. In most instances, the parents of children set them apart to the ministry instead of the Lord; not because God calls them, but because they are generally fit for nothing else; they go to college, a sort of mill for manufacturing ministers; they are put into the hopper, ground and bolted, and come out Parsons, fine or coarse, as the case may be; Catholic or Protestant, Church of England Puseyite, Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Universalist, or otherwise, according to the nature of the mill, and the kind of business done there; they are ordained, or not, according to circumstances, and sent forth into the world, as ministers of the Lord Jesus: with creeds, faith and ordinances as dissimilar as light and darkness; yet all sent of God, and all preachers of the Gospel; so they say, and all denying the ancient Gospel, as taught by Jesus and his Apostles. If Paul were here, he would say that his prophecy to Timothy was fulfilled, and that men were now literally "heaping to themselves teachers, having itching ears, who were turning the people's ears away from the truth, and turning them unto fables." Some there are who are yet more foolish than the above, and tell you that education and intelligence are not necessary, and that God chose the weak things of the world, and base things, and the things that are not, &c., &c. And what then? They seem to think that all the capital stock required for the ministry is that a man be an absolute fool. Now if God chose fishermen and publicans, he gave them a "mouth and wisdom that all their adversaries could not gainsay nor resist." We may have spoken plain in the above; the subject, however, is one that requires plainness; we wish not to be misunderstood, and are prepared to substantiate all that we have said. We cannot conceive that a Gospel, true eighteen hundred years ago, can be false now. In all our researches, we find no one authorized to change the Gospel, yet we find innumerable systems introduced that are scarcely worthy the name of counterfeit; or, if admitted, the attempt at imitation is so clumsy, that any school-boy, with a Bible in his hands, can detect the counterfeit; and were it not for the force of education, and the power of tradition and religious superstition, we should consider that nothing but the most unblushing effrontery, or consumate ignorance, could attempt to palm such systems off upon the world as the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Two and two made four eighteen hundred years ago; two and two make four to-day; the animal called a cow, then, is not now a horse; fire possessed the properties of heat, then, and water the power to allay thrist; they possess the same properties to-day. Why, then, have we changed the Gospel in its ordinances, doctrines, officers, gifts, and powers? and having changed and perverted it, call it by the old name? Mormonism may be a paradox to others; such conduct is certainly a paradox to us, the which we cannot reconcile, either with Scriptures, reason, honesty, or common sense.

We shall, in our next, briefly examine our authority, and notice the gathering, and some other traits of Mormonism.

TO BE CONTINUED.

THE MORMON.

To the Elders and Saints Scattered Abroad throughout the United States and the World:

DEAR BRETHREN,—As a year will soon have transpired since the commencement of the publication of THE MORMON, I have thought proper to address you a few words on the subject of its continuance. In relation to the past I have very little to say, being satisfied, from the many eulogiums that I have received from various parts of the world, especially in the United States, that general satisfaction has been given, and that my labors, and those of my collaborateurs, have been duly appreciated; but, as a new volume is on the eve of commencement, it becomes necessary to make definite and permanent arrangements; not only for the simple publication of the paper, but for the obtaining of the best, the most reliable and expeditious information possible pertaining to Mormonism and its interests, from all parts of the earth; and not only that which immediately concerns us, as a people, but also news of general interest, the manners and customs of tribes and nations, political information, diplomatic intrigues, wars, commotions, remarkable phenomena, or anything pertaining to the arts, science, literature, politics, or religion. We, therefore, call upon the Elders, in all parts of the world, to assist us in this department of the news, that our paper may be fresh, full, and intelligent; receiving from all, and communicating to all, the most full and reliable information; that THE MORMON may be the mirror, or reflex of truth, a palladium of knowledge, and the true representative of Mormonism in the world.

Permit me here to return my thanks for the many marks of kindness of this nature received during the past year, and to solicit a renewal and extension of the same. Many of our Elders who are scattered in distant Islands and Continents, and who may feel solitary and alone, can furnish us with items, and an experience, that those floating in a more balmy atmosphere, and riding on less turbid waters, do not possess. The discovery of new continents washed by Polar seas, in the frozen regions of the North, are frequently quite as interesting as discoveries made in the latitudes of the torrid zone, in the regions of eternal spring. Their struggles with adversity and experience among barbarians, or civilized savages, though hailing from a cold, icy, frozen atmosphere, may not be without their influence upon the general santé; I therefore solicit the cordial co-operation of all our Elders throughout the world, in this matter; and also to forward us interesting papers of the latest date from their various locations, in France, Germany, Italy, Sweden, Norway, Australia, China, East Indies, Gibraltar, and the Sandwich and Hawaiian Islands. And I respectfully solicit, under the auspices of President F. D. Richards, that the Presiding Elders of London, Liverpool, Birmingham, Manchester, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Dublin, Isles of Man, and Jersey, appoint a person, in those several cities, whose duty it shall be to obtain, immediately previous to the sailing of each American steamer, at least, one of their best papers, and forward it to THE MORMON office. Permit me here to state, that I am under many obligations to President F. D. Richards for his cordial co-operation in the spread of THE MORMON, and also to his co-laborers, and to assure them that a continuance of the same will be duly appreciated.

From Utah, news is always welcome; being the great metropolis of Mormonism, the land of our home, the dwelling place of the Saints, the Zion of our God; we always hail, with pleasure, any news from that quarter. We cordially thank our numerous correspondents for the interest manifested for us, in the far off city of Gotham; but especially, in this category, would we remember our old and esteemed friend, the Hon. George A. Smith, whose position as Church Historian puts him in possession of the most reliable news, and whose punctuality in sending it, by far exceeds the mails. To our friends in California, San Bernardino, and Carson Valley, we are under like obligations, as well as to correspondents all over the United States. In fact, when I look around, I don't know where to stop; and were it not that I was throwing off a load of obligations every week, I should be afraid of sinking under the accumulating weight; but as we are all engaged in one common cause, if you will do your best, I will do mine, and we will call it equal; for I can assure all concerned that were I to follow my own inclinations I would no more be editor, than many of you like to be writers; but occupying this place, for the present, I don't want the thing half done, and therefore call for co-operation, that we may mutually contribute and mutually receive. There might be a little improvement in that respect in many parts of the United States. We ought to hear weekly from such places as Philadelphia, Minersville, Cincinnati, St. Louis, and Texas, and frequently from Alton, St. Josephs, Bluff City, and many other places. Such communications, whilst they are interesting and amusing to the Saints, are, at the same time, a source of improvement and gratification to the writers.

As one object of my being here is to superintend the emigration, I would remark that I have been paying especial attention to that subject for some time past, and that I am now negotiating with railroad companies, that I have competent brethren engaged in searching out routes and locations, and ascertaining the value of cattle, wagons, &c., preparatory to emigration, and that all necessary information in relation to these matters will be published from time to time in THE MORMON. I should be glad to hear from any of our friends in the Western country, in relation to the prices of good cattle, cows, mules, &c., and to have also from St. Josephs, Council Bluffs, and St. Louis a weekly statement of the price of flour, bacon, pork, and the leading articles necessary for an outfit across the plains.

There is now another matter that I wish more especially to lay before the Elders and members of the Church in the United States, which is to urge upon them the necessity of sustaining THE MORMON. To all reflecting minds it must be evident that a paper like this cannot be sustained without a heavy pecuniary outlay; and that it requires more than good wishes and hopes to keep it going. I have frequently said, when I have heard sectarians pray for the poor, that a bag of flour or meal, or a little money, would be much better than all their prayers. So I say, in regard to THE MORMON, don't ask God to do what you won't do, for while many are praying and wishing, I am paying and doing. Many of the Saints, however, have been extremely liberal, and have responded generously to our calls. If this spirit was more general, we should, in many instances, be less embarrassed; as it is, we have kept moving, and do not wish to complain; but as I am here, with my associates, performing a duty, I wish to fulfill it honorably. This is an obligation devolving upon you, in your sphere, as much as it is upon us in ours, and a little energy and exertion from every one will make a very material difference here. I have no public funds to draw upon, and when there is any delinquency I become personally responsible. This I don't object to; but I do think it would be more fair and equal if you were to help me. I wish, therefore, to propose a plan for the Elders to adopt in all their fields of labor; and that is to try to double their subscription; let every member who takes a paper try to get another subscriber; thus, while it will spread the principles of truth, it will also assist us very materially. This is very simple, and can certainly be done very easily; this I shall expect from those under my jurisdiction, in the United States; and I should not feel very much affronted if our friends in Utah, California and England were to do likewise. We have had to encounter much difficulty in Utah, owing to the delinquency of the mails; for some time past we have sent them by the way of San Diego, as we could place no reliance in the other route; this plan we shall adopt during the winter. If there have been irregularities, it has not been our fault, and all that we can promise is to do the best we can. As there is a semi-monthly mail, by the California route, I am in hopes that the papers will be received more regularly.

It affords me very much pleasure to have to state, that since the arrival of myself and brethren in these Eastern States, Mormonism assumes quite another aspect; we have large and flourishing churches in different parts of the States, which are continually increasing; not only by emigration, but also by baptisms. The spirit of the Lord rests among the assemblies of his Saints; the inquirers after truth are many; the floods of falsehood with which this country was deluged, before our arrival, are being dissipated; and the light of eternal Truth is bursting forth with resplendance and glory; and as THE MORMON has been, and is one of the principal agents employed, I confidently anticipate the co-operation of our brethren in extending its circulation.

Respectfully, &c. JOHN TAYLOR.

NEWS SUMMARY.

DURING the late gales and severe cold weather, much distress, suffering and loss of life have been experienced on the coast in this vicinity by those who "go down to the sea in ships;" especially so, has it been with the New York and New Jersey pilots.

On the morning of the 10th inst. the pilot boat E. K. Collins went ashore near Fire Island inlet, and four out of eight of her brave boys perished—the rest were badly frozen. The boat Sylph had two of her pilots and the boatkeeper washed overboard in the severe north-east gale on the 6th inst.; the last only of the three was saved. On the 12th, all the pilot boats and several other vessels in this port had their colors half mast throughout the day, expressive of their sympathy with the suffering and deceased of their class.

The news from California per steamship Northern Light, which arrived here on the 13th, is unimportant, but that from Oregon is indicative of troublous times in that section of country, on account of the difficulties with the Indians. It seems that a regular Indian war has set in, and considerable numbers have already been killed on both sides. The ninth regiment lately sent out from Old Point Comfort will soon be in their midst, and the poor Native American, or Red Man, must be made to "bite the dust," whatever be his grievances.

Elsewhere will be found the European news brought by the Atlantic. It is thought the peace proposition presented by the allies will be rejected by Russia. Louis Napoleon has projected, and is advocating, a European Congress, to the end that European difficulties in general may be brought to a speedy and pacific termination. A pamphlet has been published in France, advocating such a Congress, which is thought to have emanated from the Emperor.

The rumored pending negotiations between the United States and Russia, with the object of becoming allies to oppose the western allied powers of Europe, are probably the effect of over-heated imaginations. A leading article in the New York Daily News of the 14th, however, intimates being in possession of information that, when it shall please his majesty to divulge, may throw some light on this matter. We extract:

"If Providence, weary of its political crimes, has, indeed, doomed the British Government to utter overthrow; if the finger of fate be, at last, approaching close to that hour which will mark the downfall of Napoleon III; if the people of Spain and Italy are at last to quaff the waters of Freedom, and Republican liberty everywhere to be released from its bonds and established as our own has been, Palmerston will make this last desperate move to interfere with American affairs upon the American continent—and another year will see the star spangled banner waving over the beautiful islands of the Carribean and on the ridges of Panama, while hands which have not lost all the cunning of their work in years gone by, directed this time by heads more used to the atmosphere of rational liberty, will plant ensigns of their own device, emblazoned with the rights of the people on turrets which the Coup d'Etat and the Balance of Power now fondly deem inaccessible!

We could expatiate upon our reasons for this entire confidence, but we will abstain from doing so until further details of the circumstances which have called forth our remarks have been made public. Then we may intimate that there are volcanic elements boiling beneath the very fastnesses of the coalition which even their philosophy has not quite discovered.

For to-day, we will only suggest that it is perilous to threaten the United States as a democratic nation and people—the spear point brandished towards us may attract a thunderbolt!"

In our last summary we reported a serious disaster on the Hudson River Railroad, since which another accident has happened on the same road nearly as disastrous.

The mail train which left Albany at four o'clock on Sunday afternoon, and which consisted of two locomotives, two freight, one baggage and three passenger cars, arrived at Spuyten Devil Creek Bridge at half-past one o'clock Monday morning.

The first locomotive passed over and had just reached the southern side, when the second ran off the track, breaking through the bridge, and making a chasm of at least a hundred feet in length. The locomotive sank at once, dragging with it the tender, one baggage and two freight cars, and throwing one of the passenger cars off the track.

The engineer and fireman on the first engine were both killed. The engineer and fireman on the second were badly scalded especially the latter whose recovery is said to be very doubtful. A number of the passengers were injured but none seriously.

ON the first page we publish the act of Congress approved, Sept. 9th 1850, which gave to the then provisional government of Deseret, the organization of the Territory of Utah. The object of its publication is, that those who are constantly gathering from various portions of the earth to that Territory may have an opportunity to become acquainted with the fundamental laws of their new home; and also to afford a copy that our patrons generally, though they may have read it repeatedly, can refer to at any time to refresh their minds on any particular point.

"No Speaker yet," further comment is unnecessary as the change since our last has only been to lessen the prospect of an election.

P. S.—A telegraphic dispatch announces the arrival at Halifax on the 16th inst., of the steamship America with five days later news from Europe; the tenor of which is, that Russia is gaining advantages in the East and in the vicinity of the Crimea, and seems to evince but little disposition to make peace unless she can have it about her own way. The prospects of peace are very meagre at present. The council of war, however, which is soon to be held in Paris by the Allied Powers may change the aspect of things, by either making greater concession to Russia, or taking a more decided stand to open the spring campaign with renewed and redoubled diligence, under an augmented alliance with some of the smaller powers which must eventually take sides—as Sweden has concluded to do—in the great struggle now pending.

The St. Louis Mormon Social Tea Party.

ON Thursday, Jan. 1st, 1856, at 5 o'clock P. M., the Latter Day Saints, of St. Louis and vicinity, met to enjoy the New Year's evening, in our large and commodious Chapel, on the cor. of 4th and Washington Avenue, which was filled to its utmost capacity with Saints and friends, all bearing on their countenances the agreeable indication of joy and satisfaction. Were we to judge by the merry faces, and lively chit-chat of all present, we should say, that Christmas with them generally had been spent merrily, and that their prospects were cheering for the incoming year. It commenced at least to all appearance happily.

Elder Jas. H. Hart, our worthy President, was called to preside. We may here remark, that some of our brethren and sisters in particular, had busied themselves the day previous, in decorating our meeting-house, with evergreens, wreaths of flowers, flags and pictures chosen from the parlors of the Saints. They had been especially profuse in decorating the President's chair; having most artistically adorned it with evergreens, fruits and rosetts. The graces well became the man, and the man as well became the graces.

There was the broad flag of our glorious Union, suspended across the house; also one on each side of the pulpit, having on them the initials L. D. S. Over the President's chair, in needle work, executed by one of our trusty sisters, were the words—

"United we stand, divided we fall."

The meeting was opened by prayer from Elder Chas. Edwards. The President then addressed the Saints briefly, exhorting them to throw off all undue restraint, and be free, and enjoy themselves as the Saints of God, cautioning them at the same time not to overstep the bounds of moderation, but to act and conduct themselves as those who know how to enjoy liberty and blessings without abusing them.

The evening's entertainment for the most part, consisted of songs, dialogues, recitations from various of our brethren and sisters, and music from our own "Mormon Brass Band."

There was served up to us in due season, of which also our poor gratuitously partook, a variety of edibles and et ceteras, calculated to make the entertainment pleasant, agreeable, and inviting. These not-to-be-despised things were got up under the prudent direction of Bishop Harris, who knows how to serve up such good things in excellent apple-pie order.

All things worked most harmoniously, and the evening was spent very agreeable, every thing being conducted in that excellent order so characteristic of the Mormons. There was nothing unpleasant, nothing to give sadness to the heart; or depress the spirits and not (which is something new under the sun) a grumbler! All our faculties were so pleasantly engaged, that we scarce thought of time; but as a time of parting must come from all such meetings ours came about 12 o'clock.

After a few remarks from the President, who contrasted very beautifully the liberty we enjoy in this Nation, compared with many others and also the liberty we now enjoy, compared with what many of our brethren have had even in this country, in times past. He called upon the Saints to thank God for all the blessings they enjoyed.

The meeting closed with prayer by Bishop Yates; when the Saints separated, feeling satisfied they had commenced the New Year happy cheerful and prosperous.

S. J. LEES, Secretary.

From our San Bernardino Correspondent.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Dec. 3, 1855.

To the Editor of the Mormon:

DEAR SIR: Your paper comes regularly to our office, and is considered one of the most interesting papers that is read at this place. We have peace and quietness here at this time, though a few days ago we had a tempest in a tea-pot about Indian difficulties. Some on the frontier neighborhood became alarmed at some demonstrations that Indians were making; the people feared that they had hostile intentions towards the whites. Bro. Rich, Gen. Hunt, and several, went to the place of alarm and held a council with the chiefs and settled the matter, apparently satisfactory to both parties. Another circumstance tending to increase the excitement, was the fact of there being a general war between the Red Men and the Pale Faces in the Northern counties of this State, Oregon and Washington Territories, and according to the last accounts a battle was fought between some 400 U. S. Regulars, and about 300 Indians, and the conflict was ended by the Regulars retreating, the more full account of which you will probably learn by the papers.

Brothers Green, Serine and Tanner, went to San Diego lately, to look for a coal mine which was discovered by some of our people, of the Mormon Batalion, while they were encamped at that place, during the war with Mexico. The above Brethren were successful in finding it, and they obtained a lease of 40 acres of land for 15 years, from the city trustees, giving the citizens of San Diego the liberty of taking 20 shares at $100 per share; one half paid to the discoverers, and the other half to be applied to the purpose of prospecting the coal found. It is said to be of an excellent quality, and if it proves to be abundant it will be valuable to both the State and and proprietors, or discoverers.

Brothers P. B. Lewis, and Woodbery, from the Sandwich Island Mission, are here, and will probably remain during the winter. The mail carriers met Brother Lyman & Co., on the Rio Virgin, all well and in good spirits. Brother C. C. Rich, has had bad health this fall, but he is improving and gaining strength. We elected him Mayor of the city yesterday.

THE MORMON.

Measures are being adopted here by the authorities, to build a Church, that will accommodate about 1000 persons. With these few items of news I will conclude, desiring and praying for your prosperity as a Servant of the Lord, and your success as Editor and proprietor of THE MORMON. Your Brother in the Everlasting Covenant, D. M. THOMAS.

Thirty-Fourth Congress.—First Session.

SENATE.

JAN. 10, 1856.

Several memorials from Naval Officers complaining of injustice to them by the Naval Retiring Board were presented.

A debate ensued as to the propriety of a remedy in cases where errors of judgment had deprived the country of the services of meritorious officers.

Messrs. Broadhead, Benjamin, Jones of Tennessee, Mallory, and Yancy, participated in the debate.

The subject was informally passed over, and the Senate adjourned till Monday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

At 1 o'clock this morning Mr. Paine, after his ineffectual effort to place Mr. Orr in the chair until election of Speaker, made a similar motion, substituting the name of Mr. Smith of Alabama, which was likewise laid on the table.

An incidental discussion followed, involving the merits of Know Nothingism, Catholicism and other subjects. Two additional votes were then taken, the last resulting as follows:

ONE HUNDRED AND FOURTH BALLOT.

Banks	88	Richardson	62
Fuller	27	Pennington	6
Scattering	4	Necessary to a choice	94

Much time was consumed in calling the roll on various questions, including motions to adjourn. Many gentlemen were sleeping or dozing in their seats and on sofas, and aroused by their brother members on guard when their votes were required.

Several stigmatized the scenes enacted last night as disgraceful. They would be willing to stay hours longer if they thought any good could be effected by it, but under the circumstances they thought it better to go home and end the farce.

Mr. Winslow moved the House adjourn to Friday.

The Democrats, in giving their reasons for voting in the affirmative, notwithstanding the resolution of their caucus not to adjourn or take a recess till the election of a Speaker, said they thus resolved in good faith, in order to give the majority an opportunity to organize. Having had a fatiguing test, they were now satisfied of the impracticability of the experiment.

Mr. Letcher said he was perfectly satisfied that the prospect of some colored "Republicans" for the Kingdom of Heaven was better now than the election of Speaker, of which there was no earthly probability.

Mr. Etheridge remarked that the Democrats had taken the responsibility by holding one hundred and fifty other men in chains.

Mr. Bowie replied by saying the "Americans" have the power to organize by uniting on the Democratic candidate for Speaker. Let them come up and save the country.

Mr. Washburn of Maine defended the "Republicans" from the charge that they are responsible for the failure to organize.

Mr. Lindley had seen no disgraceful acts, but merely good humor, produced by several gentlemen in debate.

Mr. Giddings remarked that so far as relates to the conduct of gentlemen on this floor, it was equal to his expectation. [Laughter.] He tendered to his friends, the "Republicans," his thanks for their kind and decorous behaviour, and said to the Democrats that their conduct was better than he had expected. As no good could be accomplished by prolonging the contest, he voted with other "Republicans" to adjourn. At 8 1-2 o'clock, the House adjourned to Friday, by ten majority.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

JAN. 11, 1856.

Mr. Sneed withdrew a resolution heretofore offered by him, calling Mr. Orr to the chair till a Speaker be elected, believing as the House on Wednesday refused to order the main question, it could not be adopted.

Voting was then resumed, with the following result:

Mr. Zollicoffer offered a resolution declaring that in conformity with the fundamental principles of this great and popular government, it is the duty of all candidates for political positions fully and frankly to avow their opinions on important political questions involved in their elections, especially when interrogated by the electors whose votes they are seeking. Mr. Zollicoffer said his object was to elicit certain replies from Mr. Richardson on the Slavery question, which Mr. Richardson declared himself ready now to answer. A debate ensued, involving the propriety of the passage of the resolution, which was finally adopted by a vote of 155 for, to 38 against.

This opens a wide field for discussion.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

JAN. 12, 1856.

Mr. Campbell of Ohio moved that the resolution confining debate to ten minutes be suspended until Wednesday, unless otherwise ordered. The reason for the motion, Mr. Campbell said, was that it would be impossible for candidates for the Speakership to define their positions in accordance with Mr. Zollicoffer's resolution within so short a time. He offered, for the use of candidates, a scrap book, containing all the party platforms of all the political parties of the country for the last twenty years, together with the ancient platforms of the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence, and would also refer them to the Bible, had not that book been removed from the Congressional Library to make room for the works of Eugene Sue. [Laughter.]

A debate ensued, in which several members expressed opposition to turning the House into a debating society and opening the boundless sea of debate.

Mr. Richardson thought he could get through with his part of the performance within the prescribed ten minutes.

Mr. Campbell, consequently, and at the request of Mr. Richardson, withdrew his motion to suspend.

Mr. Humphrey Marshall suggested that the batches of interrogatories be filed—the candidates to reply in printed publications, at their convenience. [Laughter.]

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

JAN. 15, 1856.

Mr. Millson, (dem.) of Va., wished it to be understood that although he was voting for Mr. Richardson, he in no manner was committed to the line of policy laid down by the democratic caucus, but will hereafter feel free to dispose of his vote where it can be most effectually felt.

Mr. Quitman, (dem.) of Miss., who had ceased to vote for Mr. Richardson, stated the reasons that influenced him again to support that gentleman. The House then voted:

ONE HUNDRED AND TWELFTH BALLOT.

Banks	92	Pennington	8
Richardson	65	Scattering	8
Fuller	34

Mr. Richardson and Mr. Williams voted for Mr. Orr, and Messrs. Boyce and McQueen for Cadwallader.

Mr. Washburn, (black rep.) of Me., offered a resolution that if no candidate, on or before the third ballot next to be taken, receive a majority of all the votes cast, then the vote shall again be called, and the person having the majority of a quorum shall be declared Speaker.

The resolution was laid on the table by a majority of four.

Two votes were then taken.

ONE HUNDRED AND FOURTEENTH BALLOT.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10, 1856.

THE United States Supreme Court to-day sustained the claim of Pearson B. Reading to the extensive Ranche, Buena Ventura, California, thus affirming the principle established in the Fremont case—therefore the fact that Reading joined the forces of this country against Mexico does not invalidate the grant of the last named government.

The Diplomatic dinner, last evening, extended from half-past six o'clock to nine. The corps expressed delight at the amiable hospitality and cordiality of the President and his lady.

The persons present were Mr. Crampton and Secretary Lumley, as the Representatives of England; Mr. Borleau and lady, of France; Mr. Stoeckel and lady, of Russia; Senor Almonte, of Mexico; Mr. Marcoleti and lady, of Nicaragua; Mr. Sibbeon and lady, of Sweden; Senor Escalente, Secretary of Legation, of Spain; D. Andrada and lady, of Brazil; Mr. De Gerolt and Secretary, of Prussia; Mr. Bochsbeneer, of Belgium; Mr. Schleeder, of Breemen; Senor Osma, of Peru; Mr. Molina, of Costa Rica; Mr. Wensrea, of Naples; Mr. Hulsemann, of Austria; General Thomas, Under Secretary of State, and Sidney Webster.

Marine Disaster.

BOSTON, Jan. 10, 1856.

THE schooner Magnolia, Nickerson, from Gonaives for Boston, is at anchor off Nauset, Cape Cod, dismasted, and wants a steamer.

A dispatch from the Highland Light, Cape Cod, dated 10 A. M., says the wind is blowing a gale from the northwest, and the weather is intensely cold.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13, 1856.

A STRONG impression pervades political circles here that our relations with Great Britain are threatening, and serious apprehension are felt and expressed by many Senators—several of them in the confidence of the administration—of an early rupture between the two governments. It is evident that there must be a fight or a back out on one side or the other.

Highly important despatches have been received at the State Department, from England, with reference to the understanding respecting Central American affairs. They will be formally considered by the Cabinet, to-morrow, when their import will be known.

Certain foreign ministers apprehend, on what they consider undoubted authority, that the Walker movement embraces within the scope of its ultimate operations the conquest of Cuba, Porto Rico and St. Domingo; hence their constant watchfulness in that quarter and frequent communications with our government on the subject.

The report of General Shields, made a year ago, in the Senate, has been reproduced, in which Parker H. French is charged with obtaining two thousand dollars worth of government stores on a forged letter of credit, and branding him as an impostor. This has materially operated to damage Mr. French's prospects here.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14, 1856.

IT is reported here, with an air of truth, that England, rather than engage in a war with the United States on the Central American question, will recede from her assumed protectorate over the Bay Islands and the Mosquito Kingdom. It was incorrectly reported here that the last dispatches sent to England were through Mr. Crampton. If any have been sent recently, they went through the regular channel.

Dispatches by the Canada indicate nothing of particular importance.

The difficulty between Messrs. Barksdale and Kennett, mentioned in the report of the proceedings in the House on Saturday, has been amicably adjusted by mutual explanations.

A Democratic caucus was held at the Capitol to-night. Several members manifested a disposition to break from the phalanx, but this was promptly and vigorously opposed by many speakers. One who was present says, never before has such determination been manifested to stand by Mr. Richardson and the platform.

Another Serious Accident on the Hudson River Railroad.

YONKERS, Jan. 14, 1856.

ANOTHER accident occurred on the Hudson River Railroad, about 10 o'clock last night, to the down train from Albany, at Spuyten Devil Creek. The train was drawn by two locomotives, one of which passed over the creek safely, when the bridge gave way, and the other locomotive, with two baggage cars and one passenger car, went into the river. One engineer, one fireman and little boy, have not yet been found. As far as known, no one else is missing or injured.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15, 1856.

THE rumor that the United States and Russia had entered into a conditional offensive and defensive treaty, which, as we learned per advices by the Atlantic, had caused so much excitement in European capitals, probably sprung from the fact that Russia has submitted a draft of a treaty of amity and commerce.

The plurality rule was tabled to-day by the votes of all the Richardson members present—except Messrs. Barclay, Hickman and Vail—joined by the Fullerites and Messrs. L. D. Campbell, Dunn, Harrison, Moore, Scott and Wheeler. Messrs. Doyce, McQueen and Keitt have left Mr. Richardson to-day.

A Republican National Convention, I am informed, has been called to meet at Pittsburg on the 22d February, for the purpose of perfecting a national organization, and providing for a National Delegate Convention on a subsequent day, to nominate candidates for President and Vice-President.

The Atlantic's news exhibits an almost entire indifference on the part of Lord Palmerston for a quiet settlement of our affairs. He has made his last explanation, and has nothing further to offer. The question of peace or its opposite is thus thrown upon our government. The recall of Mr. Buchanan would hasten events. Congress would support the President, and the popular voice of Great Britain, in all probability, would demand the displacement of Palmerston.

Later from California.

Arrival of the Northern Light.

The steamship Northern Light, Capt. E. L. Tinklepaugh, arrived on Saturday evening, from San Juan, via Key West, with 313 passengers and California dates to Dec. 20.

She brings $632,004 from California, and $5,701 from Nicaragua.

The Indians still continue troublesome in Oregon and Washington.

Five hundred expeditionists, under captain Zermon, have landed at Cape St. Lucas.

The Transit route is perfectly healthy, no sickness having occurred among the passengers.

The officers sent out in the Northern Light to examine her coal bunkers for "arms ammunition and munitions of war," discovered none and have returned to New York, satisfied that there were none on board.

In Nicaragua everything is improving under the administration of Rivas and Walker.

The Governments of San Salvador and Honduras have sent letters of recognition to the new Government, and the Minister from Honduras is reported to be on his way to Granada.

Walker is receiving accessions to his forces continually, 200 men having joined him recently.

Granada is rapidly assuming the appearance of an American town. A new pier is in process of construction and other facilities for business are in contemplation.

Col. Kinney is still at San Juan del Norte. A large number of his men have joined Walker recently.

The Northern Light left in the harbor of San Juan, Jan. 4, United States frigate Potomac, Com. Paulding; United States steam sloop Fulton: H. B. M. brig Arab, Capt. Ogle; H. B. M. brig Espelgle, Capt. Lambert; R. M. steamer Solent, Capt. Jellicoe, and American brigantine Oliver. The American steamer Osprey arrived Dec. 30th, and left Jan. 1st.

The ship Siddons, Taylor, from London, went ashore on Carrysfort Reef on the 3d inst. and bilged, Schooner George P. Sloat, Murehond of Philadelphia, with bricks, from Pensacola for Key West, went ashore on the north breaker of Charlotte Harbor, on the 26th ult. and was abandoned.

CALIFORNIA.

The news from California is unimportant, save the efforts of Col. Kewen to enlist filibusters and provide supplies for Walker, in order to carry out which, he was negotiating for the steamer Republic.

The news from Salt Lake was no later than already received.

OREGON.

Great Indian fight near Walla-Walla.

We have dates from Portland Oregon, to the 15th of December. We take the following from The Oregonian of Dec. 15:

We stop the press to say that the steamer Belle has just arrived with startling news.

A battle has been fought by the gallant volunteers of Oregon, under command of Lieut. Colonel Kelly, near Whitman's Station. The Indians have been badly beaten. Capt. Bennet and others fell in leading the gallant charge. Peu-Peu Mox-mox, the great head chief, has been killed, together with a large number of his warriors. We copy from Colonel Kelly's official report:

HEAD QUARTERS, LEFT COLUMN,
1st Regt., O. M. V.,
Camp on Walla-Walla River, Dec. 6, 1855.

To W. H. FARRAR, Adjutant—Sir: Yesterday morning, as my command was on the line of march from the mouth of the Do Shute River to Whitman's Valley, we were attacked by about 400 Indians, with whom we kept up a running fight all day, and for a distance of about ten miles along the Walla-Walla River. At dark on yesterday, the battle was suspended by the Indians withdrawing. We drove them from every position which they took, both in the brushwood along the river bank and on the adjacent hills. This morning the battle was renewed and raged all day. At dark this evening the Indians again withdrew. The number of Indians who fought us has been considerably greater than yesterday, and is supposed to exceed 600. To-morrow morning we expect a renewal of the battle, which in all probability will last for some time to come.

I regret to say that yesterday and to-day we have lost many brave and gallant men, who fell fighting for their country. Subjoined to this dispatch you will find a list of the killed and wounded. The loss of the Indians must be very great, as their killed alone, during the two days, cannot be less than fifty men.

Among their killed on yesterday was the noted chief of the Walla-Walla Valley, the celebrated Peu-peu Mox-mox.

LIST OF KILLED AND WOUNDED.

KILLED.—Capt. Bennett, Co. F. Second Lieut. J. M. Barrow, Co. H; Private Simon L. Van Hageriman.

MORTALLY WOUNDED, SINCE DEAD.—Privates Kelso, Co. A; Henry Crow, Co. H.

MORTALLY WOUNDED, STILL ALIVE.—Caspner Snook, Co. H; Joseph Sturdivant, Co. B; Jesse Fleming, Co. A.

DANGEROUSLY WOUNDED.—Co. H; Captain Layton, Privates T. J. Payne, Nathan Fry and Frank Crabtree; J. B: Gervais, Co. K.

SEVERELY WOUNDED.—Capt. Wilson, Co. A; Capt. Munson, Co. I; Sergeant Major Isaac Miller, Co. H; Private G. W. Smith, Co, B.

SLIGHTLY WOUNDED.—Private F. Duval, Co. A; A. M. Adington, Co. H.

ROBERT THOMPSON.

Gen. Wool' U. S. A., is now, as we learn, engaged in arranging preliminaries for a campaign against the Indians, at an early day.

An express arrived at Roseburg, on the 30th ult., from Little Meadows, on Rogue River, bringing news that a fight had taken place a day or two before at that point. A Mr. Lewis of Capt. Kinney's company, was killed; one of Capt. Kinney's, two of Capt. Williams', and one of Capt. Rice's company were wounded; one other was wounded, but of whose company was not learned.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

The following extract of The Pioneer and Democrat gives the most important news:

By an express just received by acting Governor Mason, brought here yesterday evening by Mr. Bradley, we have intelligence from the command of Lieut. Slaughter, stationed near the forks of White and Green Rivers, by which we are informed, that Lieut. Slaughter has been killed outright, and others mortally wounded. Among the killed are Corporals Berry and Clarandon, (Capt. Wallace's Company,) and wounded privates Beck, Nolan, McMahan and Grace. One man of Capt. Keys' Company of Artillery, mortally—since dead.

One Week Later from Europe.

Arrival of the Atlantic.

THE U. S. M. Steamship Atlantic, Captain West, arrived at this port on Sunday, Jan. 13. By her arrival we have dates to the forenoon of Saturday, the 29th ult. The Atlantic arrived out at 6 o'clock on the morning of Sunday the 23d.

The news brought by the Atlantic is interesting, but not of profound importance. We may say it consists wholly of rumors. The peace negotiations remain in statu quo. Count Esterhazy has reached St. Petersburg, but the result of his mission cannot be known for some time, say until the second week in January. Austria has made known to Prussia the contents of the Western proposals, and has urged Prussia to press their acceptance on Russia. The cabinet of Berlin is reported to have listened to the request, and to have an unusually firm tone in recommending Russia to receive the propositions. The smaller States of Germany have also sent a special envoy, in the person of M. Seebach, the Minister of Saxony, to St. Petersburg, to add the weight of their recommendation.

Rumor asserts positively that Denmark is about to embrace the allied cause, and to conclude a treaty on the same basis as that recently negotiated by Sweden. It is said, however, that in the event of Russia's refusal to accept the suggestions thus universally urged, Austria will not, at once, take so extreme a step as to break off diplomatic relations, but will recall her special envoy. Meanwhile the terms of the Western propositions are kept mysteriously secret; but are whispered to be merely the neutrality of the Black Sea; a remodeling of the Government of the Principalities; freedom of the navigation of the Danube, and in other respects almost the status quo ante bellum. On these terms Russia is believed to be willing to resume conference. But an item of serious difficulty stands in the way—the question of indemnity for the expenses of the war. Lord Palmerston absolutely insists on Russia paying an indemnity, and is so set on this point that he will resign office if unable to carry it against his colleagues. Napoleon expresses himself as indifferent whether an indemnity be paid or not. Turkey obstinately insists, with England, on being repaid by Russia. Austria declares the proposition to be monstrous, and has given notice that if indemnity be demanded from Russia, Austria will demand payment from the Allies for preserving the Principalities. Russia, of course, indignantly refuses to pay the first cent. Napoleon is reported to be desirous of summoning a Congress of Nations—wherein he would reign lord paramount.

We have full details of the fall of Kars, but very confused accounts of the operations that have followed that event. There is nothing from the Crimea. A counsel of war is to be held at Paris to decide on a new plan of campaign.

The Liverpool Cotton market, during the four days it has been open, was dull at barely last week's prices; sales 5 a 6,000 daily. Breadstuffs dull at 3d. decline on Wheat; 1s. a 1s. 6d. on Flour, and 1s. 6d. on Indian Corn. Provisions are quiet. The business in general produce had been trifling. Sugar quiet but rather more firm. Money continued in demand at unchanged rates. Consols drooping, closed at 88 3-8 a 88 1-2 for account. American Stocks are inactive without alteration in price.

TREATY BETWEEN RUSSIA AND THE UNITED STATES!

The following is published in the English papers:

"A telegraphic dispatch from Berlin relates an unconfirmed rumor to the effect that Russia and the United States have concluded a treaty, offensive and defensive, in case war should break out between Britain and America, but another version is that the agreement merely relates to the purchase of ships of war."

The following is a paragraph in The Vienna Austrian Gazette: "There is a good deal of talk, in the military circles, of a treaty having recently been concluded between the Cabinets of St. Petersburg and Washington, in which they bind themselves to lend each other effective assistance in the event of war breaking out between the United States and the Western Powers. It is further said, and with great probability, that Russia is negotiating with the States for 45 to 50 ships of war."

FRANCE HINTS AT A EUROPEAN CONGRESS.

The idea of calling together a European Congress "to settle not only the present Eastern difficulty, but all the complications in European relations that have arisen since the Congress of Vienna," in other words, to readjust the balance of power—is reported to be the pet idea of the Emperor Napoleon, and to be exceedingly distasteful to England. Napoleon is said to have actually commissioned M. de Seebach, the Minister of Saxony, who has gone to St. Petersburg as bearer of the views of the smaller German States, to bring the suggestion under the immediate consideration of the Emperor Alexander. How utterly displeasing this proposal is to the English Government may be inferred from the language of The London Times, which says:

"Rather than submit our quarrel to a Congress, in which Russia would be omnipotent by the votes of her vassals and mercenaries, let the sword decide between us! We did not draw it without counting the cost, and we ought not to sheath it without some better guarantee than can be afforded by the wisdom or fairness of a Congress of European Sovereigns!"

It is needless to say that the influence of France, more than of Russia, is feared in a Congress.

In connection with this alleged idea of Napoleon's, is the publication, in Paris, of a pamphlet entitled, "Necessite d'un Congress pacifier l'Europe," an un homme d'etat. This pamphlet has made a sensation. Pains are taken to promulgate that the writer is a M. Dureyiez, but the general impression is that the Emperor himself is the author. The work is largely quoted from in the English journals. It advocates the immediate calling of a Congress of Nations.

THE PEACE NEGOTIATIONS.

The weeks news presents no new facts as to the progress of the peace negotiations. We have, however a great many reports and surmises, the tenor of all indicating increased hopes of a renewal of direct negotiations.

The Presse of Vienna, has the following:

"We learn from a respectable source that the English journals are misinformed, when they state that Count Esterhazy is the bearer of an ultimatum to the Russian Government. He is simply commissioned to communicate to the Russian Cabinet propositions, which may ultimately lead to peace. A perfect understanding prevails between Vienna, Paris and London, but a rejection of the terms now made will hardly immediately lead to the direct participation of Austria in the War. Austria will make another political demonstration, recall her minister, before she resolves on taking a step of such extreme importance."

MOVEMENTS IN ASIA.

Omer Pasha, at latest dates, December 11, had established his headquarters at Redoubt Kale. Omer himself was at Siva, November 30, where his army was encamped, stopped by the rains.

Selim Pasha, with 12,000 men, was at Trebizond, waiting the arrival of the Egyptian division. Gen. Mouraveiff had directed a column on Akhaltsik, and part of the garrison of Kutais had gone to Gori to defend the passes which commands the entrance into Georgia. At Constantinople it is asserted and expected that the Russians will evacuate Kutais.

Another account says that Omer Pasha had recrossed the Ingour. Also that Selim Pasha will be superceded and brought before a court martial.

GREAT BRITAIN.

It has been decided by the Liverpool Dock Committee to increase the dock rates upon tunnage and goods 10 per cent. on the average, a measure which it is anticipated will add £87,000 sterling to their annual revenue. The rate upon Cotton to the 5th of January, 1856, will be, on American, 6d. per bale, on South American, 3d., and on East Indian, 4d. per bale.

Business having been partially suspended during the Christmas holidays, there is little or nothing to report. Nothing political, excepting a rumor that a Parliamentary Committee of inquiry will be demanded on the subject of the fall of Kars.

FRANCE.

A grand council of war is to be held at Paris of all the generals who have returned from the Crimea. Pelissier approves of it, and the Duke of Cambridge and Gen. Marmora will be present.

The accouchment of the Empress is expected to occur about March 25.

A camp of forty thousand men will be formed this Winter at Cherbourg, and it is reported another at Brest.

Great preparations are making to give eclat to the triumphal entry of the Guards into Paris, on Saturday the 29th December.

The Minister of War notifies that the price of exemption from the military conscription is fixed this year at 2,800 francs.

The American captains frequenting the port of Havre have sent an application to the Emperor to grant more extended facilities for translation and maritime agency at that port.

IT is said there were more persons arrested for drunkenness, in New York, on last New Year's day, than on any previous New Year's since the foundation of the city. The arrests for drunkenness alone numbered 502, of which number 171 were committed to prison.

THE St. Louis "Republican" says that a year of more successful operations in business of every kind has never been in St. Louis. The trade of the Missouri river amounted to $2,000,000, while the reciept of important staples exhibits a continued and heavy increase.

A VERY excellent blacking may be made by mixing in half a pint of water an ounce of ivory black, adding thereto half an ounce of brown sugar and the white of an egg. This makes what is called "shining blacking."

ACCORDING to the report of the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department of Cleveland, the losses by fire in that city during 1855 were $96,000, against $802,000 in 1854—a large decrease.

THE Working Farmer, states that the value of the hog crop this year, in the United States will fall little short of two hundred millions of dollars, or $50,000,000 more than the cotton crop.

THE increase in the exports of Cotton from the United States since Sept. 1st, 1855 compared with the same period in 1854, was 235,000 bales.

Is that a lightning bug in the street?" said a short sighted old lady.

"No, grandma," said a pert little miss, it's a big-bug with a cigar."

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the trangression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The fourth is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the 'laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Bien-aimés frères, je désire, en commencant cette publication, vous adresser quelques paroles. Le Seigneur, dans sa bonté et sa miséricorde, a jugé convenable de restaurer au monde l'Evangile primitif, dans toute la simplicité, la beauté et la pureté qu'il avait autrefois, parmi les chrétiens des premiers temps, aux jours de Jésus et de ses Apôtres.

La lumière de la vérité a éclaté au milieu des ténèbres et de la corruption des hommes, en ce temps où le monde est déchiré par mille opinions contradictoires.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Si nous suivons attentivement l'action de Dieu sur le genre humain, nous trouverons que tous ces maux proviennent de ce que les nations et les peuples se sont éloignés de Dieu; et rien moins qu'un retour à lui ne peut arrêter la terrible tempête, calmer la mer furieuse, tranquilliser les passions capricieuses des hommes, et rendre au monde moral, religieux et politique, cet ordre qui règne dans la création physique de Dieu.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui règle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pû rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

C'est la religion que vous croyez et que vous enseignez, qui est destinée à restaurer l'homme et la terre; c'est elle qui ramènera les peuples à Dieu, qui les retirera du chaos moral, religieux et politique du monde, et les rassemblera en un peuple qui sera conduit et reconnu de Dieu; qui sera honoré devant les hommes et les nations; et qui aidera à établir et à développer le royaume de Dieu dans ces derniers jours.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaîtraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? Ou devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours?

Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconque demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Evangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés?" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit?" Nous le faisons aussi. Crurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains par la foi en Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent, ils "l'espoir en la résurrection?" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.?" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.?" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions à son Eglise actuelle.

Nous demanderons ce qu'il y a d'inconséquent en tout cela? Lequel est le plus inconséquent, de croire et de pratiquer les Ecritures, ou de dire, nous les croyons et puis de les nier à notre organisation, à nos doctrines, à nos œuvres.

Mais des visions, des prophéties, des révélations n'ont-elles pas une tendance à conduire à l'enthousiasme et au fanatisme? Oui, les visions humaines et les délusions de Satan l'ont. Mais si le Seigneur eût pensé que ses visions et ses révélations fussent préjudiciables aux hommes, pourquoi les aurait-il données dans les anciens temps? Si elles doivent être préjudiciables de nos jours, certainement elles l'eussent été autrefois. L'enthousiasme, la folie et le fanatisme des hommes est une chose; autre chose est Dieu révélant sa volonté aux peuples pour leur organisation, leur stabilité, leur consolation, leur union, leur savoir, leur édification, et pour l'établissement de son royaume.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaitre Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Les philosophes ont scruté l'homme, la terre, les œuvres de la création pour trouver un vrai système, Ils ont tous eu leur jour. Ils ont introduit beaucoup de bons principes, mais quant à l'amélioration du monde, là, ils ont fait défaut. Leurs systèmes, quelque bons que soient plusieurs d'entre eux, sont bien loin d'embrasser l'objet désiré: "Ils ont été pesés dans la balance, et trouvés trop légers."

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaître que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence, ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les ecès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lasciveté, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votre lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

JOHN TAYLOR.

A Card to the Saints.

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "THE MORMON." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish, you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
The Greatest Blessing of the Age for the Cure of Diseases of Man or Beast requiring External Application.

"BRING hither the poor, the halt, the lame and the blind," if you would have them healed of their many infirmities. We boldly and fearlessly assert that the Mustang Liniment will positively cure Rheumatism. Let any who are afflicted with that most painful complaint try it thoroughly according to directions, and if they are not cured we will give them their money back. What more can we say? It will also cure the Piles. Thousands have tried it—and all were cured. Bruises, Sprains, Sores or Eruptions fade away as if touched by the magician's wand. Its application to burn or scald acts like "oil upon the troubled waters." The tempest of pain and agony is soon stifled, and the patient is hushed to quiet and peaceful slumbers. "There is balm for every wound," and that balm is the Mustang Liniment. Everybody that sells medicine keeps it for sale. "Hold your horses," and if they are crippled, galled or sprained, use the Mustang Liniment.

READ THE FOLLOWING CERTIFICATES.
THROUGH BY EXPRESS!!!

This is to certify that the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT has been used quite extensively in the stables of Adams & Co.'s Great Southern, Eastern and Western Expresses, for curing galls, chafes, scrofulas, sprains and bruises, and it has proved very effectual. Many of their men have also used it on themselves and their families, and they all speak of its healing and remedial qualities in the highest terms. One of our ostlers got kicked and badly cut and bruised on his knee; as usual, the Liniment was resorted to, and the soreness and lameness was soon removed, and it was perfectly well in three or four days. We have no hesitation in recommending it as a valuable preparation to be used externally on man or beast.
J. DUNNING,
Foreman of Adams & Co.'s Express Stable, N. Y.

We take pleasure in recommending the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT to all our friends and customers as the best article we have ever used for sores, sprains or galls in horses. We have used it extensively and always effectually. Some of our men have also used it for severe bruises and sores, as well as rheumatic pains, and they all say it acts like magic—we can only say that we have entirely abandoned the use of any other Liniment.

MR. WILLIAM JOHNSON, for the last five years a citizen of Augusta, and now the proprietor of the fine hotel in Savannah, called the Marshall House, has favored us with the following certificate:

The MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT has been used in my family, and on my farm, for a great variety of diseases requiring an external application, and has never failed to give immediate relief and effect a permanent cure. I have cured several cases of rheumatism that had resisted the skill of our best physicians. It has cured ringworms by a single application, chilblains in a few days, toothache, frost bites, cuts, sores and corns by a few applications; nervous headache cured entirely. In fact, I have used it for almost everything, and it has always cured. I consider it the best medicine I have ever used. WILLIAM JOHNSON.
Savannah, June 24th, 1852.

June, 25th, 1852.
I have used the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT in my stables upon my horses in cases of sprains, bruises, galls and sores of different kinds, incident to a large number of horses. I used it upon a horse that had been saddle galled for nearly a year. I had tried many remedies, and one in particular, that I had been in the habit of using for years, and had generally proved successful. Nothing appeared to give it any relief until I tried the Mustang Liniment, which cured it in a very short time. I consider it an invaluable remedy, and would not be without it. WM. H. HOLMES.

SAVANNAH, GEO., June 25, 1852.
We have also used the MUSTANG LINIMENT extensively in our stable, and we find it to be the best remedy we have ever used for sores or lameness of any kind.
SAWYER, HOLLISTER & CO.

The above are from two of the largest livery stables in the State of Georgia.

B. H. MEEKINS, 189 Walnut street, Cincinnati, was confined to his bed under the treatment of a physician some six weeks, with Neuralgia, of the whole of his right side, leg, arm and face; his sufferings were indescribable, and the only cessation from the most agonizing pain, was while under the influence of opium or morphine. His doctor finally advised him to try the MUSTANG LINIMENT; he did so, and in two days was able to go about his business perfectly cured.

This is to certify that I have used the MUSTANG LINIMENT recently in a very severe case of sprain. The right hip was so badly sprained and bruised that fears were entertained that it was out of joint. I obtained a bottle of Mustang Liniment and used it freely for four days, when the soreness and pain were all gone and the hip joint was well.

I have also used the Liniment for the Piles, with which I have been afflicted for many years. Its effects were wonderful. Free applications night and morning for a week have perfectly cured me. Thousands of persons are suffering with this painful disease, and you are at liberty to make this statement public, that all may learn what will cure them.

My brother also states that he has used the Mustang Liniment with the most perfect success in two cases of severe bruises, at our factory in Williamsburgh, and says he considers it invaluable about an establishment where a large number of men and horses are at work, and constantly liable to serious accidents. EDWIN R. BARRON.
64 Duane st., New York, June 25, 1852.

☞ While hundreds are rejoicing in the happy escape from smarting pains, occasioned by Burns, Bruises and Sprains, thousands of others will buy the Mustang Liniment and experience the same happy results.

☞ The popularity of the Mustang Liniment is a "fixed fact," therefore those suffering with Ulcers, Old Sores, Eruptions, and like complaints, need not be reminded of its superiority to give it a trial.

☞ The Ladies will always rejoice at the happy experience of curing eruptions, sore nipples, broken or caked breasts, piles and corns, after a thorough trial of the Mexican Mustang Liniment.

☞ The Mustang Liniment will give the most undoubted satisfaction to any one giving it a trial for stiff joints, stiff neck, or sore throat; it has proved itself efficacious in these complaints in many very stubborn cases.

☞ If you have any ugly, painful corns upon your feet, get a bottle of Mustang Liniment and apply it twice a day for eleven days, and the trouble will be gone.

Poetry.

The Indian.

BY A. S. GARDINER.

Like bubble on the fountain,
Like spray upon the river,
Like shadow on the mountain,
He's passed, he's gone for ever.

The forests of his childhood,
Have fallen in their pride,
With the grandeur of the wildwood,
That fringed the flowing tide.

The lake of smiling glances
In infancy he knew,
No more in beauty dances
Around his light canoe.

No more at evening twilight,
In quiet and repose,
He'll watch the beaming starlight
As brilliantly it glows.

His hunting grounds have perished,
His villages are burned;
By those that he once cherished
The Indian is spurned.

His race is swiftly hasting
To the "Spirit Land" away;
Their images are wasting
'Neath the finger of decay.

The white has robbed the red man
Of happiness and home,
But wo betide the white man
In other days to come.

For heaven in displeasure
Shall vindicate its laws,
And justice in full measure
Avenge the red man's cause.

Like bubble on the fountain,
Like spray upon the river,
Like shadow on the mountain,
He's passed away for ever.

Woman's Rights.

From a lately published novel, "The Modern Pilgrims," we extract the following speech of one of the characters—a Miss Julia Parsons—stated to have been delivered at a Woman's Rights Convention:

"All I ask is liberty to act out the true and earnest promptings of my soul. Why may I not? Do I love? Why should I conceal it? Is it unmaidenly to love? What folly is it to say so! For what end and aim are we created but to love and be loved? But, alas! by the conventionalities of society, a poor girl must hide the flame which hallows and glows in the deep recesses of her soul. She must do so, or loose caste and be jeered at. And yet there is nothing unwomanly, nothing unworthy the purity which Heaven loves, and which we long for.

"Let me tell you a story, it will illustrate all I have said, and is a case in-point—and I well remember what Shakspeare has said:

"'An honest tale speeds best, being plainly told.'

"I have a relative about my own age, who has been most carefully educated, and who has a warm heart and generous nature. Every one says so; and what everybody says must be true. Born to wealth, she knew nothing of its fearfully repressing influences on those not so endowed. There came to her father's house a young man of twenty-one; he was the son of an old friend and classmate, and a minister; a poor man, rich only in good works, and a large family of children. This was his eldest son, who had worked his way through college by teaching, and, as a tutor, had saved a little to enable him to pay his expenses while he studied his profession. My father gladly welcomed him as a gratuitous student into his office, and at once introduced him to his family, and said to him, in presence of us all—'Here you are to come at all times; and at all times you will find a warm welcome.'

"I won't tell you his name, but let him now be known as Alfred Smith. He was possessed of a fine figure, and his face was always beautiful; but his modesty, shyness, and reserve, or whatever else you may call it, resting on a proud heart, which led him to contrast his poverty with the wealth he saw around him, seemed unconquerable. My friend was then but sixteen; and her heart, all unconsciously to herself, became interested in this young man. And years passed away, I say years; it was three years, but in a girl's life what a symbol of eternity! They met daily, and gradually became mutual friends—she seeking in every way to show him her preference, and in striving to keep his heart from avowing all the power and intensity of his love. She little knew of this conflict, or rather of its cause, that humility, which poverty compels, a feeling she never could dream of. But pride, too, told him he must not win the child of one his superior in fortune, for he knew, in all things else, he had gifts which would hereafter be acknowledged.

"And so it was, my young friend came to be to him a 'bright particular star,' sharing in a sphere he could never reach, or reach too late. He commenced his career with singular success. He rose rapidly; but, alas! while he was full of intense activity, my friend was living in all the idleness of secret love, a life of sadness and of dejection, too proud to tell her griefs even in a mother's heart; and why, because it was unmaidenly. But I am wearying you all. Let me hasten to the close. My young friend went abroad for a tour of six months; Alfred accompanied her down the Bay, and returned in the pilot boat. There were looks reciprocated at parting which sustained her heart during all these months of travel, and she returned full of hopeful anticipations; but her bright castles were destined to utter destruction,

"'So quick bright things come to confusion.'

"Alfred had met, at a friend's house, an ensnaring young widow, who dressed sweetly, walked gracefully, and, by enchantments only known to such women, won and married him." Here her voice faltered, and a tear rose to her eye. She was telling her own heart's history, and it was not only "an honest tale," but a tale which every one felt must be true.

"Now, I ask, is there one here who questions if this cousin, this friend of mine, had lived under a healthful public sentiment of the rights of maidens as well as of matrons, would she have made such a shipwreck of her happiness? No! she would have saved this gifted, noble soul from the wilds and enticements of a showy, heartless woman, and have told him of her willingness to share her wealth with him, or by a life of labor, if need be, to test her devotion and love. So help me, Heaven! I will never submit to trammels riveted upon me by long ages of degradation to my sex and of distrust of womanhood; but this is wisdom now all too late.—N. Y. Daily News.

A Brave Woman of the Olden Time.

A German lady, belonging to a house long distinguished for deeds of noble daring, and which had once given an emperor to Germany, added yet to the luster of her line by having once nearly caused an emotion akin to trembling in the heart of the much dreaded and cruel Duke of Alva. In the year 1547, after the battle of Muhiberg, as the Emperor Charles V. was passing through Thuringen, on his march toward Franconia and Suabia, the widowed Countess of Schwarzburg, born Princess of Henneberg, obtained from him a written promise that her subjects should not suffer an injury or loss of property from the Spanish army, which was passing through her dominions. She promised, on her part, to provide bread, peas, and other provisions at a very small remuneration, in Rudlostadt, for the Spanish troops that were to cross there. In the meantime she adopted the precautionary measure, of having the bridge, which was close to Rudlostadt, broken down, and another erected at some distance from the city, that its vicinity might not excite the rapacious inclinations of her rude guests.

Permission was also given to all the inhabitants of the places which lay on the line of march to send their most valuable property to be in safe keeping of the Castle of Rudlostadt. And now, the Spanish general was approaching, accompanied by Henry, Duke of Brunswick and his sons, and sent a messenger in advance to ask permission from the Countess of Schwarzburg to be her guest at breakfast on the following morning. So modest a request coming from the leader of a powerful army, could not be well refused. An answer was returned that the best the house afforded should be at his excellency's disposal, if he would be content to put up with such poor fare. It was not, meanwhile, forgotten that the Spanish general should be reminded to lay well to heart the written promise of the Emperor. A friendly reception and a well spread table awaited the Duke in the castle; he was obliged to confess that the ladies in Thuringien understands well how to practice the rites of hospitality. They had hardly sat down when the Countess was summoned out of the hall to speak with a messenger. He came with the intelligence that the Spanish soldiers had taken away by force the cattle of the peasantry in some village on the route.

Catharine was a mother to her people, and that which affected the poorest of them was felt by her as a personal injury. She was now angered in the extreme by this breach of faith; but yet, preserving her presence of mind, she ordered all her household to arm themselves quietly and quickly, and close all the entrances into the castle; she then returned herself into the hall, where the princes were sitting at table. In rather indignant terms, the Countess informed them of the tiding which had just reached her, and of the little regard which had been paid to the promise of the Emperor. They replied laughingly, that this was always the custom in war, and that such little accidents could not possibly be avoided. "We shall see about that," said she; "my poor subjects must receive their property again, or, by God!" and her voice rose threatningly, "the blood of princes shall pay for that of oxen!" Uttering these words, she left the room, which was immediately filled with armed men, who, sword in hand, yet with a respectful air, placed themselves behind the chairs of the princes, and waited upon them at breakfast.

On the entrance of this warlike troop the Duke of Alva changed color; and they looked at each other, silent and amazed. Separated from his army and surrounded by a body of men ready at any moment for action, what remained for him but to recover his composure quietly, and, on whatever condition, reconcile the offended lady! Henry of Brunswick was the first to recover his composure, and broke out in a loud laugh. He seised upon the expedient of treating the whole affair as a joke, and complimented the Countess upon her maternal care for her subjects, and the resolute courage which she had shown. He entreated her to compose herself, and assured her that he would obtain from the Duke of Alva all that she desired. He succeeded so far with the Duke that the latter wrote upon the spot an order to his army to restore the stolen cattle to their owners without further delay. This being peaceably settled, the Countess resumed her courteous manner toward her guests, who took leave of her with many expressions of respect and admiration. It was, no doubt, this circumstance which won for Catharine the title of "the heroic."—[The Bouquet—an unpublished Miscellany.

Fortitude of Women in Affliction.

I have very often had occasion to remark.—(writes Washington Irving)—the fortitude with which women sustain the most overwhelming reverses of fortune. Those disasters which break down the spirit of man, and prostrate him in the dust, seem to call forth all the energies of the softer sex, and give such intrepidity and elevation to their character, that at times it approaches to sublimity. Nothing can be more touching than to behold a soft and tender female, who has been all weakness and dependence and alive to every trivial annoyance while treading the prosperous paths of life, suddenly rising in mental force to be the comforter and support of her husband under misfortune, and abiding with unshrinking firmness the bitterest blasts of adversity. As the vine, which has long twined its graceful foliage around the oak, has been lifted by it in the sunshine, will when the hardy tree is rifted by the thunder-bolt, cling round it with its caressing tendrils, and bind up its shattered boughs, so it is beautifully ordered by Providence that woman, who is the mere dependent and ornament of man in his happier hours, should be his stay and solace when smitten with sudden calamity—winding herself in the rugged recesses of his nature, tenderly supporting the drooping head, and binding up the broken heart. I have observed that a married man falling into misfortunes, is more apt to retrieve his situation in the world than a single one, partly because he is more stimulated to exertion by the necessities of the helpless and beloved beings who depend upon him for subsistence, but chiefly because his spirits are soothed and relieved by domestic endearments, and his self-respect kept alive by finding that though all abroad is darkness and humiliation yet there is still a little world of love at home of which he is the monarch: whereas a single man is apt to run to waste and self neglect, to fancy himself alone and abandoned, and his heart to fall to ruin, like some deserted mansion, for the want of an inhabitant.

Horticultural.

We have received the following with reference to a new species of blackberry which may not be uninteresting to our readers of horticultural proclivities:

The Seacor Mammoth Blackberry.

This berry is called by some the Lawton, and by others the New Rochelle, Blackberry. Lewis. A. Secor, the original discoverer and preserver of this famous fruit, still lives, and continues to raise it for sale. "This variety of Blackberry is entirely new, differing in shape size, and quality from any with which I am acquainted. As far as my knowledge of the raising of this fruit extends, size and quality do not depend upon cultivation; for, wherever the common kinds will thrive, this will grow in perfection. I have raised very large berries, four inches in circumference, without cultivation. I have had this berry for about seventeen years, and never knew it to winter-kill, or fail to bear, wet or dry, besides producing not only from six to nine berries on a bunch, but those thrice as large as the common kind. I have styled it the Mammoth Blackberry, but thus far lost the honor attached to it. The above cut represents its exact size. I still raise plants of the pure kind for sale.

"Lewis A. Seacor, New Rochelle,
"Westchester Co., N. Y.

"P. S. My residence is within two and a half minutes' walk of the New York and New Haven Railroad Depot."

We take pleasure in giving place to the following letter from the Westchester (N. Y.) News, in support of the claims of Mr. Seacor, to the credit of first discovering this splendid Blackberry:

"To the Editor of the Westchester News:

"My Dear Sir:—The insertion in your paper of a copy of a letter which I have addressed to the Farmers' Club, on the large Blackberry described so well in last week's News, will oblige,

"Yours truly, Frederick Prime."

"To the President of the Farmers' Club:

"Sir: In a recent number of the Westchester News published in this town, I have found an interesting paper, read before your Society by Mr. Lawton, in relation to a remarkable Blackberry which for some years has been known in this neighborhood. As it gives only a general account of the origin of this plant, I have supposed a more particular statement might be of interest to the Farmers' Club.

"About the year 1834, Lewis A. Seacor, then a carpenter, and now residing in the village of New Rochelle, in walking over a field between my residence and the Sound discovered a Blackberry of a remarkable size; and, having obtained permission to remove some plants, for cultivation, he placed them in his garden, about 1838. After careful inquiry in this neighborhood, I am satisfied that it is to Mr. Seacor we owe the preservation of this remarkable and valuable fruit, and that all the plants now known had their origin from his. I am informed by Mr. Seacor that he called it the Mammoth Blackberry, and has sold it under that name. I am but doing him an act of justice in mentioning this fact. The plants were removed by Mr. Seacor before I purchased the property, and I regret that from my ignorance of their existence the parent-stock was destroyed in clearing the lot where they grew.

"Yours truly, Frederick Prime.

"New Rochelle, Aug. 9, 1853."

The Southern Cultivator, of the 8th of August, 1854, remarks: "We will dismiss the name of Lawton altogether, and in justice to Mr. Seacor, the New York Farmers' Club should make the same correction.—Ed."

The Fall of Kars.

The effect of the fall of Kars is thus descanted on by The London Daily News:

"The Russians in possession of Kars may fearlessly scatter their Cossacks and other light troops of plunderers over the whole district of which Erzeroum is the capital. They are thus absolute masters of the great highway by which the trade of western Europe finds its way overland from Trebizond to Persia, and the countries of Central Asia which lie beyond it. The products and manufactures of Europe and its colonies, which the inhabitants of the region we have indicated have hitherto obtained almost exclusively by the route from Trebizonde through Erzeroum, they must now seek to procure through other channels. In this state of affairs they will naturally turn to Russia. Russia can procure these manufactures and products across her land frontier from Prussia or Austria, convey them by her immense system of inland water-carriage to the Volga and ship them across the Caspian to Persia. Russia was beginning to suffer from the stoppage of her commerce, and the consequent drying up of the supplies required to enable her to carry on the war. The capture of Kars enables her to stop the current of European commerce through Turkey to Central Asia, and compel the stream to flow across her own territories, thus partially neutralising the pressure her own trade was beginning to feel, and enabling her to protract the war. This is not all. Persia is thus placed at the mercy of Russia for the far greater part of her supplies of European goods. Persia is at no time unwilling to pick a quarrel with Turkey. The Shutes of Persia and the Sunnites of Turkey hate each other with a hatred not exceeded by that which the Orangemen and Romanists of Ireland hate each other. Wars have been waged for long centuries between Persia and Turkey, for the possession of the rich lands watered by the Tigris and Euphrates. Not only is Persia placed in a condition of mercantile dependence on Russia by the fall of Kars; she will be led by that event to indulge in dreams of extending her frontier in the direction of Bagdad by the aid of Russia and at the expense of Turkey. The policy of the Western Powers, in concentrating all this attention upon the Crimea, and neglecting the operations of Russia on the Armenian and Georgian frontier of Turkey, can only be paralleled by that of policemen who are so intent upon driving a gang of burglars out of a house by the front door, and pursuing them, that they allow the confederates of the plunderers to enter unobserved by the back door and continue the pillage. The Allies have cleared the Turkish territory of the Russian invaders in Wallachia, and they have been so busy in devising means to prevent their re-occupying those provinces, or making a descent on Constantinople, that they have paid no attention to the occupation of Turkish Armenia, and the threatened irruptions into Turkish Mesopotamia. The blame of this egregious blunder rests equally upon all the Allies, the shame of it presses with disproportionate weight on the English."

Practical Prayer.

In the vicinity of B— lived a poor but industrious man, depending for support upon his daily labor. His wife fell sick, and not being able to hire a nurse, he was obliged to confine himself to the sick bed and family. His means of support being thus cut off, he soon found himself in need. Having a wealthy neighbor near, he determined to go and ask him for two bushels of wheat, with a promise to pay as soon as his wife became so much better that he could leave her and return to his work. Accordingly he took his bag, went to his neighbor's and arrived while the family were at morning prayers.

As he sat on the door-stone, he heard the man pray very earnestly that God would clothe the naked, feed the hungry, relieve the needy, and comfort all that mourn.—The prayer concluded he stepped in and made known his business, promising to pay with the avail of his first labors. The farmer was very sorry he could not accommodate him, but he had promised to lend a large sum of money, and he presumed neighbor A. would let him have it.

With a tearful eye and a sad heart, the poor man turned away. As soon as he left the house, the farmer's little son stepped up and said:—

"Father, did you not pray that God would clothe the naked, feed the hungry, relieve the distressed and comfort mourners?"

"Yes; why?"

"Because, father, if I had your wheat I would answer that prayer."

It is needless to add that the Christian father called back his suffering neighbor and gave him as much as he needed.

Now, readers, do you answer your own prayers?—[N. Y. Evangelist.

Mormon Emigration.

In November last, having occasion to visit America, I engaged a passage on board the "Emerald Isle," a large vessel belonging to Messrs. Tapscott & Co.'s Liverpool and New York line of emigrant ships. On getting aboard I found that the majority of the passengers (of whom there were about 700,) belonged to the society termed Mormons, or Latter-day Saints. Having previously met with sundry books and pamphlets in which the doctrines held by these people were discussed pro and con, I felt some degree of interest in watching their proceedings, and now communicate the result of my observations to the Times, for the benefit of those who feel disposed to attach any importance to the operations of a system whose founders have succeeded in establishing already a State Church on the American continent, and whose ulterior proceedings must undoubtedly exercise a vast influence on the affairs of the Union.

The first thing which I noticed in regard to these people was their exclusiveness. They would suffer no passengers not belonging to their body to intrude into the cabins appropriated to "the Saints," and for this purpose guards, or sentinels, were stationed, night and day, at every gangway, in order to question, and, if required, to repel any stranger who sought admittance. On deck, however, they freely conversed with the crew and the rest of the passengers, and if by chance or design the subject of their religious tenets was broached, they were not backward in resorting to Scripture to defend their faith, but at the same time so far as could be perceived, they made no efforts to proselytise those who differed from them. Before the ship left Liverpool five or six of the heads of the sect in England came on board, and convened a meeting of their followers, at which a "President" was appointed to regulate the affairs of each ward of Mormon passengers. These "Presidents," of whom six were chosen by the leaders, and approved by the passengers, were in their turn to be governed by three others, selected from the most experienced of their "Elders," or ministers. The chief of the three was styled the Captain of the company, and to his orders the rest were instructed to render the most implicit obedience.

The first act of these authorities, after setting sail, was to nominate a steward to officiate for their company instead of the ordinary ship's steward. They also appointed two cooks, whose services were to be restricted to "the brethren and sisters," and a clerk, to record any incidents of note which might befall them on their journey.

The results of these arrangements, on the whole, were no less satisfactory than creditable to the parties; for while the rest of the passengers frequently experienced unavoidable confusion and delay in procuring rations, getting food cooked, &c., the Mormons, by means of the strict order they observed, were always enabled to obtain these requisites at fixed hours. One point I cannot but mention in their favor was, that every sick member of their company was served with breakfast in the morning before the healthy were permitted to enter the cook-house.

The order of their daily proceedings was as follows—At an early hour in the morning a given number of the young men of the party, who had been selected previously by name, arose and scrubbed the floors of the sleeping apartments before the remainder were called up. A signal was next given for all who were not sick to dress, after which meetings were held for the purpose of singing and prayer. Then followed the various meals of the day, and at night, before retiring, prayer meetings were again held. When any of their number were seriously menaced by sickness, instead of putting the services of the surgeon into requisition, they sent for one or more of the three "Elders," who, after laying hands on the head of the sufferer, and praying over him, would depart, leaving the believer in the full assurance that he would speedily recover.

On arriving at the Castle Garden, in New York, the same spirit of exclusiveness which they had manifested on board the vessel was again exhibited. They appropriated to their own use a portion of the premises, leaving the other emigrants in undisturbed possession of the remaining portion. Nor did they consider themselves yet emancipated from the rule of the three "Elders," to whose care they had confided themselves; on the contrary, none of them sought to direct their course to any other locality than that which their leaders prescribed for each, individually.

So far as I could ascertain, the entire company registered themselves in the books of the officials of the establishment as intending to reach Utah Territory, but many of them, who I apprehend were not in possession of a sufficient amount of cash to convey them to the "Promised Land" at present, removed to a house in Williamsburgh, from whence they have since distributed themselves throughout the city and neighborhood in search of employment, in order to raise means to enable them to proceed to Salt Lake City as soon as possible.—[Brooklyn Daily Times. Debate in the House Jan. 4.

Mr. Boyce, of South Carolina.—I have had and still have, the most melancholy forebodings as to the future of our country. I have thought, and I still think, and I have expressed the opinion, and I still express the opinion, that there are circumstances at work which are hurrying us almost irresistibly to a disruption. Why do I think this? Because, in my opinion—and I speak not as a party man; I speak from the honest convictions of my heart with entire candor, and not with the purpose of influencing any measure or any party—because I think that there is a spirit at the North, a public opinion growing up, hostile to the institutions of the South, that is inconsistent with the continuance of the Union. The Constitution, if I understand it correctly, was the result of compromise between the North and the South upon the subject of slavery; it was the result of a spirit of conciliation and fraternal concord. The great men of the North at that day—your Hamiltons, your Jays, your Livingstons, and your Franklins—were willing to sink a sentiment in obtaining a great good. That great good they considered the formation of the Federal Union, and to obtain that, they placed in abeyance their sentiments of hostility to the institution of slavery.

The Will and Way.

I learned grammar (writes Cobbett) when I was a soldier on the pay of a sixpence a day. The edge of my berth, or that of my guard-bed, was my seat to study on, my knapsack my book-case, and a bit of board lying on my lap, was my writing table. I had no money to purchase a candle or oil; in winter it was rarely that I could get any light but that of the fire, and only my turn even of that. To buy a pen or piece of paper, I was compelled to forego some portion of my food, though in a state of half starvation. I had not a moment of time that I could call my own, and I had to read and write amid the talking, laughing, singing, whistling and bawling of at least half a score of the most thoughtless men—and that too, in their hours of freedom from control. And I say, if I, under these circumstances, could encounter, and overcome the task—is there, can there be, in the whole world, a youth who can find an excuse for his non-performance.

Naturalization in Great Britain.

In Great Britain it is much easier to become a naturalized citizen than in the United States. In the statute 7 and 8 Victoria, c. 66, entitled, "an act to amend the laws relative to aliens," it is directed that the applicant must send to the Home Secretary a memorial praying for the grant, and setting forth the name, age and profession of the applicant; whether married or single; if any children or not; of what friendly State a native; and if he intends to continue to reside in the United Kingdom. This memorial must be substantiated by an affidavit of the petitioner, and the declaration of four house-holders of good repute, affirmatory of his respectability and loyalty. A certificate of naturalization is then issued, which entitles the person to whom it is granted the right to vote, hold freehold property, and all other immunities and privileges of a British subject.

A special committee of the State of Massachusetts has reported a bill which takes away the power of jurors to judge of the constitutionality of a law. They are to consider a law constitutional until the Supreme Court decides otherwise.

Is Mormonism a Religious Paradox?

ARTICLE II.

CONTINUED.

IN our last we stated that God had, in every age, his duly authorized messengers, who were his medium of communication to the children of men; that the Antediluvians, as well as the Diluvial Patriarchs and Prophets were under his special directions and instructions; that they were all endowed with authority from God; that the same authority existed in the primitive christian churches; that the apostles, prophets, pastors, teachers, deacons, and all the administrators in that age, were expressly called of God, by prophets then in the church; and that then they were legally ordained by those having authority; and that if a church had not this authority, and did not believe in the same doctrines, administer in the same ordinances, and profess the same powers, that it was not the church of Jesus Christ; and as we took the liberty of animadverting rather severely on the proceedings of many christian churches in regard to their want of authority, they may reasonably retort and ask: from whence do you obtain yours?

Now we do not object to this question, we consider it perfectly fair and right, and we are as free to answer it as we are to investigate the claims of others.

In the first place, then, we do not claim to receive it from any church in existence, for the simple reason that we do not believe that any of them possess this authority. The Church of Rome, or the Greek Church, would come the nearest to, and possess the most feasible claim of any that we know of; but as it would exceed the limits of this article to show the reasons why we do not believe in their authority, we will content ourselves at present with giving one. They do not preach the same gospel as the apostles did anciently; they do not administer in the same ordinances; they have not the same officers, or administrators, or powers, or blessings; and the scriptures say, "He that transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ hath not God," and again, "If we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel than that which we have preached, let him be accursed." Let any one examine carefully, and compare with the scriptures, the doctrines that we have set forth in the preceding articles, and he will rise convinced that neither of the above churches have them. Now, if men who preach not the doctrine of Christ have not God, how can they have authority from God to preach or to administer in his ordinances?

The pretensions to authority among all Protestants are absurd in the extreme; they break off, or come out from the Catholic Church. The reason they assign is, that it is corrupt. Where, then, do they get their professed authority? From a church which, according to their own statements, is corrupt and fallen. But, said a Church of England minister to us when conversing on this subject, (Mr. James of Liverpool, England,) "They might retain the power although they had lost their virtue." "Then, sir," we replied, "You are in as bad a position, for the Church of Rome excommunicated all the Reformers; and if they had power to bind on earth, and it should be bound in heaven, they had also power to loose on earth and in heaven;' and as they cut you off from the church, and excommunicated you, they took from you that which they had power to give, take which horn of the dilemma you please. We do not believe that "a bad tree can bring forth good fruit, nor that a corrupt fountain can bring forth pure streams.' If you do, then if they had the power to bind they had the power to loose, and did cut you off; if they had no power, you have none, so you have none either way."

The most ridiculous pretensions to authority, that we have heard, is one that prevails, to a great extent, among many of our modern reformers. Ask them for their authority to preach, and they will tell you they get it from the Bible; but as their names are not written there, nor no special credentials, when interrogated farther, they will very gravely tell you that Jesus said to his disciples, "Go YE into all the world, and preach the gospel unto every creature"—as if this had anything to do with modern christian ministers. Why, this was a commission given to the apostles, and has no more to do with modern ministers than the commissions of Generals Lafayette or Washington have to do with any present officers in the American army. What would be thought of a private or corporal who should get a printed copy of Gen. Washington's commission, that the latter received from Congress, and go to any army or military depot of the United States, and tell them that he, having authority, had come to take command; if when asked for his credentials, he were to pull out this printed copy of General Washington's authority as Lieutenant-General of the United States forces, and commence reading? The officers would be convulsed; there would be a general tittering in the ranks, he would be looked upon as a fit subject for an asylum, and a corporal's guard would be ordered to conduct him to his quarters. Yet, ludicrous as this scene is, it is precisely the position taken by many of our reformers. We mention these things, to show our utter unbelief in regard to our obtaining authority from any of those sources. We believe that all churches have departed from the primitive simplicity; that the authority to administer in ordinances did not exist until restored by an holy angel. We believe, further, that as it did not exist upon the earth, it was necessary that it should be revealed from the heavens; that a new dispensation had to be ushered in, called "the dispensation of the fullness of times;" that the Saints have to be gathered, the Jews restored to Jerusalem, Zion established, Jerusalem rebuilt, Temples erected, and a people be prepared for the coming of the Lord. That, as the Lord says he "will do nothing but what he will reveal it unto his servants the prophets," that he could reveal nothing if he had no prophets; that the moment he revealed anything to man, that very revelation would make him a prophet. We believe, furthermore, according to the scriptures, that in the last days there will be greater and mightier prophets, more manifestations both of the power of God and of the devil, and more miracles, signs and wonders from both sources, than has ever transpired in any other age. We believe that the kingdom of God was to be established on the earth preparatory to the coming of the Son of Man. We believe that this being the Kingdom of Heaven, the wisdom for its guidance and direction must come from the heavens, and also the authority to administer. We believe, furthermore, that this authority was to be restored by an angel. Hence John says, "I saw another angel flying in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach to them that dwell on the earth and to every nation and kindred and tongue and people; saying, with a loud voice, fear God and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come:" Rev. xiv.

Joseph Smith bears testimony that this angel did appear to him and to others, and those to whom it appeared, as well as himself, bear testimony of this event. That he was instructed by this angel, in regard to the gospel and the kingdom of God, as well as to many important events that should transpire; and that he was set apart and ordained by this angel to officiate in the ordinances of the gospel, to establish and set in order His kingdom, to bear testimony of the things revealed, and to ordain others to bear testimony of the same things. This he has done, and this is the origin of the authority of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. And if this is not true, we are just in the same position that other churches are; we have no authority. Unlike them, however, we claim none from any other source. Joseph Smith has borne testimony of the truth of these things to thousands on this continent; he was unwavering in his testimony, in every position and circumstance of life: for this he endured contumely, reproach and every species of indignity and persecution that could be heaped upon man; but under all circumstances, in every position, through every trial, he bore the same unwavering testimony; in prosperity and adversity, in public and private, at home and abroad; he proclaimed it living and died in the faith of it. This we had every opportunity to observe, from a number of years intimate intercourse with him while living, and we were with him when he died. Such, then, is the origin of our authority. What are the fruits? The ancient gospel restored, Apostles, Prophets, Pastors, Teachers, Evangelists, Bishops, Elders, Deacons, &c., who profess to be inspired of the Lord. There is taught faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; repentance of sins; baptism for the remission of sins; laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost; gifts, healings, tongues, revelation, miracles, and the power of God manifested, outwardly; the very same gospel ordinances and authority that existed in former times; the same certainty in the church also as formerly. "They know in whom they believe;" and, as Jesus said formerly, "If any man will do his—the Father's—will, he shall know of the doctrine whether it be of God or whether I speak of myself." So there are thousands upon thousands of living witnesses, at the present time, who, having obeyed the gospel in the last dispensation, know of the doctrine of Jesus Christ through the same medium that saints did in ancient days; they "know that Jesus is the Lord, by the Holy Ghost;" and bear testimony also, from the same source, that Joseph Smith is a Prophet of the Lord, and I am not backward to bear testimony to the same thing. But we are told that Joseph Smith is an imposter. We are, however, told the same thing of Peter, Paul, James, John, Luke, Stephen, Jesus, John the Baptist, the Prophets, and Moses. Let us here ask, Do imposters come with the fullness of the Gospel? Joseph Smith has restored that which Waldo, Fox, Lee, Luther, Calvin, Melancthon, Knox, Wesley, Whitfield, and any and all of the reformers have failed to restore, viz: the gospel as it existed in the days of the Apostles. But he says an angel has appeared to him. Is there anything strange in that? I would not receive his authority without a divine communication. Angels also appeared to others who bear witness of the same thing. Angels have appeared also to Abraham, to Jacob, to Moses, to Gideon, to Zachariah, to Joseph, to Peter, to Paul. Are the above all to be considered imposters because angels appeared to them? If not, why should they not reveal themselves to men in our day? How did we get our Bible? Angels appeared to men, God spake from the heavens to others; some had visions and revelations; a record of these ministrations, visions, dreams; the history of God's dealings with the people, together with a few doctrines and ordinances, compose the Bible.

But you have the Book of Mormon. Yes; and stand as fully prepared to prove that, as anything else, at the proper time. It is too lengthy, however, for our present purpose. We would refer our readers on this subject to P. P. Pratt's "Voice of Warning," "Orson Pratt's Works," "l'Etoile du Désret," and "Zion's Panier," par John Taylor; to articles in the "Times and Seasons" and the "Millennial Star," written on this subject. In the meantime we would say, Is it a thing very surprising that the Lord should reveal the history of millions upon millions of human beings, who have inhabited this great continent, the ruins of whose palaces, temples and statuary are living monuments of their intelligence? Or shall we say that the Lord had only power to reveal his will to a few people in Asia, and leave the rest of the world in darkness? If these records are true, there will yet be other manifestations of the power of God to other people, that the world will be forced to believe.

But you gather together. Yes; we do this because we not only believe in the Old Bible, but in present revelation also, and we conceive we could not be believers in either without doing it. Hence Isaiah, in speaking of these events, says, "Who are these that fly as clouds, and as doves to the windows? Surely the isles shall wait for me, and the ships of Tarshish first, to bring thy sons from far, their silver and their gold with them, unto the name of the Lord thy God." Again, "I will take one of a city, and two of a family, and bring them to Zion, and give them pastors after my own heart, that shall feed them with knowledge and understanding." It is elsewhere said that they shall come in chariots, upon mules, and litters, and dromedaries, and swift beasts, the maimed, the halt, and the blind together, to the name of the Lord, that he may be glorified. Who are engaged in this operation but the Mormons? Yet they are literally fulfilling these things. Hence, in New Orleans, New York, Philadelphia, San Francisco, and other ports, numbers of ships come freighted with saints to Zion, who, as they travel by the railroads and steamboats, make the hills and vales reverberate with the songs of Zion. They are literally going to "Zion with their faces thitherward." Large ships, or "ships of Tarshish," if you please, are engaged in this operation. Then, as they cross the plains, they use mules, and horses, and oxen, and wagons, and chariots, and handcarts, with gold and silver, and without; the rich and poor, the maimed, halt, and blind, literally, "flock as doves to the windows." If the Mormons are not fulfilling these scriptures no other people in the world are. It is paradoxical, but true.

But you build temples; certainly, because the Lord has commanded it, and it is also scriptural. The Millerites, and numbers who believe in the second advent of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, are looking and praying for his coming; but if the Bible be true, he never will come until a Temple is prepared. Hence, "The Lord whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his Temple; but who may abide the day of his coming?" Now, if the Lord has no temple built, how can he come to it? and who is building him a temple, but the Mormons? Again, "The mountain of the Lord's house shall be established upon the mountains, and be exalted above the hills, and all nations shall flow unto it." Through a variety of persecutions, the Mormons have been forced, at last, to the back-bone of the American continent; and there, among the mountains, or "on the mountains," and exalted above the hills, are they building a house—or Temple—of the Lord. "And all nations are fleeing to it." They come from all parts of the United States and Canada; from England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, France, Switzerland, Germany, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Russia, Australia, China, East Indies, the Pacific Isles, and almost all parts of the world. Does this look anything like the fulfilment of scripture? If these scriptures are not fulfilled here, where, upon the face of the whole earth, shall we look for their accomplishment?

These, then, are some of the outlines of Mormonism religiously considered. All of which we stand at any time ready to defend, and defy all the talent or learning of Christendom to prove their falsity. We are branded by self-made ministers and theologians as being heterodox and deceivers. We state that if Mr. Webster's rendering of the term orthodox is correct, viz., "Soundness in the christian faith; believing the genuine doctrines taught in the scriptures—according with the doctrines of scripture." Then are we the only true orthodox church in existence; for, if the scriptures be true, Mormonism is true and their systems false; and we always stand prepared to defend the former and expose the latter.

From the whole of the above, it is very evident that, whilst Mormonism is indeed a paradox, it "is nevertheless true in fact" that it is spoken of by the Prophets, its doctrines were taught by Jesus and his disciples, believed in and obeyed by the ancient saints; and that it is as scriptural as the Old and New Testament.

TO BE CONTINUED.

The Mormon.

WE are frequently interrogated in relation to certain things published against us in different papers, and are often asked why we have not answered them. In the first place, many of them are not worth answering, and then again there are a great many that we do not see. Some of our friends seem to think that, besides all foreign news, we read every newspaper in the United States. This, we can assure them, we do not, and never shall, attempt. Again, we know our own principles, and care very little about what others think of us; but if our friends, when they see anything pertaining to the interests of Mormonism, either for or against, will forward us such papers, with the piece marked, we shall feel much obliged. If you want a thing noticed, then send it, and, if it is worth attention, be assured it shall receive our notice.

Conference Notice.

WE have received from Angus Cannon, and George J. Taylor, the outlines of a Conference held in Washington Co. Pennsylvania, from which we glean the following:

Fifty-nine members represented; all in good standing. The usual votes for the Presidency Twelve, and general authorities were unanimous. An Elder, Deacon, and Teacher were ordained, and general business transacted. Preaching and much good instruction was given by Elders Cannon and Taylor. The Spirit of the Lord was powerfully present, union and brotherly love prevailed; and the genial influences of the good spirit caused the hearts of all present, to overflow with gratitude to God, for the rich blessings imparted by the gospel of peace.

About four months ago Elder Angus Cannon went to Washington Co., at which time there was about twenty-six or thirty members; he soon baptized a number of others amounting if we mistake not, to about twenty or twenty-two, since then, George J. Taylor, joined him, and they together have been laboring in that District of country; a few have removed West, and the remainder, as above have been added. We wish the boys success, and the Saints under their charge, and request them the next time they hold a Conference to send us the details.

The St. Louis News.

SOME time ago we took upon ourselves to contradict a statement made in the above-named paper, to wit—that they had received from an undoubted source information that several companies of Mormon emigrants had passed through that State on their way to the Cherokee nation, and that the Indians had driven them out. We stated that no such company ever went through that State, but that two or three Elders had gone for the purpose of preaching the gospel, and we did not believe they were driven. It will be seen by the remarks of our St. Louis correspondent, President Hart, that he has received a communication direct from the Cherokee nation, written by an Elder, in which it would appear, that not only are they not driven out, but that the mission is prospering, and that eight Cherokees have lately been added to the Church by baptism through the administration of Elder Richards.

The News chuckled over its false communication, or fabrication, we know not which. Will it have the honesty to contradict it? We shall see.

We should be glad to hear from this mission. Cannot friend Miller or some of his associates grind out something?

Kansas Affairs.

WE hear much said of late about the prospects of war with England, and we believe such a crisis is not beyond the bounds of possibility, and we might perhaps say probability; but a much greater probability exists, we opine, of a war nearer home that beggars comparison with anything that is at present likely to arise with Great Britain. We refer to Kansas; not particularly to the few citizens that are now there, and their belligerent attitude and occasional broils and skirmishes, but as a point or focus to which the eyes and sympathies of the citizens of this Union, both North and South, are now directed. Each faction (for such it is not improper to call them,) throughout the States have there their representatives or friends, whose interests are identified with their own on the subject of slavery.

The North, actuated by what she calls the feelings of humanity, sends aid and comfort in the shape of Sharpe's rifles, money, and other necessaries for a conflict which she expects, though seldom admits; the South, actuated by a sense of honor and principles vouchsafed in the Constitution, and promulgated and bequeathed to them by their immortal Calhoun, —with that characteristic vehemence common to a Southerner—are no less assiduous than their antipodes in aiding and abetting, and backing up their friends on the Kansas frontier, with the necessary means, whether money or men, to vindicate Southern honor and Southern rights.

There have circumstances transpired and incidents occurred that in and of themselves neither party, as a whole, would tolerate or sanction, but the issue will be—the elements are at work, the results of which must eventually appeal to every one, North or South, East or West—"Choose ye this day whom ye will serve."

The President of the United States, in his Annual Message, with an eye to these conflicting elements, expatiates largely, and, we can but admit, sensibly and constitutionally, upon their several merits. Ultraists on both sides, of course, condemn him as being too soft or hard, hot or cold, pro or anti, according to their proclivities. Meantime, Governor Shannon, of Kansas, is returning to Washington, unable to navigate in such troubled waters. The anties say he is too pro; the pros say he is too anti; they are both anxious to get rid of him, and it is said he is about to gratify them in that particular by resigning.

What will be the result of all this? to what are the North and South movements now tending? Are the people growing conservative and reverential in their feelings towards the Constitution—that compact made venerable by the sanction of such men as Washington, Adams and others, whose memory we have been taught to respect? or are they becoming more and more indifferent and reckless with regard to that instrument, without which we cease to be a nation. We presume there are but very few, who, if they speak the honest conviction of their minds, will but acknowledge the latter to be the fact. If, then, such is the fact, and the motto "United we stand and divided we fall" be a correct principle, the question of dissolution and civil war—which must come with it—is no longer a question as to fact, but only a question of time. If, then, the whole resolves itself into a question of time, the present fast age of railroad and telegraphic speed admonishes every reflecting person, that the evil day, necessarily incident to a dissolution of the present Union, is nearer than he could desire, or can contemplate without a shudder.

The Speakership.

ABOUT seven weeks have now elapsed since the convening of the Thirty-fourth Congress, and during that time, while the Senate has adjourned from time to time, awaiting the organization of the House, the House has been ostensibly indefatigable in its efforts to choose a Speaker competent to fill the Chair. We say competent. Perhaps this needs a little explanation. Not that there is not plenty in that Honorable Body of Representatives who are in every way qualified to fill the position with honor and dignity; but that they have not that peculiarity that is requisite to carry out "our peculiar policy:" thus might say the Republican party; the same might say the K. N.'s; and last, though not least, no less so might say the National Democracy. It is policy then, and not a want of adequate qualifications, that lies across the track of the great national engine, completely blocking its wheels for now nearly two months. What is to be done in this unprecedented inert position of the great national vehicle? Freight has accumulated in the depot in immense quantities. The tables, closets, drawers, travelling trunks, and pockets of the passengers (Representatives) groan beneath their loading, and some of it, no doubt, articles of a perishable nature.

In fact, so intolerable has become this suspension of locomotion, and consequent accumulation of such articles as can only pass through or over on this line, that the grand conductor (President) has been forced, under the pressure of circumstances, to blow his whistle (Message) before the passengers were seated or had even fully determined which car (political) they should take. This, instead of hastening the movement, has seemed only to retard it, and make confusion worse confounded. The passengers declare that they will not tolerate such an unprecedented insult to themselves, and that the whistle, notwithstanding it was sprung by the chief conductor, shall not be heeded.

It is true, say the passengers, that the accumulation of freight of a perishable nature, like that now in charge of the conductor, is a plausible excuse for this premature blast; but are not the passengers of more importance than the freight? Just hold on, Mr. Pierce, and let these secondary considerations in relation to the country, and the country itself go to the devil, for aught we care, until we decide who shall father this black baby. Until that is done, away with this nonsense about constitutional principles. The things that you talk about, such as popular sovereignty, constitutionality, and international neutrality, would do very well for old fogies, but it will never do for us; besides, at this particular juncture, when so important a subject is being investigated as that now before us, which is, whether this sable orphan shall still go fatherless, or be made to rejoice under the benign influence of an adopted father—who has declared his determination in case of an appointment to act in all good faith towards the child—to recognize your flummery would be decidedly premature. Therefore, Mr. Pierce, until this business is attended to, you need not blow your whistle, and if you do the train shan't budge.

Matrimonial.

A YOUNG gentleman of education, refinement, good family, wealthy, and of pleasing address, wishes to correspond with a young lady, between 18 and 25 years of age, with a view to matrimony. She must possess the qualifications of the advertiser as given above, of musical taste, good personal appearance and of medium size. Any young lady answering to this description, may unhesitatingly address a line to M. A. Y., Springfield, Mass., who is sincere, and will engage to treat any communication with the strictest confidence, and return it to the author after perusal, if requested.—[N. Y. Herald, Jan. 23d.

We clip the above and insert it in our columns that our distant readers may form some idea of the way matrimonial alliances are brought about in this section of the country, in this age of improvement.

If it read A. P. R. I. L. instead of M. A. Y., we should have suspected the intention; but as it is, we must believe it bona fide, of course.

STILL ANOTHER.

Matrimonial office, 76 Madison street, next door to the corner of Catherine.—Those wishing to form a matrimonial alliance will find it to their advantage by calling or addressing (post paid) Mrs. Prewster, who has opened a matrimonial register, whereby any lady or gentleman may secure to themselves a partner for life, without resorting to the unpleasant alternative of advertising to express their wishes. Parties may send their real names, residence, business, reference, circumstances, requisites, &c., which will be exchanged. Everything concerning letters and interviews strictly confidential. All applications must contain two postage stamps.—[N. Y. Herald.

Oh! poor Utah! you land of many wives! You are very much behind the times! Why don't you bring the press into requisition like us Gothomites and facilitate matrimonial alliances. Read the advertisements in the New York Herald and try to improve thereby.

St. Louis Book Agency.

WE take great pleasure in referring our readers to an advertisement, found in another column, in relation to the Book Agency at St. Louis. Bro. James S. Cantwell, south-west corner of Sixth street and Washington avenue, St. Louis, has long been Book Agent in that city, and still continues to be, where the advertised books can be obtained.

Loss of the Ship St. Denis, and 30 Lives.

THE loss of this Havre Packet Ship with thirty brave, though unfortunate fellows, furnishes another of those melancholy incidents which alone is afforded in maritime history.

The St. Denis, sailed from New York on the 1st instant, and encountered the terrible gale on the 5th, during which time she sprung a leak, and after a short time foundered. Every exertion, it is said, was made by Capt. Follansbee to save his ship and those on board, but alas! his efforts, and those of his officers and crew were unsuccessful, and he and others met with a watery grave.

The chief mate of the St. Denis, Mr. Tufts, one of the survivors, speaks of the sad affair thus:

"The ship sailed from this port on the 1st inst., for Havre, and on the 5th took a gale from S. E. which hauled to N. W. and blew a perfect hurricane, during which the ship sprung aleak and the decks became full of water. We could not get at the pumps to work them.

"We then cut away the main and mizen masts to ease the vessel, when we discovered her fast settling down forward, and at 12 M. 6th inst., left the ship, when she immediately foundered, and the captain, the second mate, three cabin passengers, and the remainder of the crew remaining on board—in all about 30 souls—went down with her.

Mr. Tufts also reports "that he was twenty-nine hours in the boat, which had the starboard side stove in, and it kept five of them continually bailing to keep her free. They had but one barrel of bread and no water to subsist on during the time they were in the boat.

"On the 7th inst., we were picked up by the ship Naples, Capt. Lovell, from Naples to New York, who readily received us on board. The St. Denis was commanded by Captain Follansbee, and was bound hence for Havre, with a cargo of grain, flour, &c."

The position of the survivors after the sinking of the ship must have been at the time, but a little better to all human appearance than that of their comrades already drowned—"at the edge of the Gulf Stream, about 200 miles to the southeast of Sandy Hook, eleven men in a broken boat, without chart or compass, and destitute of water or any provision save a single barrel of bread."

Whose heart so obdurate as not to sympathise with the poor mariner—and at this particular juncture, with friends bereft.

Four Days Later from Europe.

Arrivzl of the Africa.

THE Steamship Africa left Liverpool on Wednesday the 9th inst., arrived at this port on the morning of the 23d.

The intelligence by this arrival shows little change in European affairs since our last.

Speculations and contradictory reports with regard to peace negociations continue, though with less confidence than before. In fact, there seems to be little on which to found such a presumption.

As regards France, rumor reports the tone of the French Government as again more warlike.

This feeling may be increased or diminished by the decision of the allied Council of War about to open its session in Paris.

Russian preparations to continue the conflict are on a larger scale than ever.

Briefly, the hopes of peace have received little or no confirmation.

From the Crimea there is nothing important.

On December 22d the French blew up one of the five docks of Sebastopol, and reduced that fine work to a heap of ruins.

Three days Later by the Baltic.

The steamship Baltic, Captain Comstock, from Liverpool, arrived at her wharf, on the 24th. The news she brings is three days later than that by the Africa. The new iron steamship Persia has arrived at Liverpool under command of Capt. Judkins. Her speed from Greenock averaged sixteen knots an hour. Expectation was on tiptoe to learn the issue of the peace propositions made to Russia. Rumors of all sorts were flying thick, but, the truth is that nothing could be known for at least a week. The terms have been extended for Russia's consideration to the 18th inst. Nevertheless Berlin and Vienna dispatches do not hesitate to assert that advices are already in those capitals indicating that the Czar will make no further concessions. On the other hand, it is certain that formal conferences on the propositions are actually in session at St. Petersburg. They are attended by Counts Nesselrode, Esterhazy, and barons Seeback and Sommer.

Denmark has published a circular, stating that she will remain neutral, and that she has no connection with the Swedish alliance. From the Crimea there is nothing new. Every one believes that in the spring hostilities will be transferred from the Crimea to Northern Russia. Omar Pacha remains shut up in Redout Kale by the winter and the Russians. The Emperor of the French again manifests an intention of going to the war. Liverpool Cotton Market had been very dull at 1-8d. a 1-4d. decline; sales 45,000 bales. Breadstuffs had been in demand at 2d. to 4d. on wheat, and 1s. on flour. Indian Corn dull at last weeks' prices. Provisions generally steady at unchanged rates. Money continued active, with a general impression that the Bank of England will advance its rate of discount. Consols 86 1-8 a 86 1-4 for account. American Stocks quiet, unchanged quotations. Bullion in Bank decrease £273,242 Sterling.

FOR THE MORMON.

"For the Lord hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes: the prophets and your rulers, the seers hath he covered."—Isaiah xxix, x.

It is a fact worthy of note, that, notwithstanding the length of time that has elapsed, and the variety of changes and revolutions that have transpired since the advent of our Saviour in the meridian of time; the hearts of the children of men are little altered.

The same inclination to forsake the light of truth and succumb to the powers of darkness; the same tendency to pervert the laws of God, and substitute the more congenial dogmas and creeds of men; the same blind infatuation and bigoted unbelief that characterized the world in the days of our Saviour, are still prevalent in this the nineteenth century; and we find, in taking a retrospective view, that notwithstanding the progress of the arts and sciences; the various modifications and improvements, in the transmission of intelligence, in the conveyance of the multifarious commodities necessary to the wealth of nations; and in the transcription and publication of intelligence and information that have taken place, within the last few centuries; there is one thing, in which the world is as far in the back-ground as ever; in which it has made no improvement whatever; and relative to which, with all the tomes of Ecclesiastical research and history, coupled with the multitudinous comments and opinions of men, that have been accumulating for hundreds of years, they have been unable to progress one iota. But in this, the most important to the human family of all earthly considerations, it has retrograded, fallen away, descended in the scale of intelligence, and gradually departed from principles which are calculated to ennoble and exalt the children of men, to raise them from the depths of degradation into which they have fallen, to resuscitate in their breasts principles of enduring intelligence and everlasting truth, and extricate them from the labyrinth of inconsistency and error, into which their infatuated disobedience and egotistical self-conceit has led them. Concerning this, the most important and sublime, the most deserving of regard and appreciation of all earthly blessings; the most ennobling thought that could agitate the human breast, concerning this man has dwelt in ignorance for ages. Their Seers have been covered. The wisdom of their wise men has perished, and the understanding of their prudent men has been hid. "Darkness has covered the earth, and gross darkness the minds of the people." The world has been groveling in wilfull, stupid incredible ignorance incapable of extricating themselves from the slough of despond, into which their careless short sightedness and inveterate selfsufficiency has plunged them. And those facilities, that under a proper administration, would have been accessory to the propagation of truth and legitimate intelligence, and the suppression and extirpation of all evil, have now become instrumental in prolonging and extending the reign of darkness and oblivion; until all christendom has become enveloped in the clammy folds of its benighted influences.

Is this something new? Should we be surprised at the iniquity and abomination, the falsity and perverseness of the children of men in this age of the world? At the pertinacity with which they adhere to the admonition of the Evil One, and their proneness to forsake the path of rectitude and virtue? Not if we are at all conversant with the annals of ancient and modern history; with the events that have transpired within the last eighteen hundred years; and have considered the motives that actuated the various performances on the stage of life. Not, if we have scanned those pages of history that unfold to our view the intriguing baseness, villainous deception, and unscrupulous recklessness, with which men have trampled under foot every principle of honor and integrity, that they might gain what the world (falsely) calls greatness and honor. Not if we have read our Bibles understandingly, and can believe the words of inspired men who prophesied concerning the blindness that was to enshroud the world in the latter days; and have perused the record of our Redeemer and his disciples, the persecution they underwent and contumely they endured, at the hands of corrupt ungodly men for righteousness sake. If we have viewed the conflicting creeds and antagonistic elements, of which modern christianity is composed, our only wonder will be at the seeming inexplicable stagnation, or rather, degenerate apathy that has characterized the world, in their pursuit of that intelligence, pertaining to the welfare of their souls, and a knowledge of Him who regulates and controls the Universe. Why is it that mankind is bereft of the key to that imperishable knowledge that reaches to within the veil? If we will read what Isaiah prophesied about twenty-five hundred years ago, we shall not be at a loss to determine. He tells us that it was to be so, on account of disobedience; and that "the earth is defiled under the inhabitants thereof, because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinances, and broken the everlasting covenant." But, say some, how are we to obtain redemption? Who is to emancipate us from the thraldom of iniquity and perplexity, with which we are now saturated, and overwhelmed? God who created man and placed him on the earth. He who holds the winds in his fists and the waters in the hollow of his hand. "The Lord the God of the spirits of all flesh." He has instituted one plan for the redemption of his children, and only one, and he that climbeth up some other way, the same as a thief and a robber.

That plan is clearly developed in the columns of THE MORMON, advocated by all the Elders of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, found in all our writings, and is emphatically the plan laid down in the Bible as the only way of salvation, to mankind. I may take occasion to refer more particularly to this plan hereafter.

Respectfully yours,
GEORGE J. TAYLOR.

THE MORMON.

Correspondence.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15th, 1856.

PRESIDENT TAYLOR:

DEAR SIR—It gives me the greatest pleasure to embrace the present opportunity of writing a few lines to you; I only beg of you to receive this little production with kind indulgence, and to consider it a true and correct interpreter of my feelings.

In taking a retrospective view of the past events of my life, I cannot help recognizing the mysterious ways of a wise and overruling Providence. Eight years ago, when surrounded with the comforts and luxuries of life, little did I anticipate losing all my earthly treasures and of realizing the inconvenience of poverty. Just after having passed through the usual routine of a College and University education, and when I was about to realize the results of my mental exertions, great and mighty events transpired, which, like a deus ex machina, shook the political institutions of the eastern hemisphere to their very utmost, hurled monarchs from their thrones and ruined thousands of people. Utter dismay and consternation seized the mind of the rulers; seeing the frail bark of despotism was near being dashed to pieces by the furious and mighty waves of the revolution, and fearing the truth of the Latin adage, "Vox populi, vox dei," they tried to pacify the political storm by promising the establishment of a more liberal government. The authorities succeeded; the people believed, and were once more lulled into sleep. Without amplifying any longer upon this subject, I return to the scenes of my own experience.

Being a victim of the disasters of that great and portentious epoch of 1848, I was left without means and friends, with my mother on my hands; the spirit of God directed my steps towards the city of Hamburg, where I soon found employment suitable to my abilities, and sufficient to support myself and my aged parent. One day, while reflecting upon the marvellous manner in which the great dispenser of light had preserved me so far, I had a note placed in my hands inviting me to the house of an American gentleman. I went, and found myself in the presence of a stranger who introduced himself to me as a missionary of the Latter Day Saints. In conversing with the delegate, whose name was G. P. Dykes, I discovered that he, not only by his courteous and engaging manners, but also by the brilliant display of his intellectual powers, was well qualified to fulfill his important mission, and to promulgate those principles which, as I soon found out, were alone calculated to save and exalt the human family, temporally and spiritually. I and my mother embraced the work soon afterwards. After having labored for two years, in the way of translating, I was obliged to leave with my mother for England, my way being entirely hedged up by the Hamburg police.

On my arrival in Liverpool, Bro. S. Richards gave me an appointment in the French Mission. After one year's labors under the direction of A. Lamareaux and J. H. Hart, I was counselled to go home to Zion. After I had passed through a variety of trials and difficulties, the natural concomitants of so long a journey as that of travelling across a howling wilderness of one thousand miles, I arrived safe in Salt Lake City. My aged parent had departed her life previous to my starting for the plains. Too weak is my pen and too feeble my talent to portray the feelings which overcome the weary traveller when the first sight of that enchanting valley scenery bursts upon the view. The stillness which reigns there imparts to that beautiful panorama a majesty and grandeur to me before unequalled. I have been travelling to a great extent both in Europe and America, but to the best of my knowledge I can say, that independent of his spiritual salvation, a man has nowhere a better chance to get, by honesty and energy of mind and body, a home of his own, than in those remote valleys. The climate is, owing to the pure mountain air of an elevation of four or five thousand feet above the level of the sea, one of the healthiest in the world and congenial to the system of man. The productiveness of the soil is, if not superior, at least equal to that of the best country on this globe. The community, although a conglomeration of nearly all nations, is, in reference to its moral character, the best, the most virtuous and noble-minded on the surface of the earth; and although we have no social system, a la Cabet, no common-stock business, as some outsiders believe, but everybody is in the full enjoyment of his own property, still our motto is—one for all and all for one.

After a short stay of ten months in Utah, I am sent out by the general authorities of the Church to open the door of life and salvation to my country people, the Germans, in the city of New York; and although I feel it to be an arduous task, yet I am fully determined to devote my physical and mental powers to the rolling on of this work, because I know this Church to be founded on the principle of revelation, which is the legitimate channel of receiving intelligence from on High; and although the world is a stranger to revelation, yet it is scriptural, rational and consistent. I remain,

Yours truly in the Gospel of Peace,

ALEXANDER OTT.

From Our St. Louis Correspondent.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 13, 1856.

PRESIDENT TAYLOR:

Dear Sir,—The company of Saints per ship "Emerald Isle," that you forwarded by the New York, and Erie Railroad arrived safely in our midst yesterday, in excellent health and spirits. They met with considerable delay at Dunkirk, Cleveland, Chicago, Springfield and Alton, which was occasioned by the severe elements—frost and snow. The temperature at Chicago was from 25 to 30 deg. below zero. A little girl in the company had her feet and legs badly frozen, but is now recovering. The company though small appears to have been prosperous; since leaving New York two juveniles have been added to the number. Among the brethren who have arrived here are Elders Foster, Bunce, Spiller, Bottrell, Whitney, Britt and other brethren who are well known to many of your subscribers.

I am happy to congratulate you upon the success of your editorial enterprise in the renowned City of Gotham; and I take this opportunity of wishing you as ses amis Français diraient; toutes sortes de prospirités. It seems to be a comparatively easy business to publish secular journals supported as they are generally by political factions, whose dimes are doled out of Uncle Sam's money bag or that of some other rich relative. But to publish a paper like "The Mormon" advocating principles in direct hostility to the general usages of society, and diametrically opposed to the popular schemes of the age, appears a task of no ordinary character, and one requiring extraordinary efforts, whose success and triumphs must command corresponding admiration.

Unlike the majority of its cotemporaries, whose mercenary spirit and slavish fears lead them to pander to the corrupt and vitiated propensities of an adulterous community, the Mormon has adopted and pursued a course that cannot fail to be appreciated. And if I mistake not, it has already secured friends who will reverentially remember it, when its acrimonious adversaries and their supporters have exhausted their strength against it and are forgotten.

The Mormon papers seem to have operated to some advantage on the black bouche of their cotemporaries. Their former assailants are now begining to understand that the word mum indicates their very best policy. It would be I presume the hardest possible task to get an editor in this city to commit himself by writing his editorial denunciatory of the dread antagonist—Mormonism. It is found an unprofitable business to assail it from any point. The gentlemen of the quill find it a speculation by which they lose not only interest but the principal.

The failure of the anticipated famine in Utah was so sad a stroke to some of these gentlemen, that poor fellows they were completely strained out, until Horace Greeley of the Tribune gave recently some revelations, in his correspondence from Washington.

Mr. Greeley gravely informs us that he had met "a friend a reliable gentleman, fresh from Utah" who became acquainted with some washerwoman; how poetical! Who washed the solders linens; how very sentimental. And saw "Brigham Young" and some "spiritual wives," Mr. Greeley's friend thinks things were going from bad to worse, and expects when the imposture gains its climax all will be exploded. When this catastrophe occurs I hope Mr. Editor you will inform the world of the circumstance, and thus furnish the half a million Mormons scattered abroad with an opportunity of attending its funeral, for such a calamitous event to transpire, unknown to its legions of disciples would be lamentable indeed.

Mr. Greeley's friend thinks that Utah is a poor place for "a Gentile" to live in and gives us to understand by inuendoes that they (the Mormons) have an easy way of disposing of those who render themselves obnoxious. These statements from so respectable and so reliable a source as Mr. Greeley's newly imported Gentile, could not fail to be appreciated by his aristocratic compeers. We have consequently been favored with several reproductions of it in the Mississippi Valley. Mr. Benton's organ "the Democrat," and one of our religious oracles The Christian Advocate, and some other "small fry" appear to have throughly digested the productions of Greeley's friend. The wash-tub, soap-suds, and all the concomitants, went down as though they had not enjoyed a feast since they glutted themselves over the anticipated famine. If I might be allowed to guess I should say that Mr. Greeley's friend was one of those gentlemen of whom Gov. Young said "should they return and play again the games played last winter, they should be sent to their own place." But it is well known that the Governor's word is a legal voucher, it has become proverbial in Israel that Brigham does not lie.

The Evening News of this city informed us a few days ago that the Mormon Elders were unsuccessful among the Cherokee Indians, and had been driven out of the nation. We received letters from the Brethren a few days after, stating that they were well, that the mission was flourishing, that eight Cherokees had just been added to the Church by baptism through Elder Richards' administration, and that all were well. If it were customary to grant patent rights to bogus vouchers, I should certainly recommend the gentlemen of the News to all the honors of the profession, as a worthy candidate.

We had a splendid party on New Year's Day. The reporter, Elder Lees, has furnished I presume a brief report. From seven to eight hundred assembled and partook of the bounteous cheer provided by our presiding Bishop. A good number crawled out on the occasion whom we had not seen for many a long day; and when the enjoyment of the evening was passed, they glided back again like spectres, and we don't expect to meet them again before the resurrection, or some other grand rendezvous, where they expect to enjoy an equal share of the blessings of the faithful Saints.

The weather is still extremely cold. The river affords some fine skating near the city; teams are crossing and re-crossing on the ice. The Mississippi presents altogether at this time a frigid but novel aspect. At one point opposite this city the ferry-boats are plying back and forth; a few hundred yards distant heavy freight wagons are rolling across the ice.

With kind regards to all the brethren of my acquaintance,

Yours truly in the gospel,

JAMES H. HART.

Thirty-Fourth Congress.—First Session.

SENATE.

JAN. 17, 1856.

On motion of Mr. Clayton, the President was requested to communicate all instructions on Central American affairs not heretofore furnished, and calling for the adjudication of the American Commissioners at Paris respecting French spoliations on American commerce.

The presiding officer was authorized to appoint a Committee on Printing.

Petitions from Commodore Stewart, Commanders Lockwood and Long, and Lieutenants Chandler, Handy, Turner, Bowers and Ellery, were presented, complaining of the action of the Naval Board.

Adjourned to Monday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. Carlisle made a speech to show the failure to organize grows out of the disturbance of the Compromise measures and the passage of the Nebraska act—the latter giving food to heartless agitators.

Mr. McMullin defended the Democracy from the attack of Mr. Carlisle.

Messrs. Stephens, Zollicoffer, and Washburn of Maine, debated the question of slavery restriction, replying one to another.

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTEENTH BALLOT.

Banks	94	Richardson	68
Fuller	32	Pennington	6
		Necessary to a choice	104

Messrs. Orr, Williams and Porter, each 1.

Mr. Williams offered a resolntion proposing to elect a Speaker by plurality, if, after three additional trials, no one shall receive a majority of the whole number of votes.

The resolution was rejected, 94 ayes, 106 noes. Adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

JAN. 18, 1856.

Mr. Mace, addressing himself as he said to statesmen, not partisans, offered in a spirit of compromise a resolution declaring Mr. Banks, "Republican," Speaker; Wm. Cullom, "American," Clerk; A. J. Glossbrenner, Sergeant-at-Arms; Mr. John M. Johnson, Postmaster, and Z. W. McKnew, Doorkeeper.

The last three are the nominees of the Democratic caucus.

The resolution was tabled by a vote of 111 against 90.

Mr. Giddings advocated the adoption of the plurality resolution, declaring that the House cannot organize on any other principle. He called on Democrats to follow their own precedent.

Mr. Cobb of Ga., said that the Democratic caucus of 1849 rejected the plurality proposition, which was subsequently adopted by the Whigs, aided by Democrats. [Several members assented to the truth of this statement, and Mr. Cobb continued.] With the "Republicans" the issue is Banks and disorganization, in preference to Mr. Campbell of Ohio, whom they could have elected the other day if all of them had voted for Mr. Thorington's resolution.

Mr. Giddings—I vote as I please, without going to Georgia to learn my duty.

Mr. Cobb—If you did you would be better acquainted with it. [Laughter.]

Mr. Tappan, in reply to Mr. Cobb, said the vote on Mr. Thorington's resolution was not a fair test, as the "Republicans" had made a nomination other than Mr. Campbell of Ohio.

The debate was confined to the Democrats and "Republicans."

Mr. Clingman offered a resolution that until the election of a Speaker, the first business each day shall be to vote twice, no debate being indulged under any pretext, till the two ballots are taken, and further to declare it not in order to vote the third time the same day. Pending the resolution the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

JAN. 19, 1856.

Mr. Clingman, (dem.) of N. C., offered a resolution, that during the calling of the roll no debate or personal explanations be in order, and that this rule and the rule limiting members to ten minutes in debate shall not be suspended except by the unanimous consent of the House. He thought the House had degenerated into a mere debating society. Voting was more likely to result in an election than discussion, because the latter only serves to inflame parties and factions, thus increasing the difficulty.

The resolution was adopted and the House proceeded to vote.

ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTEENTH BALLOT.

Banks	94	Fuller	31
Richardson	69	Pennington	3
Campbell	3	Necessary to choice	102
Foster	1	Porter	1

Messrs. Quitman, (dem.) of Miss., and Grow, (black rep.) of Pa., made speeches, one defending the South and the other the North, concerning the Slavery question.

Mr. Colfax gave a history of the adoption of the plurality rule in 1849, saying that before its adoption eight similar propositions came from the democrats and one from the whigs. The democratis then claimed to have a majority, but owing to disaffection in their ranks, they could not all unite on a candidate for Speaker. The republicans are now similarly situated, and should have the benefit of the rule, The democrats denounced the whigs then bitterly as they do the republicans now.

Mr. Bocock, (dem.) of Va., said if this was a mere squabble between national parties, he should have no serious objection to the plurality rule; but the old whig party was white as snow compared with the crimson guilt (politically speaking) of the republican party. When he saw that the adoption of the plurahty rule must result in the election of a sectional candidate for Speaker, he considered he would be justified in standing here till the crack of doom in resisting it.

Mr. Savage, (dem.) of Tenn., expressed views similar to those advanced by Mr. Bocock.

Mr. Humphrey Marshall, (K. N.) of Ky., and Mr. Harris, (dem.) of Ill., in replying to the remarks of Mr. Grow, earnestly denied that Henry Clay favored the passage of the Missouri restriction. Mr. Harris, in addition to the documents, referred to the testimony of General Jessup in support of his position, saying that Mr. Jessup was present at the time and took notes.

Mr. Grow referred to the declaration of Henry Clay himself, in the Senate in 1850, to show that the latter favored the line of 36 deg. 30 min.

After further debate,

Mr. Clingman offered a resolution, that for one week, unless a Speaker be sooner elected, no debate shall be in order unless by unanimous consent.

Adopted by 45 majority. Adjourned.

SENATE.

JAN. 21, 1856.

Petitions were presented from retired and dismissed officers of the navy, complaining of the action of the Naval Board.

Mr. Bell of Tenn., while approving generally of the action of the Board, thought Lieut. Maury's eminent services should have exempted him from a sentence which he considers a mark of degradation.

Mr. Mallory said Lieut. Maury had been assigned a position on shore at his own request.

Mr. Bell argued that Lieut. Maury served nearly ten years at sea and was entitled to consideration accordingly.

Several gentlemen discussed the question of remedying any mistakes the Navy Board may have committed.

Adjourned to Thursday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. Boyce made an ineffectual motion to rescind the resolution prohibiting debate, except by unanimous consent, for one week, unless a Speaker be sooner elected.

Mr. Faulkner offered a resolution that if no Speaker be elected by Monday next, members resign and an adjournment ensue till the second Monday in May.

The resolution was laid on the table by 26 majority.

Mr. Snead then submitted a resolution that the supporters of Mr. Banks select one candidate from among the supporters of Mr. Richardson and one from those of Mr. Fuller, that those voting for Mr. Richardson select one of Mr. Bank's friends and one of Mr. Fuller's, and that the voters for Mr. Fuller choose one from among the friends of Mr. Richardson and one from among those of Mr. Banks—the members so selected to be considered the only candidates in nomination, and that the lowest on each trial be dropped until an election be effected.

The resolution was tabled, and the House proceeded to take the

ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTEENTH BALLOT.

Messrs. Porter, Haven and Shorter, each 1. Necessary for a choice. 99.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Jan. 22, 1856.

Mr. Boyce, (dem.) of S. C., offered the following:

Whereas, our relations with Great Britain are of the most threatening character, indicating that we may be on the eve of the most startling events; and whereas, it is the imperative duty of the House at this juncture of imminent peril not to abdicate its great mission, but to fulfill it by organizing, if possible, on such basis as will give peace to our distracted country, and enable it to present an undivided front to the common enemy. Therefore,

Resolved, That the conservative elements of this House should unite in a sincere effort to elect a Speaker who will represent the great ides of peace for ourselves and the sword for the stranger.

Mr. Stephens, (whig) of Ga., hoped the gentleman would be permitted to state the facts on which he made the announcement that we are on the eve of a war. If it was so, he knew nothing about it.

Objections were made to any explanations.

On the motion of Mr. Morgan, (black rep.) of N. Y., the resolution was tabled.

Mr. McMullen, (dem.) of Va., made an ineffectual effort to rescind the resolution prohibiting debate.

Mr. Tyson, (black rep.) of Pa., offered a resolution that the candidate for Speaker who shall at any time hereafter receive the highest number of votes from a quorum of members, though less than a majority of votes, be declared elected Speaker, provided that he and each of the other candidates shall have the appointment of the standing committees in proportion to the number of votes respectively received by each; but that no candidate whose vote shall be less than twenty-five shall be entitled to any appointments under this resolution.

The resolution was laid on the table, and the House proceeded to vote.

ONE HUNDRED AND NINETEENTH BALLOT.

Banks	91	Richardson	67
Fuller	29	L. D. Campbell	5

Messrs. Pennington, Shorter and Porter each 1. Necessary for a choice, 98.

Two more ballots were taken, the last being the same as the 119th, given above.

Adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Jan. 23, 1856.

Mr. Richardson said he was sincerely desirous that the House should be organized. It had been intimated here and elsewhere, that there may be an election if himself and other candidates should retire from the contest. The gentlemen with whom he acted would bear testimony that the position he occupies is not of his own seeking, but was one from which he was anxious to recede to relieve the House from embarrassment. He would, if possible, withdraw his name to-day—but, if not to-day, he would to-morrow.

Mr. Dowdell offered a preamble declaratory of their dependence on and gratitude to Divine Providence for innumerable blessings, concluding with a resolution that the daily sessions be opened by prayer, and that the ministers of Washington be requested alternately to perform that solemn duty. Adopted.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-SECOND BALLOT.

Banks	90	Richardson	65
Fuller	30	Campbell	5

Porter, Cobb of Ala, Williams and Pennington, 1 each.

Necessary for a choice, 98.

The Democrats went into caucus immediately after the adjournment of the House, and after two hours deliberation, Mr. Richardson having withdrawn, Mr. Orr was unanimously nominated as the Democratic candidate for Speaker on the principle which governed the election of the former at the first caucus.

Conviction for Manslaughter, etc.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 16, 1856.

THE jury in the case of McKinney, indicted for the murder of Conrad Bauer, brought in a verdict this evening of manslaughter. The trial has created great excitement, and has occupied seven days. General dissatisfaction is felt with the verdict.

John R. Weeks was elected to-day delegate from the Fifth Congressional District to the Know Nothing National Convention.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16, 1856.

NINETY members were present at the Anti-Nebraska caucus at the Capitol to-night, including three Pennington men. Mr. Campbell of Ohio presided. The meeting was more harmonious than was anticipated. Mr. Waldron offered a resolution, (subsequently withdrawn,) in effect declaring against offering in the House individual propositions independently of general consultation.

Messrs. Waldron, Leiter, Kunkle, Grow, Watson, Simmons, Banks and others participated in the discussion regarding the binding effect of the previous formal nomination of Mr. Banks.

Mr. Banks desired gentlemen not to consider themselves under implied obligation to vote for him.

A ballot for candidate was then taken, resulting as follows: Mr. Banks, 66; Mr. Campbell, 12; Mr. Pennington, 4; scattering 7. The nomination of Mr. Banks was then declared unanimous, and a committee of five was appointed, with authority to call any future caucus, on the application of ten members.

Robbery of the New Minister from Venezuela.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 17, 1856.

WE have no mail this morning south of Charleston. The new Venezuelan Minister, Don Francisco Aranda, had arrived at Charleston from Havana, and stopped at the Mills House in that city, where, soon after his arrival, $3,000 was stolen from his room.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18, 1856.

SENATOR HOUSTON of Texas arrived here this morning.

The Union this morning falsely charges the correspondent of the Associated Press with stating that Mr. Vail of New Jersey voted for the plurality rule on Tuesday.

The Republicans held a caucus at the Capitol to-night, and about ninety were present. Mr. Leiter was the chairman. Several evinced a disposition to drop Mr. Banks, but the general feeling to sustain him was as strong as heretofore. At eleven o'clock a discussion was going on as to the best means of securing his election.

The Massachusetts Personal Liberty Bill.

BOSTON, Jan. 18, 1856.

THE bill introduced into the House to-day by Mr. Thomas ("American") of New Bedford, for the repeal of the Personal Liberty bill, was laid on the table. The Senate and House agreed to send that part of the Governor's message relating to this law to a joint special committee, consisting of five Senators and one representative from each Congressional district.

To day being the anniversary of the birthday of Daniel Webster, several personal friends and acquaintances of the departed statesman celebrated the event by a dinner at the Everett House. Edward Everett, Rufus Choate, George S. Hilliard and others made speeches.

At Charlestown to-day Mrs. S. L. Wilder was instantly killed by the upsetting of an omnibus, and her sister, Mrs. Wait, had her collar-bone broken.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19, 1856.

THE Union says no such question as a suspension of diplomatic intercourse has been before the Cabinet. Our relations with Great Britain are certainly delicate, perhaps critical, but the proposed withdrawal of our Minister is not among the evidences which intimate the delicacy of those relations. The Union further says: We cannot deny that there are serious questions and differences between the two governments.

Jefferson Davis was nominated as U. S. Senator from Mississippi on the first ballot, by a majority of twelve.

Additional from Mexico.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 19, 1856.

MEXICAN papers to the 8th inst. have come to hand. They declare that the present government is more inquisitorial than ever. A number of journals had been obliged to suspend or abandon publication altogether, and several editors had been seized and thrown into prison.

More Trouble in Kansas.

FATAL ENCOUNTER BETWEEN ANTI-SLAVERY AND PRO-SLAVERY MEN.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 19, 1856.

THE Kickapoo (Kansas) Pioneer of the 18th says: A battle took place last night at Easton, between a party of abolitionists and some pro-slavery men, the former making the attack. One pro-slavery man was killed, and several wounded. Several abolitionists were also killed and some wounded. A company from Lawrence, headed by Capt. Brown, commenced the fight with the Kickapoo Rangers. A large number of persons have left for Easton. The disturbance is supposed to have originated out of the free soil election of the 15th.

The Nicaragua Affair.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT.

Before Hon. Judge Ingersoll.

JAN. 19, 1856.

COUNSEL for the indicted parties charged with being engaged with setting on foot an expedition to Nicaragua were in court, but no motion was made by the District Attorney to bring the cases on.

We understand that Mr. Cutting will make a motion in the case of Mr. Joseph L. White, counsel for the Nicaragua Transit Company, who was indicted by the Grand Jury on Friday last.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20, 1856.

To-day's Union contains a leader advocating Mr. Faulkner's resolution, namely: That each member shall resign his present commission and go home, and that Congress be convened again in May. This is indicative as I understand it has the approval of the President, and is conclusive, that the administration are not desirous of an organization.

There is to be a caucus of Senators to-morrow, to settle the question of the Senate printing. Everything that could be done for the Union editors has been done. If they can succeed in caucus, the election will come off to-morrow; if not, it will be postponed again.

The Pennsylvania members yesterday received letters from the free soil American portion of the Pennsylvania Legislature, who lately held a meeting in Harrisbug, highly approving their course in supporting Banks.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21, 1856.

IT has been ascertained from an authentic source, that the long talked of alliance between Spain, Great Britain and France has been formally consummated, the first binding herself to send into the field ten to twenty thousand men in the spring, while her interests, particularly in Cuba, are to be protected by France and England.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22, 1856.

AMID conflicting statements, information from an authentic source warrants the assertion that so far from a special message relative to our foreign affairs being about to be sent to either branch of Congress, it has not at any time been contemplated, much less has it been the subject of Cabinet consultation. Though this government has demanded the recall of Mr. Crampton and the British Consuls engaged in recruiting for the Crimea, it can as confidently be stated that there has been no purpose, in or out of the Cabinet, to withdraw Mr. Buchanan from England, unless at his own request. Negotiations between Great Britain and the United States are still open, despatches having been sent out by the last steamer, and nothing has occurred since the transmission of the President's message to Congress to change the aspect of our relations abroad.

Mr. Boyce's resolution offered in the House to-day, declaring our relations with Great Britain to be of the most serious character, and indicating that we may be on the eve of startling events, was not, as supposed, submitted with the consent or knowledge of the Executive, but was Mr. Boyce's independent proposition.

Senator Douglass, in a letter dated at Cleveland, says that he cannot fix any time when he will be here. He has had an operation performed on his throat, which has caused him much delay.

AN EXPENSIVE MODE OF RAISING A BREEZE.—A Paris letter writer, mentioning the extravagances of Parisian belles, says that "even the fans now in use are marked by elaborateness of workmanship, and cost as high as two thousand dollars each. Twenty or thirty dollars are considered the merest trifles for one of these highly decorated, carved and enriched articles." Many a woman has "raised a breeze" on a much smaller capital.

THE MORMON.

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

WE believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the trangression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the ufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The fourth is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the 'laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Bien-aimés frères, je désire, en commençant cette publication, vous adresser quelques paroles. Le Seigneur, dans sa bonté et sa miséricorde, a jugé convenable de restaurer au monde l'Evangile primitif, dans toute la simplicité, la beauté et la pureté qu'il avait autrefois, parmi les chrétiens des premiers temps, aux jours de Jésus et de ses Apôtres.

La lumière de la vérité a éclaté au milieu des ténèbres et de la corruption des hommes, en ce temps où le monde est déchiré par mille opinions contradictoires.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Si nous suivons attentivement l'action de Dieu sur le genre humain, nous trouverons que tous ces maux proviennent de ce que les nations et les peuples se sont éloignés de Dieu; et rien moins qu'un retour à lui ne peut arrêter la terrible tempête, calmer la mer furieuse, tranquilliser les passions capricieuses des hommes, et rendre au monde moral, religieux et politique, cet ordre qui règne dans la création physique de Dieu.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui règle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

C'est la religion que vous croyez et que vous enseignez, qui est destinée à restaurer l'homme et la terre; c'est elle qui ramènera les peuples à Dieu, qui les retirera du chaos moral, religieux et politique du monde, et les rassemblera en un peuple qui sera conduit et reconnu de Dieu; qui sera honoré devant les hommes et les nations; et qui aidera à établir et à développer le royaume de Dieu dans ces derniers jours.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaîtraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? Ou devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y à probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours?

Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconque demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Evangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés?" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit?" Nous le faisons aussi. Croyaient-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains par la foi en Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "l'espoir en la résurrection?" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.?" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.?" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions à son Eglise actuelle.

Nous demanderons ce qu'il y a d'inconséquent en tout cela? Lequel est le plus inconséquent, de croire et de pratiquer les Ecritures, ou de dire, nous les croyons et puis de les nier à notre organisation, à nos doctrines, à nos œuvres.

Mais des visions, des prophéties, des révélations n'ont-elles pas une tendance à conduire à l'enthousiasme et au fanatisme? Oui, les visions humaines et les délusions de Satan l'ont. Mais si le Seigneur eût pensé que ses visions et ses révélations fussent préjudiciables aux hommes, pourquoi les aurait-il données dans les anciens temps? Si elles doivent être préjudiciables de nos jours, certainement elles l'eussent-été autrefois. L'enthousiasme, la folie et le fanatisme des hommes est une chose; autre chose est Dieu révélant sa volonté aux peuples pour leur organisation, leur stabilité, leur consolation, leur union, leur savoir, leur édification, et pour l'établissement de son royaume.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaître Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Les philosophes ont scruté l'homme, la terre, les œuvres de la création pour trouver un vrai système, ils ont tous eu leur jour. Ils ont introduit beaucoup de bons principes, mais quant à l'amélioration du monde, là, ils ont fait défaut. Leurs systèmes, quelque bons que soient plusieurs d'entre eux, sont bien loin d'embrasser l'objet désiré: "Ils ont été pesés dans la balance, et trouvés trop légers."

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaître que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence, ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les excès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lasciveté, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votre lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

A Card to the Saints.

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "THE MORMON." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish, you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
The Greatest Blessing of the Age for the Cure of Diseases of Man or Beast requiring External Application.
"BRING hither the poor, the halt, the lame and the blind," if you would have them healed of their many infirmities. We boldly and fearlessly assert that the Mustang Liniment will positively cure Rheumatism. Let any who are afflicted with that most painful complaint try it thoroughly according to directions, and if they are not cured we will give them their money back. What more can we say? It will also cure the Piles. Thousands have tried it—and all were cured. Bruises, Sprains, Sores or Eruptions fade away as if touched by the magician's wand. Its application to burn or scald acts like "oil upon the troubled waters." The tempest of pain and agony is soon stifled, and the patient is hushed to quiet and peaceful slumbers. "There is balm for every wound," and that balm is the Mustang Liniment. Everybody that sells medicine keeps it for sale. "Hold your horses," and if they are crippled, galled or sprained, use the Mustang Liniment.
READ THE FOLLOWING CERTIFICATES.
THROUGH BY EXPRESS!!!
This is to certify that the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT has been used quite extensively in the stables of Adams & Co.'s Great Southern, Eastern and Western Expresses, for curing galls, chafes, scrofulas, sprains and bruises, and it has proved very effectual. Many of their men have also used it on themselves and their families, and they all speak of its healing and remedial qualities in the highest terms. One of our ostlers got kicked and badly cut and bruised on his knee; as usual, the Liniment was resorted to, and the soreness and lameness was soon removed, and it was perfectly well in three or four days. We have no hesitation in recommending it as a valuable preparation to be used externally on man or beast.
J. DUNNING,

We take pleasure in recommending the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT to all our friends and customers as the best article we have ever used for sores, sprains or galls in horses. We have used it extensively and always effectually. Some of our men have also used it for severe bruises and sores, as well as rheumatic pains, and they all say it acts like magic—we can only say that we have entirely abandoned the use of any other Liniment.

MR. WILLIAM JOHNSON, for the last five years a citizen of Augusta, and now the proprietor of the fine hotel in Savannah, called the Marshall House, has favored us with the following certificate:
The MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT has been used in my family, and on my farm, for a great variety of diseases requiring an external application, and has never failed to give immediate relief and effect a permanent cure. I have cured several cases of rheumatism that had resisted the skill of our best physicians. It has cured ringworms by a single application, chilblains in a few days, toothache, frost bites, cuts, sores and corns by a few applications; nervous headache cured entirely. In fact, I have used it for almost everything, and it has always cured. I consider it the best medicine I have ever used. WILLIAM JOHNSON.
Savannah, June 24th, 1852.
June, 25th, 1852.
I have used the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT in my stables upon my horses in cases of sprains, bruises, galls and sores of different kinds, incident to a large number of horses. I used it upon a horse that had been saddle galled for nearly a year. I had tried many remedies, and one in particular, that I had been in the habit of using for years, and had generally proved successful. Nothing appeared to give it any relief until I tried the Mustang Liniment, which cured it in a very short time. I consider it an invaluable remedy, and would not be without it. WM. H. HOLMES.
SAVANNAH, Geo., June 25, 1852.
We have also used the MUSTANG LINIMENT extensively in our stable, and we find it to be the best remedy we have ever used for sores or lameness of any kind.

B. H. MEEKINS, 189 Walnut street, Cincinnati, was confined to his bed under the treatment of a physician some six weeks, with Neuralgia, of the whole of his right side, leg, arm and face; his sufferings were indescribable, and the only cessation from the most agonizing pain, was while under the influence of opium or morphine His doctor finally advised him to try the MUSTANG LINIMENT; he did so, and in two days was able to go about his business perfectly cured.
This is to certify that I have used the MUSTANG LINIMENT recently in a very severe case of sprain. The right hip was so badly sprained and bruised that fears were entertained that it was out of joint. I obtained a bottle of Mustang Liniment and used it freely for four days, when the soreness and pain were all gone and the hip joint was well.
I have also used the Liniment for the Piles, with which I have been afflicted for many years. Its effects were wonderful. Free applications night and morning for a week have perfectly cured me. Thousands of persons are suffering with this painful disease, and you are at liberty to make this statement public, that all may learn what will cure them.
My brother also states that he has used the Mustang Liniment with the most perfect success in two cases of severe bruises, at our factory in Williamsburgh, and says he considers it invaluable about an establishment where a large number of men and horses are at work, and constantly liable to serious accidents. EDWIN R. BARRON.

☞ While hundreds are rejoicing in the happy escape from smarting pains, occasioned by Burns, Bruises and Sprains, thousands of others will buy the Mustang Liniment and experience the same happy results.
☞ The popularity of the Mustang Liniment is a "fixed fact;" therefore those suffering with Ulcers, Old Sores, Eruptions, and like complaints, need not be reminded of its superiority to give it a trial.
☞ The Ladies will always rejoice at the happy experience of curing eruptions, sore nipples, broken or caked breasts, piles and corns, after a thorough trial of the Mexican Mustang Liniment.
☞ The Mustang Liniment will give the most undoubted satisfaction to any one giving it a trial for stiff joints, stiff neck, or sore throat; it has proved itself efficacious in these complaints in many very stubborn cases.
☞ If you have any ugly, painful corns upon your feet, get a bottle of Mustang Liniment and apply it twice a day for eleven days, and the trouble will be gone.

A Prayer.

FATHER, to Thee our voices rise
In earnest prayer and praise;
Give us each day some fresh supplies
Of Thy abundant grace.

We ask Thee, mighty God, to grant
The boon which we require—
O let Thy children know not want
In this, their heart's desire—

That we from Babylon may go
To Zion's peaceful shore,
And join with all Thy faithful ones
In praising evermore.

Thou know'st our trials and sufferings here,
How hard they are to bear;
Lord, hasten soon the blessed time
For us to gather there.

That when Thou comest to Thy own,
We may among them stand,
And hear Thee say, "Thou hast well done;
Sit down at my right hand." M. C.

LONDON. [Millennial Star.

Senator Toombs in Boston.

Great Anxiety to hear the Lecture of the Gentleman from Georgia—His Reception—Sketch of his Remarks, etc., etc.

BOSTON, Jan. 24, 1856.

SINCE the arrival of the Hon. Robert Toombs of Georgia, in this city yesterday, and his becoming the guest of Hon. William Appleton, as might naturally be supposed there has been considerable conversational excitement among that class who attend lectures, in regard to his proposed dissertation upon slavery, or, as the title is properly, the consistency of African slavery with the Constitution of the United States and republican constitutions, and the effects of the American Revolution upon the African race.

There have been speculations of all sorts: some as to how he would be received on his first appearance on the platform; some as to the manner in which he would treat the subject—whether he would prove plucky to the Southern, or plastery to the Northern, predilections; and a great many as to which portion of the community would be most largely represented at the lecture, at the rate of fifty cents per head—the pro-slavery, the abolitionist, or those who don't care a snap either side, and merely wish to see the Hon. Senator.

All, however, were agreed that the advent of Mr. Toombs, coming as it were to beard the lion in his den, and that too at the said lion's special invitation, was, to use a homely but appropriate word, "funny," and as there are enough in Boston who like to have fun, no matter of what kind, whether it be in religion, politics, or prize fighting, the result was as might have been expected, the Tremont Temple was crowded to excess this evening. Those, however, who went with expectation of seeing a disturbance were disappointed, for with but very slight exceptions the dissent from the opinions expressed was manifested by a respectful silence; while throughout the lecture there were many passages which received hearty applause.

At half-past seven Mr. Toombs appeared upon the platform, accompanied by Hon. William Appleton, Nathaniel Appleton, Esq., and some of the committee who have been instrumental in getting up the course of lectures. He was greeted with applause on his entrance, and without any introduction took the stand for the purpose of commencing his remarks. On doing so, a single hiss was heard from the centre of the hall, which was quashed immediately by cheers from all parts. But upon the subsiding of the latter, the same snaky demonstration continued. This, however, was soon silenced by Mr. Toombs himself, who, perfectly at home, remarked that it made no difference with him. People might choose their own means to express their feelings. Good humor prevailed, and the speaker proceeded.

It is probable (said he) that the majority of the sentiment advanced on this occasion would be opposed to the honest convictions of most of those present, but he trusted that what might be said would tend in a manner to modify the asperity that now prevails between the North and South. What he had to say would be expressed with all respect and deference to the opinions of others, but with firmness and sincerity. The first portion of his lecture was occupied entirely with the history of the Constitution of the United States, and the consideration of the elements which led to its formation, and the opinions of the man who contributed to its construction. He maintained that this instrument does not contain one single article that tended to prohibit slavery, but that on the contrary, the institution was protected by it, though of course not prompted especially. The right to hold slaves is left to the people of each State by its provisions, and no one State could dictate to the other what they should do in the matter. History tells us that the Constitution was formed by the consent of thirteen slaveholding colonies, and at a time when the slave trade was practiced as a branch of lawful commerce. There were anti-slavery men in those days as well as now. Mason, of Virginia, Thomas Jefferson, and others equally great, had advocated the abolition of slavery; but it could not be done. It had been forced upon them by England, and emancipation was morally impossible; and under existing circumstances it is so at the present day. I am not responsible for the Constitution as it stands now, protecting slavery. The South is not responsible. It is your fathers—my fathers—the founders of this glorious Republic, that are responsible. They made the Constitution as it is, allowing each State to have its own institutions, to hold slaves or not as they saw fit. And I think they did wisely. If the Constitution is wrong, endeavor by all means to change it. If it conflicts with your views as to religion, politics, justice or morality, use your energies towards making it conform to your standard. The speaker asserted that in fact the formation of the Constitution increased the number of slaves, and that, too, by the consent of Massachusetts and every voter in New England. This was proved by the provision that the slave trade should exist twenty years from the time of its adoption, until 1801, and that there was an extension to 1808. During the time large numbers of slaves were imported, and a rapid increase was the consequence; and all this, too, brought about by Massachusetts votes and against the protestations of many Southern anti-slavery advocates. Laws made since then by wise statesmen also sustained the views of Mr. Toombs, and an allusion was made to the Fugitive Slave law.

Here there was an interruption by hisses from various parts of the hall, which were taken by the Hon. Senator with the utmost self-possession and coolness. Gentlemen, said he, in an impressive manner, you may hiss your Constitution if you wish, but you do not now hiss me. Go and put your curses where they belong, if you choose—upon the fathers of your country. We come here to speak of the Constitution, and there are enough here and in the country to protect it. (Loud applause.) The speaker then alluded to the condition of the South in reference to slavery; the influence, for good or bad, which that institution has upon it, and the easy control which their government exerted over all classes, summing up with the remark, that since 1789 no Southern State ever had occasion to call upon an extraordinary power to suppress insurrection. Some Northern States could not say as much. Allusions were then made to the Missouri compromise. This law had been allowed to exist for years, but the legislation of 1854 was the step by which the Constitution was brought back to its true bearings—the recognition of the rights of all States to legislate for themselves in regard to their own institutions. Throughout, all the South had acted upon this principle—the true principle of that document, to which every State in the Union is in good faith bound; and it is to be trusted all would soon agree to.

In commencing on the second portion of his lectures, Senator Toombs remarked that the topic touched upon would be one which there would be less probabilities of himself and audience agreeing upon than the first, but he could not help that. This was the effect of the Revolution, and the present system of Southern slavery upon the African race. He, without hesitation, pronounced it beneficial. The people of the North draw indirect comparisons in regard to the condition of the negro in the two sections of the country, both as to the action of the individual to himself and to the whites, comparisons which, when drawn have never been sanctioned by reason or justice. You say that all the slaves should be emancipated immediately, and that no harm can be done by the act, to prove which you cite the condition of your free colored population. But how would it be if the million of inhabitants of Massachusetts consisted of 500,000 free blacks and 500,000 whites? Would your boasted prosperity be as it is now, and would not there be some disposition to look after the interest of the African in a different direction from that at present? Your prosperity as a free State, is not that you are exempt from slavery; it is owing to the absence of the race from your midst. When our country first started, the slaves were not fitted for self-government. They might be or might not in the future. There are no instances in history that will prove that the African race ever took the first step towards self-civilization, but there are multitudes of cases to prove that when once elevated in the human scale—being left to themselves—their tendency was to fall back into barbarism. The principles of our government are based upon the axiom that democracy is a government of men; republicism a government of laws. Massachusetts adopted this sentiment at the outset, and so did Georgia. The laws therefore must be the governing principle; and as negroes were unfit to make laws for themselves, as experience has shown, the Southern whites, having them with them, must make laws for them. The slavery of the African race has been existent with their creation. Other races may have for a time been compelled to bear the yoke, but they only are the ones that have always been subject to masters. So far as the freedom of the North is concerned, it has made them degraded.

The former and present condition of Hayti and Jamaica were alluded to in support of the position of the speaker, and in remarking upon the freedom of the negro in the Northern States, he said:—It is time that he is lord of himself and his heritage. But is it not a heritage of woe, excluded from all civil rights, with but few exceptions, and looked upon with contempt almost universally? His history is written upon the records of the jails and penitentiaries. Mr. Toombs contended that the South was right in the belief that equality in the two races is impossible, and therefore restraint was necessary. The laws of the South gave to the slaves great privileges. I do not pretend, said he, that all are granted that should be, but earnestly hope that soon all that are proper should be allowed to them. I say this in Boston—I will say it in Georgia. The most enthusiastic applause greeted this remark.

The conclusion of the address of Mr. Toombs was mainly a consideration of the condition of the South in a commercial point of view, and he drew a far more favorable picture of its condition than many who pretend that the peculiar institution of that section of the United States is dragging it down to destruction. The substance was that they would be perfectly satisfied to be let alone, as far as that matter was concerned. At the conclusion of the lecture three cheers—qualified of course—were given for the Senator; and as far as could be judged from the expressions heard in the crowd while leaving the hall, there was a general expression of approbation towards the lecturer, not of his opinions, but of his candor and bearing. The audience dispersed quietly, although one man sang out, before Mr. Toombs left the stand, "How long before Charles Sumner can speak in Tallahassee?" Another excited individual in the crowd cried, "Three cheers for Charles Sumner!" But the response was like those demonstrations by the scholars at Do-the-Boys Hall, on the return of Mr. Squeers—"Sighs with the chill on." A moment after we saw a rank abolitionist lecturing the caller, telling him to treat a man decently when thus invited here to express his honest opinions. We noticed a large number of colored persons present and their behavior was such as might have been well copied by one or two of another complexion, who were less interested in the subject under discussion.

Rather too Honest.

AT a late meeting of a country temperance association, the members were asked to relate their experience of the effect of the new law. One aged and somewhat unsophisticated gentleman, on being importuned to give his opinion on the local sale and use of liquor, said:

"Well, I guess about all I can say is, that I used to buy rum for tew shillings a gallon, and now they tax me six, and it ain't more'n half as good as it was wont to be, either." He was permitted to sit down.

Sandwich Islands.

CORRESPONDENCE TO THE MILLENNIAL STAR.

PUNEU, HILO, HAWAII,
Sandwich Isles, Sept. 17, 1855.

Beloved Brother Franklin: As a favorable opportunity presents itself for me to drop you a few lines, I cheerfully improve it, knowing that it will be acceptable to you; at least I judge you by myself, and that, according to the old saying, is righteous judgment. . . .

Since I last wrote to you (which was about the first of last month), I have returned again to the Island of Hawaii, to commence my labors here in the Hilo Conference, over which I was appointed to preside. Cousin John Young is with me; he is the only help I have at present. . . . . There were some native Elders appointed to labor with me here in this Conference, but they have not as yet made their appearance.

Upon my arrival at this place, I found things in rather a crooked situation. Quite a number of the Saints had got to be more or less cold and indifferent, being left some time without any foreign Elders with them, but by the blessings of the Lord, they are beginning to enliven up, and feel to rejoice in the work of the last days.

This people, take them as a people, are very different from the more enlightened and civilized nations of the earth; their minds are like so many little children's, they are easily turned, and a great deal more so to do evil than to do good, consequently it requires the Elders to be with them continually, to lead them along, to instruct them, and to keep them in the right track, when you once get them there. Take the work as a general thing, it is I believe, in a prosperous condition, notwithstanding all the efforts of the devil and his imps to put it down. Lanai, the gathering place, is progressing finely. The brethren have commenced to put in another crop, and the native Saints, those who have gathered there, are buoyant in spirits. The Presidency have made a permanent contract with Haalelea, the chief, for the land. We are to have it two years free of charge, after which we have to pay $175 per year. Our vessel, which has just been built, is afloat, and she will no doubt be a great benefit to the mission, in taking produce to market, assisting the Elders in travelling from one island to another, &c.

Brothers Lewis, Allred, Keeler, Woodbury, and Green have sailed for the Coast, on their way to the Valley. Brothers Hammond and Snider will sail as soon as they can obtain the necessary outfit; they are the only two who are yet remaining of the old hands, those who were laboring here before the arrival of the last company.

Along in the fore part of July last, a ship load of Saints (some 70 or 75 in number) from Australia, bound for San Pedro, arrived at Honolulu. The vessel put in there for repairs, as she had been leaking for several days very bad. After remaining there a few days, and getting repaired, they again put to sea, but were soon obliged to return, it being no better. The vessel was afterwards condemned, and the Saints put on shore without any remuneration whatever. Since then, by combining their means, some 30 or 35 of them have managed to get off; the remainder of them are still here, and probably will be for some time. The company was in charge of Elder B. Frost. Elders Smith and Owen (from the Valley) were also on board, on their return.

The brethren of this mission are all well, so far as my knowledge extends, and rejoicing in their labors, and the most of them are getting to speak the native language very well, at least the natives say they speak it pololei no, kokoke like me he kanka maoli (straight, very much like the natives themselves).

We have lately received news from brother Cannon, California, informing us that the Book of Mormon is nearly completed, and will soon be here, ready for sale in the Hawaiian language. This, you may be assured, I was glad to hear, for I think it will give the work a new impetus, enliven the Saints, set the devil to raging, and be the means of doing a great deal of good.

The labors of the brethren generally upon these lands are very laborious, almost all of the travelling among the Branches has to be done on foot. Such is the case in my field, and the country is very rough and uneven, having very steep parlis to ascend and descend, a great many of them hundreds of feet in height, and as soon nearly as you are over one you come to another. I would not mind exchanging some of my days' travels, for a trip in the kanyon after a load of wood, so far as the labor is concerned. But notwithstanding this, I feel to rejoice all the day long; the Lord has been with me, and has given me strength according to my day. Pray for me, brother Franklin, that I my have wisdom given unto me, so that I may be enabled to bear off the responsibilities which have been placed upon me, in that way and manner that will reflect credit to myself and to the cause which I am striving to promulgate. I never realized my weakness and nothingness in my life to the extent that I do now, but I know that the Lord is all-powerful, and inasmuch as His servants put their trust in Him, He will assist them in every time of need.

I look forward with anticipations of delight to when we shall be permitted to meet together again, with our families and friends, in the Valleys of the Mountains, as we have in days that are past and gone. I did not know how to appreciate those blessings then half as well as I think I shall if we are once more permitted to enjoy them, but I do not wish to return until I have fulfilled my mission honorably, and performed a good work.

My main stopping place is at Puneu, near what is called by the foreigners, Byron's Bay. It is about 30 miles from the renowned Crater of Kilauea, which I had the pleasure of visiting some months since. It is truly a magnificent sight, and strikes a feeling of awe and reverence in its beholders. It has lately broken out in two different places, one of which is only about 25 or 30 miles distant. I am told that the melted lava is running down towards Hilo at the rate of a mile and a half or two miles per day. Its brilliant light can be seen in the heavens almost every night, which makes a grand and majestic appearance. Volcanic eruptions, earthquakes, &c., are no uncommon thing, especially upon this island. Yesterday morning while I was sitting at the table, writing, there was a shock of an earthquake, which so shook the house and table that I had to stop writing until it was over.

Eia Kekahi—I have an item of news which may perhaps be interesting to you, if it was not so much so to me. About two weeks ago, as we arose one morning to dress ourselves as usual, behold and lo! to our great surprise, all of our clothes were missing. After looking around some little, we found them out of doors scattered along the path, and wet through by the rain. Upon examination, I found that my watch had been taken out of my vest pocket, also brother John's money purse was taken, but no money in it. I was somewhat sorry to lose the watch, as it had proved to be an excellent timepiece. It was a lever, full jewelled, and cost me some $40. I do not know of any one who has anything against us, more than what is common for people to have against our principles, with the exception of one man who was President of a Branch, but, because of his wickedness and transgression, I had been obliged to cut him off from the Church. But then this is nothing when you get used to it.

Well, brother Franklin, I shall have to close for the present. Please excuse these few unconnected sentences, for I have written them in a hurry. Please remember me kindly, with love and best wishes, to all of the brethren whom I am acquainted with from the Valley, not forgetting to take a liberal share to yourself.

May God our heavenly Father bless you in all your labors and administrations, and in His own due time permit us to meet again, is the prayer of your affectionate brother,

HENRY P. RICHARDS.

Leap Year.

IT is a well-known fact, that the ladies are allowed, by the conventional rules of society and common consent, to take the lead of the men every leap year; and, if they feel disposed, to go so far as to "pop the question," without being considered rude or forward. Although the right and privilege is conceded to the ladies, we seldom hear of them taking advantage of it. However, one case, in which the lady did avail herself of the privileges of leap year, did occur in this city on New Year's day. We will relate the particulars, but not give the real names, for the reason that the parties are residents of this city, and might not relish the idea of having the privacy of their domestic affairs brought before the public.

There is a certain fashionable boarding house in this city, (we will locate it on Third street,) where a very handsome young widow was boarding. This lady we will call Widow Cheerly, who has a fortune of some $30,000, left her by her deceased husband, and no children. Three young clerks, (we will name them Smith, Brown and Jones,) who formerly boarded at this boarding house, called upon the landlady on New Year's day. The Widow Cheerly was in her room, and saw the young gents approaching. She immediately "dressed herself up in her bridal array," called the landlady and inquired the names of the young gents. The landlady informed her, when she remarked, "I intend to have one of those young men for a husband." The landlady smiled incredulously, and then went down to the parlor to receive her visitors. The Widow followed immediately, and without waiting for an introduction approached Smith and said—

"Will you consent to become my husband?"

The young man blushed, and was very much confused at hearing the question from a lady he had never before seen, but he finally succeeded in stammering out—

"Owing to the shortness of our acquaintance, (very short, having never seen the lady before,) and another person having some slight claims upon my affections, you will please excuse me."

"Certainly," said the Widow, "I will with pleasure, as I did not notice this gentleman," addressing Mr. Brown, "before I spoke to you, or else I would have proposed to him first. Will you marry me, Mr. Brown?"

"I will," said Brown, "the ice is now broke. I would have been a married man years ago, if I could have mustered courage enough to pop the question; but as you have taken advantage of leap year, and removed the stumbling block, I will become your husband just as soon as you please."

"Right off," remarked the Widow. "Landlady, you will please send for my bonnet, and other out-door wearing apparel."

The necessary articles were sent for, and Mr. Brown, with his intended hanging gracefully on his arm, started for the residence of the Pastor of the Boatman's Church. When the minister was about to unite the couple in the bonds of wedlock, they gave him their names, and each heard the other's name for the first time. Everything went on as "merry as a marriage bell," with the new married couple all that day.

Next morning, when Brown awoke, the effects of the numerous drinks of the day previous having now entirely worn off, he began to reflect. He became serious. He thought he was in rather a bad scrape—out of employment, in the middle of winter, very little money, and a wife depending on him for support. While revolving the subject over in his mind, and not being able to decide what he had better do—run off or commit suicide—his wife awoke. "My dear," said she, "have you any objection to collect a few bills?"

He started, thinking that she supposed he had some money coming to him, and that she desired him to collect a "little money" for her benefit, and muttered, rather surly, "No, I have no objections to collecting money, when there is any coming to me."

"I don't mean that, my dear. Get up and go to my bureau drawer, and there you will find bills to the amount of $500, for rents due me for the past month; you will please collect them, and accept the money from me as a New Year's gift."

Brown leaped from the bed, scarcely believing his senses, that he had distinctly understood his wife, and then rushed to the bureau and there found the bills.

When we saw Brown he was out collecting his bills—found it a very easy job—and heard him expatiating upon the benefits of matrimony.—[St. Louis Morning Herald.

A CATHOLIC PIG TURNED PROTESTANT.—A few days since an Hibernian lady, in Bristol, R. I., missed her pig, and having found him after an arduous search, she was informed that his pigship had broken through a window into an Episcopal church, and had done $5 worth of damage, she replied, "The pig and the church may go to the divil. I'll pay no fire dollars for him if he has turned Protestant."

The Rate at which Waves Travel.

A PAPER was read by Professor Bache before the American Scientific Association, stating that, at nine o'clock on the morning of the 23d of December, 1854, an earthquake occurred at Simoda, on the island of Niphon, Japan, and occasioned the wreck of the Russian frigate Dian which was then in port. The harbor was first emptied of water, and then came in an enormous wave, which again receded and left the harbor dry. This occurred several times. The United States has self-acting tide-guages at San Francisco and at San Diego, which record the rise of the tide upon cylinders turned by clocks; and at San Francisco, four thousand eight hundred miles from the scene of the earthquake, the first wave arrived twelve hours and sixteen minutes after it had receded from the harbor of Simoda. It had travelled across the broad bosom of the Pacific Ocean at the rate of six and a half miles a minute, and arrived safely on the shores of California to astonish the scientific observers of the coast survey expedition. The first wave or rising of the waters at San Francisco was seven-tenths of a foot in height, and lasted for about half an hour. It was followed by a series of seven other waves, of less magnitude, at intervals of an hour each. At San Diego similar phenomena were observed, although on account of the greater distance from Simoda (four hundred miles greater than to San Francisco,) the waves did not arrive so soon, and were not quite as high.

[This may be scientific, but to us it is both a heavy story and a long one. The swell must be heavy indeed to travel near 5000 miles in little over twelve hours.]—ED. MOR.

Affairs in Kansas.

We are in receipt of a communication from Kansas, which ought to have reached us at least two weeks earlier. Its contents have, of course, been anticipated by news already published of the late invasion. The concluding paragraphs embrace a suggestion which we believe has not before been made, and we therefore copy them. The writer, who is a man of ability and of note in Kansas Affairs, says:

"We are passing through a terrible ordeal. The liberties bequeathed us by our forefathers are in imminent peril. If blood commences flowing, where is it to cease? A mortal hatred is being engendered. It is a war of races. Hanging a Free-soiler is but pastime, and shooting them a matter of boasting with the Missouri army. We are treading upon the brink of a burning volcano. The most intense anxiety has been felt here, and fervent prayers have been offered to Almighty God to avert the impending calamity. He has turned aside the storm for the present; but the societies forming in different parts of the country to send men here will bring on collision. We most earnestly urge the President to quarter large bodies of troops in the Territory, with special orders to declare martial law in a moment; for if there is another outbreak in the colony, the mischief will be done before orders can be received from Washington. Prompt and efficient measures will make both parties respect the government and laws of the country, prevent civil war and preserve the Union." [Chicago Weekly Express Jan. 19 th.

Fashionable Suicides.

MISS BECHER in her recent work entitled "Letters, to the People on Health and Happiness,', thus expaciates on the follies of her sex with reference to tight lacing:

"And if they [the females] are less vicious [than the males] in the two items of liquor and tobacco, they fully compensate for that irregularity by their immeasurable superiority in the art of suicide by dress. They jam their ribs in, and their abdomen out; they squeeze their interiors into such disarrangement that their hearts hang dangling and knocking painfully about, without their natural support above the diaphragm, and their stomachs below it. They tie up their lungs tight—that diminishes the amount of their breathing—that keeps the blood impure, and sends it, dirty and stagnant, to drag along through flabby muscle and inert brain, and indirectly to vitiate and degrade every manifestation of every bodily or mental faculty. Fit partners are such women for such men; and a sadly deteriorarted race is the progeny of such parents!"

Is Mormonism a Philosoph'cal Paradox?

Or, Is Mormonism Philosophically True?

ARTICLE III.

In the former articles we have investigated in brief the religious phase of Mormonism, and in so doing we have compared its principles, doctrines, ordinances, authority and powers, with those contained in the Scriptures; and having proved that Mormonism is perfectly scriptural, it now devolves upon us to inquire whether it agrees with casuistry, reason, philosophy and common sense. It cannot be expected, however, in the brief limits of one or two newspaper articles that we can enter very fully into all those branches, this we shall not attempt; but purpose to advert briefly to some of the most leading and prominent parts.

Very much has been said and written on the philosophy of christianity, and many ideas advanced that in the abstract are really very true and meritorious, but which, for the want of a proper application, lose all their vitality or force—some of which we may have occasion to refer to in the course of this article; however, as Mormonism is the subject that we propose investigating, it is that to which we shall turn our particular attention at the present. We shall commence then by stating that

MORMONISM PROFESSES TO BE A REVELATION FROM GOD.

The question naturally arises in some men's minds—How do we know that there is a God? and if there is a God, is it reasonable that he should reveal himself to man?

In relation to the first query, we must confess that we have our doubts whether any really intelligent man, who has reflected upon the works of nature, can have any misgivings. There are really very few in the world, whatever their location, habits, color, pursuits, or form of worship, but who believe in some kind of supreme, controlling, overruling power. There are some, however, even among civilized beings, who profess a disbelief in the existence of God, or a supreme being; and we shall therefore take up the subject, briefly, and assign some reasons, based upon natural philosophy, why we should have faith in the being of a God, and in doing so we shall take the statement of philosophy itself.

One of the first rudiments of natural philosophy is, that matter is inert—that it is incapable of moving itself, or of stopping itself when put in motion. We are aware that there are those who contradict this idea, and hold another theory; this we may refer to in the course of our investigation. It is, nevertheless, one of the fundamental principles of natural philosophy, as taught in our schools at the present day. Another of its properties is indestructibility, which necessarily implies eternal; for if it cannot now be destroyed, it follows that it could not be destroyed in any anterior age; and it must necessarily follow, that a thing that cannot be destroyed cannot be created, and must, therefore, be eternal. As the indestructibility of matter is not generally disputed however, we shall not stop to argue the question—its solution will not affect the argument. It suffices us, for our present investigation, to take the first-mentioned admitted property of matter, which is inertia. Now, if matter is incapable of self-motion, and of stopping itself when put in motion to-day, it always was. If this statement be true, therefore, the question necessarily occurs, How came this and other worlds into motion? Where or when was the first spring of action? What produced the earth, the sun, moon and stars? What principle or power operated upon crude inert matter, and gave it form and shape? Nature, as some people state, could not do it, or matter, of which nature is composed; for all nature is made up of matter, and that matter, according to the afore-mentioned theory, is inert, is inert now, and always was inert, and therefore incapable of self-organization; and unless there be some other power or principle, or Being existing, somewhere; some organization that possesses the principle of vitality, intelligence, or creative powers, this world and its denizens never could have been formed. Call it by what name you please—call it nature, call it spirit, call it God; the appellation signifies little to our present argument—it is the principle we are after; for we cannot conceive of an inert principle organising worlds, regulating their motions, filling them with animal and vegetable life, and producing the beauteous order and harmony that everywhere prevails in this world and throughout the immensity of space.

We shall not stop here to inquire whether this nature, spirit, or God, to which we have referred, is a purely spiritual essence or material—we believe everything is material—but shall content ourselves with stating that there is evidently a supreme, creative, existing, living power, an invisible esse, that acts and operates visibly upon more crude materials, combining, adapting, organizing, controlling their movements, and regulating them as the mind of man does his body; and which, although not tangible or visible to the touch or sight, is yet as demonstrable by its effects, as the action of air, heat, or electricity are in their effects, and possessing some powers different and distinct from those generally ascribed to matter.

It is an admitted axiom that an effect cannot exist without a cause. We are then led to inquire, What is this great moving cause? for its effects, as before referred to, are as visible and as clearly demonstratable as the action of water, wind, steam, atmospheric air, or any other power applied as a mechanical force. In fact, our mechanical laws themselves are gathered from the operations of nature and the properties of matter, and are simply an appropriation of the laws which govern the material world. In discussing the properties of matter, and the laws and operations of the visible material world, the philosophic mind is necessarily led behind those crude ideas to the origin and first moving cause. It is not enough for such a one to be told that matter possesses so many essential properties, such as Impenetrability, Extension, Figure, Divisibility, Indestructibility, and Inertia; he wants to know what gave it those properties and unerringly associated them with it. If he is told of the principles of Mechanics, Hydrostatics, Hydraulics, Pneumatics, Acoustics, Pyronomics, Optics, Astronomy, Magnetism, Electricity, and the immutible laws by which they are governed, he wants to know whence those principles emanated, and who originated those unchangeable laws—what mind, what power, what intelligence placed them there. He knows that a steam engine, a clock, a watch, a ship, a house, an anchor, a needle, or even a pin did not assume their shapes of themselves—the matter of which they are composed is inert—it required a conception, a design, and a mechanical operation to accomplish this. If it requires all this to make even a pin, can a world and its inhabitants be made with anything less? It is not enough to tell us that the planetary system is governed by the laws of attraction, repulsion, gravitation, density, &c. Who placed those bodies there and gave them these laws? It will not answer to say they came by accident. Steam engines, carriages, ships, chairs, and tables do not come in so questionable a manner. In fact, if cause and effect are essentially connected—if it is necessary to have a watch or clock-maker, a chair or table-maker, or a mechanic to organize and adapt matter, in manufacturing any article, it surely requires a world-maker to make a world; and whether we can see him or not avails little—his works are visible. We may here be asked, Who made this maker? what sort of a being is he? when did he begin to exist? where does he reside? and a thousand other questions. This, we opine, has nothing to do with the matter.

Some profess to say that all matter is not inert; that from eternity it possessed the principles of life and intelligence; at first in a state of embryo; but that by motion, union of particles, and consequent intelligence, it grew, spread, increased, extended, combined, and became an embodiment, until systems were organized, worlds formed, and vegetable and animal life organized in all their varieties. The above we have little to say about. It may be true or false; we don't know; neither is it essential to our purpose that we should. We know that such a power exists, which is enough for us at present, and we shall not stop now to inquire whether that power was thousands or millions of years of forming and attaining its perfection, or whether it has existed millions of years beyond the ken of human perception; nor where it's location is. If we see a watch we know that it has been made by a watchmaker, and whether we can tell where he lives, what his name is, how old he is, or whether he lives at all or not, has nothing to do with it; we know that it did not come together without materials, design, intelligence, and mechanical skill; that some person made it, and his name, age, residence, or size, does not affect the question. An effect cannot be produced without a cause; a watch is made; it was organized by a watchmaker, who was the cause of its being made. To deny, therefore, the existence of a great supreme creative principle or being is absurd in the extreme. Who originated all living creatures, adapted them to their various localities, imparted to them the powers of propagation, and supplied their wants? It won't do to say they grew like corn or potatoes; we should ask where the seed came from. If told that it came gradually, and took millions of years to perfect it, we should call for the proof, and then if proved it would not alter the principle that a great intelligent power does exist, for whether self-created or not there it is.

We have referred heretofore to a power, although associated with that power there is evidently a design. We now wish, more particularly, to refer to a principle of Mind or Intelligence—to the evident footprints of a Contriver and Operator.

We have spoken of power or law, which terms necessarily imply an originator or agency. There can be no law without an agent; the law is simply the modus operandi of the agent. When we speak of the laws of animal or vegetable nature, or the laws of nature in general, we are necessarily thrown back to nature, which, according to the hypothesis of some, is the originator, designer and contriver of this law; for where there is a design there must be a designer—contrivance implies a contriver, and law an agent or lawgiver.

In examining the works of creation, there is nothing so striking as the manifestation of consummate wisdom, skill and intelligence. Wherever we turn our attention, the traces of contrivance, design and intellectuality abound; whether we look at the nature and composition of man, the animal or vegetable creations, the movements of the planetary system, or the elements of which they are composed—and when combined, bespeak the presence of some precient, omnipresent, omnipotent, governing mind or intelligence.

Take, for example, the air: while it is as universal as nature, it supplies the lungs, supports fire, conveys sound, reflects light, diffuses smells, wafts ships, bears up birds and insects, buoys up the clouds and consequently gives rain; it possesses properties varied, useful and extensive. Can any one imagine that these properties originated by chance? Nor are the properties of water less useful or varied. It maintains all its inhabitants, nourishes plants, and through them the animal creation. It dilutes their food, quenches their thirst, floats their burdens, and is the basis of their fluids and juices. Again, fire also possesses its distinctive properties; it enlightens, dissolves, warms, and may be considered as the great promoter of vegetation and life, and necessary to their sustenance. Were it not for this, all "fluids would be frozen, the ocean a quarry of ice, and all nature stiff and dead." We must not stop here to speak of the uses and properties of light—its boundless extent, immense velocity and tenuity, the brilliant prismatic colors of which it is composed, or the splssitude or powers of the sun's rays. The whole of the elements possess properties so varied, so extensive, so general and unvarying in their application, that, whilst their leading outlines attract our attention and excite our admiration, the details are entirely beyond the grasp of our intellect.

If we examine the construction of trees, shrubs, plants and herbs, we are struck with their design, beauty, symmetry, strength or weakness, according to circumstances, position, climate, and their peculiar adaptation to every place and contingency. Their seeds, delicate affinities, construction of the embryo, modes of propagation; their male and female, with their fecundating effluvium and gravid seed vessels; the mode of protecting those, varying according to position and circumstances; enclosing them in husks, skins, scales, shells, pods, pulps, pellices, and every kind of armor for their defence, protection and propagation.

There is not, perhaps, so perfect a piece of machinery in the world as the human system—not to mention the framework or bones: their nice elaborate workmanship, curious and well-fitted joints, their symmetry and adaptability, for strength, motion, protection and endurance, are remarkable. What is more perfect than the tenuity and strength of the muscles, and their adaptation to this wonderful machine? Proceed we: The arteries and veins—the one to convey the blood from the heart, the other for its return: the first stronger than the last, because there is greater force applied to it. The arteries are protected, too, in their various locations in the body, and sacredly guarded from harm; in some instances, cavities are made in bones for their protection. The action of the heart in sending blood through these arteries, as they spread and expand to the most remote part of the system, until you cannot puncture even your finger with a pin without striking one; the return of that blood through the veins; the operation of the lungs for the reception of air, the chemical separation of the oxygen and nitrogen, the purification of the blood by the former, and the rejection of the latter; the forcing of that blood, revivified, to again nourish the body—are all wonders. Nor is the operation of the stomach less remarkable, with its reservoir, ducts, glands, and myriads of capillary tubes for the straining and conveying of the secretions of the human system; not to mention the organs of the eye, ear, or of the nervous system. Did this perfection come without mind?

Nor is there less design manifested in the construction of insects, birds, beasts, or fishes, whether we regard their construction, form, mechanism, habits, adaptation to climate, mode of defence, of propagating their species, their internal arrangement, mode of locomotion, bones, sinews, arteries, veins, powers of digestion, respiration, sight, hearing, smell, instinct, or any other principle associated with animal life, the particulars of which it is not our object to discuss at the present time; but which manifest design, contrivance, mind, intelligence, altogether superior to that which is found in man; for whether we take an elephant, mammoth, or animalculæ, the same design and contrivance is manifested, and we know not which to admire the most, the large, massive, powerful structure of the one, or the minute perfections of the other.

Turn we for a moment to the planetary system, and examine the heavenly bodies. Here we see immense spheres or worlds moving at an incredible velocity, yet so nicely balanced and arranged that the changes of place of this immense system of worlds, and their arrival at any given point, after traversing regions of void and trackless space, can be calculated to a few seconds. Who instituted this order, or whence came it? We may talk about laws of gravitation, of centripetal and centrifugal forces; but whence originated these laws? Who first gave these bodies their projectile force, and placed them in their orbits? Imagine, for a moment, enormous globes turned into boundless space, confined by nothing, allowed to seek their course, and yet held in that stated position by some invisible principle, governed by some eternal law, and we shall discover an adjustment of force, of distance, direction, and velocity, which is evidently the result of some invisible, eternal intelligence or mind.

Whichever way we turn our attention, in all the works of creation, we see a wisdom, an intelligence, an adaptation to circumstances, a prescience, a power manifested, that leads us to some great esse, some unseen, hidden creative and controlling power, who by superhuman intelligence, prescience, and forethought; by some mysterious, hidden agency; some comprehensive, omnipotent, eternal mind has originated, designed, brought into action all terrestrial life, whose very works are the foundation of all philosophy; who has in his own works given us boys lessons in science to reflect upon, but which we can never imitate, and our utmost stretch of intelligence cannot even unravel, much less originate; and who has displayed in his philosophy a wisdom, adaptability, and intelligence that is as much higher than our own as the heavens are above the earth. There is no comparison between our philosophy and that of this great unseen, eternal Being, and as well might a puling baby, playing with its rattle, compare its mind or philosophy with that of the giant intellect, elevated genius, and profound philosophy of a Newton or Herschel, as for us to compare ours with this great I AM.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Our Relations with England.

DURING the past week the speeches elicited from members of the Senate have shown to the country that there exists at the present time an anxious solicitude with regard to our relations with England. Mr. Clayton, whose right to know the meaning and import of the treaty of 1850, has taken up the cudgel placed in his hands by the President, and—with all deference to the House, no doubt, yet at the same time unable to hold his peace—has pounced upon John Bull with the characteristic of a Jonathan, and dealt his blows to the tenderest points of his antagonist, with unerring precision and overwhelming force. If Master John don't wince at that, it is only because he has grown callous by age and repeated pummellings of the same kind, from the same and other quarters. But "the most unkindest cut of all" is that letter of Lord John Russell. We quote the closing sentence:

* * * "But we intend to adhere strictly to the treaty of Washington of the 19th April, 1850, and not to assume any sovereignty, either direct or indirect, in Central America. J. RUSSELL."

"London, Jan. 19, 1853."

This acknowledgement of Lord John, three years after the treaty, so inconsistent with the position now assumed by England, shows a discrepancy not unlike that of ancient time, when "there arose a new king that knew not Joseph."

Mr. Clayton—after presenting the letter referred to, and moving to print—expatiated at length upon the grasping disposition of England, showing that wherever she could exercise her power she would do it, whether at the Isthmus of Suez or Darien; and that she was not very choice as to the mode by which she did it, so that her strength was sufficient.

Other Honorable Senators followed Mr. Clayton, objecting to the discussion of this question at present; but it would not do. Mr. Cass has the floor for Monday, and Mr. Seward is expected to follow him: elaborate speeches are expected from both. All this is fortunate for the President, as it is in his hand, and consonant with the suggestions in his Message; besides, it adds capital for his extra Message to Congress on our relations with England, when the House shall have organized, and when he shall have sufficiently rested and "spit in his hands," preparatory to a "long pull, and a strong pull, and a pull altogether."

Whatever might have been the policy of the preceding Ministry of England, it is very evident the present ministerial functionaries of that realm are determined at least to try the timber of Brother Jonathan. Acting upon their own experimental philosophy, that a penny saved is as good as a penny earned, Her Majesty's Ministers are anxious to save enough from the West to pay the expenses of her war in the East, or, at any rate, a portion of it. The fact is, John can't afford to be liberal to Jonathan just now: instead of a fat slice from the tenderloin of Russia, and a magnanimous compensation from Turkey which was at first anticipated, stern realities have taken the place of the baseless fabric of a vision, and instead of the accessions of territory and treasures to Britain as seen in the dreams of a castle-building Ministry, grievous taxation, empty vaults, an augmented public debt, and a corresponding distrust and lack of confidence in monied backers, are all now visible to the naked eye, and daily and hourly growing in magnitude. Under these circumstances how natural it is to expect a reaching of this "strong man armed" for something in such other direction as shall afford aid and comfort in this his hour of need. Hard-hearted, indeed, must be Jonathan to contend the point now with that firmness that characterized the 54 40 issue.

But, then, there's that Monroe doctrine, that comes in and forbids any little present from Jonathan by way of conceding the right to his venerable old ancester of controlling a province or two in Central America. Were it not for the precedence it would not be so objectionable; but as the right of an inch conceded, would lead to the eventual claim of an ell, it won't do.

This is about the feelings of Jonathan, and he is a stubborn youth; if he actually says, Britain shan't have the land! it will be so; and present appearances indicate very much such a decision.

If such should be the case, and the President's construction of the treaty of 1850 be sustained by Congress, it becomes a question what course Great Britain will take on the subject. One thing, however, is pretty certain, and that is, England will take some time to consider, before locking horns with Jonathan again, and we should not be surprised if she "took it out in considering." At any rate, she will not be in any particular hurry to get into another war, especially with the United States, until she can see a better prospect than is now visible of getting out of the one she is already in.

If, however, our country should exhibit itself as a nation divided against itself, and by its apparent weakness from civil commotion and internal distraction, invite to our shores, as the Musquitoes did to theirs, the protectorate of Britain, it would not be in keeping with British policy to let the opportunity pass without improving it. In case of such division—which is becoming daily more and more apparent or probable—whichever faction should call upon Great Britain for assistance, would be very likely to find in that Power a ready ally.

Notwithstanding the professed anti-slavery proclivities of Great Britain, let the South, with her cotton interest, once appeal to her, and the cotton bales would be so much larger in her eyes than the negroes who raised it, that the latter would no more be seen than was the army of Jackson by that of Packenham through the celebrated cotton heap at New Orleans. It seems to be a self-evident fact, that that kind of wool called cotton wool, though transparent to some, is perfectly opaque when pulled over the eyes of John Bull. He can see the cotton very distinctly, but it blinds him for seeing anything else.

We refer to the above contingency as not being beyond the bounds of possibility, and as being an item worthy of consideration to those who are constantly crying peace and safety, and at the same time hagging on the South to an issue of the kind referred to, only of a much more serious nature than might become us at present to write. We have no disposition to irritate and harrow up the souls of men, farther than to direct their attention to facts which vitally concern them, and then leave them to treat the subject with as much indifference as they please.

We have thrown out some brief hints on the subject before us in what might appear rather a jocose style, but we submit to time to show that in what we have said there is more truth than poetry.

Prospectus.

WE are gratified to receive and to lay before our readers the following Prospectus. We hail with pleasure the elevation of the Western Standard, and shall be glad to place it on our list of exchanges.

Its Editor, George Q. Cannon, has for some time been laboring on the Hawaiian Islands, with very great success; he has mastered the language of those Islanders, and has translated and published the Book of Mormon and other works into that tongue. And if he displays as much energy and talent in his editorial capacity, we shall expect to see its columns filled with intelligence from this far off and interesting El Dorado.

We commend it to the consideration of the Saints, and all who are interested either in Mormonism or in news from the land of gold.

Send on your subscriptions to us, and we will forward.

PROSPECTUS OF THE WESTERN STANDARD.

IT is the intention of the Subscriber to commence the publication of a Weekly Newspaper bearing the above title, the first number to be issued about the middle of February next, to be devoted to the interests of the CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS—to be an exponent of its doctrines, and a medium through which the public can derive correct information in relation to its objects and progress. Its columns will also contain items of general intelligence and the current news of the day, both foreign and domestic, which, from our position, situated in the Queen City of the Pacific, we will be able to obtain at the earliest dates and in ample detail.

It will be our aim to make "THE WESTERN STANDARD" an interesting and instructive sheet; and, as its columns will be enriched by the correspondence of the Elders of the Church, who are laboring in different portions of the Earth, and by choice selections from the leading papers of the United States and Great Britain, we trust it will be satisfactory to our subscribers.

To the Saints, the announcement that another publication is being issued, under the sanction of the First Presidency of the Church, that will be found on the side of truth, defending it and heralding it forth, will be received with pleasure, and will, no doubt, meet with their hearty co-operation and support.

As a medium of advertising, the columns of "THE WESTERN STANDARD" present unusual facilities to business men and general dealers, as it will be extensively circulated among the Emigrating portion of our community.

Philosophical Rambles.

BY ALEXANDER OTT.

WHAT is more interesting to the philosophic mind, than to soar in the fields of intelligence, to get a knowledge of those principles by which myriads of worlds, are made to revolve in silent majesty in their elliptical spheres without ever deviating from their course, and thereby showing, that the grand drama of nature is performed according to the laws of eternal order and harmony.

Some of the greatest philosophers of bygone times, like Plato, Aristotle, Socrates and others, have spent their lifetime in the study of the phenomena which the immortal Spark represents with which our tabernacles are tenanted. Great discoveries in reference to the Spirit, and its operations upon the body gave rise to a new science, termed "Psychology," from the Greek, Treatise upon the Soul.

That interesting and important branch of human knowledge is divided in the empirical and rational parts. The empirical part treats upon the phenomena which are caused by the Spirit operating upon the system, in its various functions. The rational part speaks of the matter of the Spirit, independent of the body. Modern philosophers like Vant, Schelling, and others, have endeavored to explain hypothetically that important question, but they all have failed, it is something beyond their grasp. A great many call the Spirit immaterial, and cogitative, but that is quite an erroneous idea. Everything that exists by itself must necessarily have a material body, no matter how refined it is, and inasmuch as the existence of the Spirit in the body is beyond all doubt, it must be something tangible.

One of the most interesting phases of the Spirit's mysterious mechanism is a dream. Lord Byron is correct in saying, Sleep has its own world, it is the boundary between death and existence. When the weary traveller in this vale of tears, returns in the evening to his humble cottage forest, and sleep overcomes his exhausted system, the intellectual faculties by which the scenes of the day were brought under the immediate cognisance of the senses, cease to operate, the Spirit retires, the scenes of this world are closed, and fancy has its sway.

Every one who is familiar with Anatomy, knows that the cerebellum is the lower or hinder part of the brain, and the cerebrum, the front or larger part of it. The cerebrum is generally the seat of dreams.

Previous to my enlarging upon this topic, I have to mention, that dreams are either objective or subjective; objective dreams are those which are produced by external objects, subjective dreams are the results of internal feelings; the former have a reference to our everyday life, the latter are of a prophetic nature, and touch the future.

As soon as the curtain has dropt between the outer and inner world, the Spirit assisted by memory, which is a natural receptacle of all impressions made upon the mind, by things abstract or concrete, follows up the scenes of the past, the inner man believes himself moving in real life, owing to the interesting principle that everything appears to the dreamer as a fact, or, to be more explicit, every idea that has impressed itself much upon the mind, is realized in a dream. As the Spirit requires in its everyday life the guidance of reason, in order to prove itself an intelligent being, so does it also require the same in its nocturnal rambles; hence a dream is lucid when guided by reason, and chaotic or confused when destitute of the same. The sleeper when under the influence of such dreams, is more or less restless, and on awaking feels excited and exhausted, owing to the Ganglion or sympathetic nerve being too much affected by the nocturnal scenes which cause the blood to run faster in its arteries. When the Spirit retires as it were into the inmost recesses of the body, when all communication of the outer world with the inner man has ceased even in dreams, and all the intellectual faculties slumber, then the Soul, may be fit to communicate with the Spirit World. It is at such times of perfect rest of the intellectual powers, that Heavenly messengers may hover around man, and convey to him intelligence from the mansions of glory, it is then the time for visions and revelations.

The above ideas, although they emanated from some of the most eminent philosophers, are correct to a certain extent, yet it does not follow that everybody in a perfect state of rest may receive intelligence from on High. On consulting the sacred records, we find that the Almighty has different ways of communicating with the children of men, either by dreams as He made himself manifest to Joseph in Egypt, or by visions, as He appeared to Abraham, or as in the case of Lot to whom He sent two angels previous to the destruction of Sodom and Gomorah. As we would not like to pollute ourselves by intercourse with bad, infamous persons, neither does the Lord, who, as we learn from the Scriptures only speaks to righteous, honest-hearted people, who are willing to seek Him and keep his commandments.

Correspondence.

THE following letter from Mr. Holderness was passed to the printer without proper examination, and in reading the proof we find it to be entirely different from our views. Some women claim equal rights with men, while Mr. Holderness seems to allow them none. We consider these the two extremes, between which a proper medium can be found by those who are governed by a spirit of peace and compromise.

FOR THE MORMON.

Women's Rights.

Correspondence From William Holderness.

ROME, Adams Co., Ohio, Jan. 1856.

THE attention of the American public has lately been drawn in an especial manner to the rights of women, and their condition has been investigated with much diligence, to ferret out the wrongs by which they are enthralled, though many of those wrongs are so palpable as to need no search. But, as is usual in all questions of a public nature, this subject has been made, in a remarkable degree, a subject of special pleading; a process by which the true light must always be obscured. For, in this investigation two principles in ethics have been overlooked. First, that the pursuit of special and private rights is always wrong and disastrous, as being an infringement of the unity and solidarity of the race, however just in itself the cause may be, more especially must any controversy be evil and calamitous that woman can have against man, with whom she is by creation one body, and by divine decree one flesh. Second, that as in every department of God's Kingdom extremes meet, it is hardly possible to pursue right to its consummation without transgressing the dividing limit, and getting into wrong. Hereby the ardent pursuit of any right is invariably defeated; the perfection of any object being found in juxta-position, or apparent coalition with its opposite. Thus, true liberty is found in strict subjection to law. The purest self-love is found in devotion to one's fellows. The most perfect concord and unity are in each taking their own way; while the perfect hostility and divisions of the race is accomplished by forced unity. Right is best established by conceding to the turbulent every right. Paradoxical though these maxims appear, yet reason and experience both prove them, and the precepts of Christ confirm them. If the foregoing principles be true, and they are perfectly demonstrable by experience and calm philosophical reasoning, then women can never establish their rights by pursuing them, but their wrongs and bondage will be much aggravated by such pursuit. If they are in any way, injured by the other sex, the injury can only be repaired by the repentance and voluntary reparation and restitution of the injuring party; for lost rights are never recovered from the wrong doer, except by his voluntary, and in no degree forced concession; the concession being the result of conviction and not at all of influence, or force. Rights recovered by force must be perpetually guarded by incessant vigilance, stringent laws, heavy imposts, and intestine tyranny, and a right in such a condition is no right at all, but a grevious wrong.

If women are wronged, they must either be wronged by the men, by one another, or both, these three being the only positions possible. And in the investigation of this subject, it is believed that these three positions will be found to exist in fact. The injuries that women receive from men must be either spontaneous, or retaliative, or both. Now, injuries of women from men must be very rarely spontaneous, for woman is not naturally a rival to man, and hence he is very far from being to her an object of hostility. Probability would therefore make the wrongs done to woman retaliative from the man and retaliative as well as spontaneous from her own sex; for amid the incessant mutual contentions of women for the favor of the other sex, in which contentions the real source of all the social evils affecting them is to be found, it is not possible that the man should escape without some injury, and if the man, in such circumstances, retaliates on the woman, it is no more than might be expected from human nature, and the circumstances of the case frequently afford him a justifiable though perhaps not a just plea for that retaliation. And as competition reduces the market value of an article of merchandize, so the mutual competition of females has, in many respects lowered them beneath that station which God had originally intended them to fill. Hereby palpably originate the retaliative wrongs that women suffer from their own sex, which constitute the great bulk of the social evils by which they are oppressed. According to the primitive history of the race, from this same spirit of competition the besetting sin of the race, especially of the female, though having in this instance another object than their own sex, the first wrong and consequent moral fall of mankind originated.

As one of the penalties of this her primitive transgression, and moral weakness, it was enjoined on the woman that she should submit to the man "thy desire shall be to thy husband (or man) and he shall rule over thee;" the word desire here not dimifying, fleshly lust, for the same language in the Hebrew is used with regard to Cain and Abel, 4th Ch. 7th v. Now it is plain that any contention of the woman with the man for rights must be so far a rebellion against him, and therefore a rebellion against God who issued the decree that the man was to rule over her, which was made, at the time, one of the essential conditions of her future existence. And though her destiny in Eden might and in all probability would have been different if she had not fallen, it is vain for her to think that she can restore herself to that condition, her return to that condition is hindered by a symbolical sentinel with a flaming sword that turns every way; if ever she is restored it must be by kissing the rod that strikes her,

Letter from Col. Parker H. French to Mr. Marcy.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18, 1856.

Hon. Wm. L. Marcy, Secretary of State of the United States:

I HAD the honor to address your excellency a note, under date of the 19th of last month, the sole object of which was to request an interview with your Excellency before laying my credentials before your government. To my astonishment, you placed a different interpretation on the note from my intents. Your Excellency's reply, under date of the 21st of the same month, informed me of this fact. Your reply also establishes a new and startling precedent—that is, that you cannot hereafter receive any diplomatic agent unless the government he represents is established by the untrammelled expression of democratic will. It seems to me that the following extract from your letter is conclusive of the new rule for recognition, as just alluded to. You say:

Those who were chiefly instrumental in suspending or overthrowing the former government of that State (Nicaragua) were not citizens belonging to it, nor have those citizens, or any considerable part of them, so far as is known here freely expressed their approval of or acquiescence in, the present condition of political affairs in Nicaragua. Until such shall be the case the President does not deem it proper to receive you, or any one, as a Minister to this government duly appointed by the supreme government of Nicaragua.

Thus, your Excellency will perceive that, under the same ruling, the Minister of England France or Russia, should not be recognized by your government, because you have no evidence that any part of the people of those countries have "freely expressed their approval of, or acquiescence in, the present condition of political affairs" governing them at this moment. You thus necessarily interfere with the internal affairs of other nations.

Regretting that you should have misconstrued my last communication, and that you authorized the late arrest of my person in New York, and thereby the indignity thrown against the government I have the honor to represent, I therefore respectfully request that you will not consider my credentials as before your government for the present. I am, sir, your obedient servant, PARKER H. FRENCH.

and unconditional submission to God's decree, and to her man, whom God has thereby decreed to rule over her.

Moreover this submission is a command, not only of God, but of nature and necessity, for the altered condition of the race after their expulsion from Eden, the increased fecundity of the woman, her natural timidity, the inclemency of the elements, the aggravated ferocity of beasts of prey, and her want of mechanical dexterity and presence of mind, made the protection of the man much more necessary to her, placing her and her offspring in the relation of proteges to him; now, as it belongs not to a protege to demand anything, nor to make or exact any conditions, tacit natural rights being always presumed to be spontaneously and tacitly granted; neither may the woman imperiously demand from the man any rights withheld, such a demand puts her in the attitude of, at best, an equal, a rival, and therefore an enemy, ready, by force to exact the matter withheld, if fair means should fail. But woman may demand nothing from man, till she has ceased to envy and afflict her own sex. As it is, the man justly may claim to be in such matters, but the agent of vengeance, and she would have still serious cause of complaint if he should cease to act in that capacity. Moreover, before they tax man with injustice to them, and reform him in this particular, they ought to begin the work of reformation nigher home, and reform themselves of their jealous tyranny over one another. As protection is, on the one hand the duty of the man to the woman, so confidence in him on her and her children's part becomes an imperative duty and a common sense right. For no one may depend on another, and at the same time suspect them and question their management. It is both absurd and impossible to be at once trusted and suspected. Whoever has the care and management of anything must be left to his own discretion, unannoyed by the meddling of any others, more especially of such as have any great interest involved in it, whose fears or desires will almost surely thwart their calm judgment.

From Our Kansas Correspondent.

ATCHISON, KANSAS TERRITORY, January 1st, 1856.

BRO. JOHN TAYLOR:

Dear Sir: Upon the ushering in of another year, I sit down to write you a few lines. Some time has elapsed since I wrote to you last, since which time but little seems to have been done in the Atchison Branch. There are but few of us, how many I do not know; but I intend to know before the April Conference in St. Louis, if a constant meeting together of some of us to pray and renew our faith will call them out.

I have read the article in THE MORMON, upon crossing the plains with hand-carts, and wish to say a few words upon the subject. I left Great Salt Lake City on a mission, on the 10th day of May, 1854, and arrived on the Missouri River at Table Creek, on the 1st day of July, at twelve o'clock, making fifty-one and a half day's travel. During this journey I walked at least three-fourths of the way, and often thought upon the subject of crossing the plains with hand carts and wheelbarrows, and I am fully satisfied that I can cross the plains as quick in going to the valleys, and haul my hand-cart with a common load, as I crossed them coming out. I intend, if I am alive and well, and it is wisdom to do so, to cross the plains during this year with a hand-cart, if there is a company, so you may set my name down as one of those who say "give me a hand-cart." I intend to build my own hand-cart, upon the pattern laid down in THE MORMON. There has been a little excitement got up here since I forwarded the advertisements for THE MORMON to Bro. J. H. Hart. Some persons think that Doniphan, a river city in this Territory, will be the starting point; others say that they have seen a letter from Elder McGaw, in which he says that Council Bluffs City, Iowa, will be the starting point, and I am called upon on every side to know how it is; my only answer is, I know nothing about a change, but that it is not impossible to change the starting point. I think of the cry of the Ephesians, when they are trying to pump me, "our craft is in danger."

Business at Mormon Grove is entirely suspended, such as building, &c. I am informed by Bro. Amos Gustin—he is spending his time here and at the Grove in teaching and instructing the Saints upon the principles of eternal life—that he will be with us next Sabbath if circumstances permit.

The muttering thunder that threatened war in Kansas a few days since has died away, and the dark cloud of strife has settled back, but only, I believe, to arise in some other place. Loud and long continued thunder indicates a general storm, and when the storm of war commences, won't the people admit that the prophecy given by Joseph Smith upon war is true, whether they canonize him a prophet or not? I rather think they will. May the Lord bless you and prosper the MORMON. I remain your brother in the gospel of Christ, AND. L. SILER.

From our Belfast, (Ireland) Correspondent.

29 GREAT GEORGE'S STREET, BELFAST, IRELAND, Jan. 1st, 1856.

PRESIDENT JOHN TAYLOR:

Dear Brother—Perhaps you think Bro. Mac. has forgotten you, and your valuable "MORMON" because of silence, but let me assure you that such is not the case. You and the Brethren in the Office, are always remembered by the General (Ferguson) and the Boys. It is now two years and better since my arrival in these lands, where I have enjoyed myself very much in the Ministry, and being associated with my Brethren, with whom I was acquainted in Zion, but did not know their real worth until associated with them in other lands. Why! at home we lived with Holy Men, and in a Heavenly Community, the influence was the same; but how changed is the scene this side of our Mountain Home! Here we are surrounded with all kinds of evil; and when we meet one of the Boys, we feel Heaven all around, the Holy Ghost, and Power of the Priesthood is there to animate us, and when the coals from Zion's altar get together, they kindle anew the fire of Mormonism, and weld the links of affection stronger than ever.

Our dear Franklin, Father Spencer, and Wheelock, have been a blessing, yea Fathers to us all; and when I can grasp their hands, and have a God bless you, from them, then I feel glory in my soul, in fact, I feel so from any of the Brethren, knowing they have a right to the Saviour's Promise. "Whomsoever you bless, I will bless."

The work moves well in this Conference, although opposition has been so strong as to deprive us of a room, yet (through the wise counsel, and energetic movements of Pastor Ferguson the past year,) we have increased upwards of fifty members, our Saints here are all full-faced Mormons. We now have a Meeting Room, No. 31 Great George's Street, (in the rear of our residence) registered for public worship.

Bro. John Scott arrived here last September, bringing the spirit of Zion with him; he enjoys the confidence, and lives in the affections' of this people, has an extensive acquaintance, and quite an influence with his countrymen. I feel great good will be done during his ministerial labors in this land.

Brothers Bond, and Craig, left us a short time ago for their new fields of labor in England. Bro. Ferguson and I expect to go home this season, as our names are published among the released Elders. All the Brethren that I am acquainted with from Zion, are well and doing well.

My kind love to all the Brethren with you, wishing you all a very happy New Year, in which Brothers Ferguson and Scott join. Trusting this will find you enjoying the blessings of health, and prosperity in Zion's cause, I am as ever, your affectionate Brother and Servant, JOHN D. T. MCALLISTER.

P. S.—As Elder Scott, is to succeed Elder Ferguson in the Pastoral Charge of this and Dublin Conferences, he wishes his address published in THE MORMON.

JOHN SCOTT,
29 Great George's Street,
Belfast, Ireland.

California Affairs.

Arrival of the Star of the West.

THE steamship Star of the West, Capt. Thomas Miner, from San Juan del Norte on the 19th ult, arrived at a very early hour 29th. She connected at the Isthmus with the steamship Uncle Sam, from San Francisco on the 5th inst., and Manzanilla on the 12th, bringing from both ports in gold and silver for New York, New Orleans and Nicaragua $723,000 and 360 passengers.

The passengers, specie and baggage met with rare dispatch on the Transit, reaching the Atlantic steamship inside of twenty-two hours.

Capt. Scott, the Company's general agent at the Isthmus, has completed the great wharf at Virgin Bay. It is six hundred yards in length by five in breadth, and reaches to the verge of deep water, and so enabling, at all times, the Lake steamers to land and receive passengers and freight in the greatest safety and comfort. The old launches have been necessarily withdrawn altogether.

"NICARAGUA IS PEACE."

Gen. Walker has now eight hundred and fifty Americans under arms—and "the cry is still they come."

The suburbs of the city of Granada have been laid out into building lots—and already sold. A pier is being constructed into the lake, and to be ready for use early in the ensuing month of March.

The Star of the West has experienced strong gales and heavy head seas from N. E. all the distance from Key West to Cape Hatteras.

CALIFORNIA SUMMARY.

The California news is not important.

The Alta California, of the 5th, gives the following summary:

Since the sailing of the last steamer, the weather throughout the State has been unusually cold. Ice has formed in San Francisco and Sacramento about half an inch in thickness, and much snow has fallen in the mining or mountain regions. In this city the thermometer for several days has been in the neighborhood of thirty degrees Fahrenheit, which is the extreme limit of our winter climate.

Kelly, convicted of the murder of Howe, in El Dorado County, is to be hung in Sacramento on the 8th.

A difficulty occurred a few days since at Bidwell's Ranch, resulting in the death of five Indians and one white man. The Indians came into a store kept by Mr. Joseph Schaeffer, and asked for some flour, and demanded it without payment. Upon being refused, they immediately shot him down and killed him. The white residents in the neighborhood gathered together and pursued the murderers, and succeeded in killing five of them.

From the mines we have the most cheering accounts. The recent rains have given the miners plenty of water, and therefore plenty of work.

The Legislature is to meet at Sacramento on the 7th instant, when the new Governor will be inaugurated.

The exports of wheat during the past year, has been quite large, equivalent to 152,566 barrels of flour. Australia and New York have furnished our principal markets for surplus breadstuffs. The total amount of wheat raised in this State during the past year is estimated as high as 2,525,444 bushels. A much larger amount will doubtless be produced this year.

A. C. Haskell, charged with embezzling $4,000 from his employers, was discharged—no one appearing to prosecute him, and it is said he has gone to Nicaragua. The gamblers who had won the money, paid it to his employers.

Joshua L. Silsbee, the Yankee commedian, died on the morning of the 2d.

The body of James Henry, a sailor on board the Independence, was found floating in the bay a few days since. The body of a Swede named Ola Larsen was also found.

The Post-Office has been moved into the lower story of the Custom House building.

Thirty-Fourth Congress—First Session.

SENATE.

Jan. 24, 1856.

The subject of the treaty with England in 1850, was presented by Mr. Clayton, in connection with which he presented a correspondence of Lord John Russell to Mr. Crampton, dated Jan. 19, 1853, in which it is declared that the British Government intend to adhere strictly to the treaty of 1850, and not assume any sovereignty, direct or indirect, in Central America. The propriety of debating this subject, before the organization of the house, was briefly discussed by several members, and resulted in giving the floor to Mr. Cass for that purpose on Monday.

A message was received from the President, on our Kansas relations. After a short debate, the message was referred to the Committee on Territories.

Adjourned till Monday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The House opened by prayer.

Two ballotings were had, the last of which resulted as follows:

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FOURTH BALLOT.

Banks	95	Ricaud	5
Orr	68	L. D. Campbell	3
Fuller	25	Scattering	5

Necessary for a choice. 101.

A message from the President was received, and ordered to be read by a majority of 22.

Adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Jan. 26, 1856.

No vote for Speaker to-day.

Time occupied in debating the Slavery question.

Mr. Fuller offered a resolution, declaring any agitation of the slavery question unwise and unjust to a portion of the American people, injurious to every section, and ought not to be countenanced. Adopted by one majority.

Mr. Meacham (black repub.) offered a resolution, that in the opinion of the House, the repeal of the Missouri compromise was an example for useless and factious agitation of the slavery question, and that it was unwise and unjust to the American people. Adopted by 108 against 93. Adjourned.

SENATE.

JAN. 28, 1856.

Mr. Bigler (dem.) of Pa. appeared, was qualified, and took his seat.

Mr. Fitzpatrick (dem.) of Ala. gave notice that he would to-morrow move for the election of a printer to the Senate.

Mr. Cass addressed the Senate on the subject of Central American affairs. Alluding to the remarks of the National Intelligencer, that this country might be drifting into difficulties, he said that he did not believe it. He thought the ship of State was on its true course, and the pilot doing his duty. Mr. Cass used strong language denunciatory of the positions assumed by the British Government relative to the Protectorate in Central America, characterizing its pretensons in setting up a king over the Mosquito Indians as mere mockery, under which England alone exercised real sovereignty.

Mr. Seward (black repub.) of N. Y. obtained the floor, when the subject was postponed, and the Senate adjourned till Thursday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. Leiter (black repub.) of Ohio, offered a resolution for the election of a Speaker by a plurality vote.

On motion of Mr. Wheeler, (dem.) of N. Y. it was tabled by 106 against 100.

The House then proceeded to take the

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-EIGHTH BALLOT.

Banks	97	Orr	6
Fuller	35	Pennington	3
Edie	2	Harris, of Ill.	6
Williams	1	Necessary to choice	104

Adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

JAN. 29, 1856.

Mr. Stewart offered a resolution (to be concurred in by the Senate) that if no Speaker be elected before the 5th of February the House adjourn till the 15th of May.

The resolution was laid on the table and the House proceeded to vote.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-NINTH BALLOT.

Banks	99	Orr	69
Fuller	34	Scattering	8
Necessary to a choice	106

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

JAN. 30, 1856.

Mr. Clingman, (dem.) of N. C., offered a resolution to elect a Speaker by plurality vote, if no choice shall be made by the next three trials. He said if the resolution was adopted the majority must concur in the election. It was necessary to organize, and two months had been spent in vain expedients to do so. It would devolve on the American party, upon the adoption of the resolution, to take their choice between Mr. Orr and Mr. Banks.

Mr. Greenwood, (dem.) of Ark., made a motion that the resolution be tabled. Lost by a tie vote.

Mr. Clingman's plurality resolution was then rejected by 106 against 110. Adjourned.

Trial of Messrs. Coburn and Dalton, &c.

BOSTON, Jan. 24, 1856.

IN the Municipal Court to-day, Judge Nash presiding, Edward O. Coburn and Benjamin J. Dalton were put on trial for manslaughter in causing the death of Wm. Sumner.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27, 1856.

IT may not, perhaps, be generally known that during the present unorganized condition of the House of Representatives no money can be drawn from the United States Treasury for the payment of members of that branch of Congress. In this condition of affairs A. J. Glossbrenner, Esq., the Sergeant-at-Arms of the last House, and who is still acting in that capacity, having been applied to by members of Congress for money to meet their pressing necessities, procured funds from some of the Pennsylvania Banks on his own responsibility, and paid it out to members, taking therefor their receipts. The bankers of Washington, individually, have not loaned to Mr. Glossbrenner one dollar, but the banks have liberally.

This course of the Sergean-at-Arms has had the effect of depriving some of the brokers on the avenue of many a good, fat shave, and causes much complaint among them.

There is now due to members on account of per diem and mileage, about $290,000, of which it is said Mr. Glossbrenner has paid to them about $80,000.

The Union proposes a union of Democrats and "Americans" on the following principles: That the Democrats return Mr. Orr as the candidate on their platform, and that the "Americans" also nominate him, at the same time reaffirming their own platform—it being understood that neither make any concession of principle while voting for the one candidate.

Navigation is completely closed here. The ice extends far down the bay, and in some places it is frozen so that horses and sleighs have crossed over it.

Interesting Law Case.

BOSTON, Jan. 28, 1856.

THE case of William B. Ely, who claims of Mayor Smith, General Edmonds, and United States Marshal Freeman, $20,000 damages for injuries received at the hands of the military, on the day of the rendition of Burns to slavery, (which was taken from a jury last year on the law qestion as to whether the circumstances existing justified the assault complained of,) came before the full bench of the Supreme Court this forenoon for argument. Hon. John P. Hale and C. M. Ellis are counsel for the plantiff. Mr. Hale was not present. Messrs. B. F. Hallet, Rufus Choate and George S. Hillard appeared for the defence.

The Underground Railroad at Work.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 28, 1856.

A STAMPEDE of slaves from the border counties of Kentucky took place last night. The whereabputs of several of the fugitives having been discovered here, officers, at noon to-day, proceeded to make arrests. Upon approaching the house where the slaves were secreted, the latter fired, wounding two or three spectators, but not seriously. One slave woman, finding escape impossible, cut the throats of her children, killing one instantly, and severely wounding two others. Six of the fugitives were apprehended, but eight are said to have escaped.

Important News from Mexico.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 28, 1856.

BY the steamer Texas, we have Vera Cruz dates to the 22d inst.

Haro y Tamirez had conspired to overthrow the government and establish an empire, but was arrested before his plans could be put into execution. He subsequently, however, escaped and was joined by a powerful army, with which he was besieging Puebla, with good prospects of success.

Generals Pacheco and Seires came passengers by the Texas, having been exiled for their connection with Haro.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29, 1856.

AT a caucus of the Democratic members of the Senate held this morning, eighteen members voted to give the Senate printing to The Union, five opposed.

As Mr. Greeley was leaving the Capitol this afternoon Rust of Arkansas, made an attack upon him, inflicting several blows with his fist on Mr. G.'s head. He also struck him severely on the arm with a stick, as Mr. Greeley was approaching the National Hotel.

The assault is presumed to be in consequence of Mr. Greeley's strictures on Rust's proposition in the House requesting candidats for the Speakership to withdraw from the contest.

The funeral of Com. Morris took place this afternoon. The services were very impressive. The attendance was very large. The President and Secretary of the Navy were present.

Mr. Dallas Accepts the Mission to England.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 29, 1856.

WE are authorized to state that the Hon. Geo. M. Dallas has accepted the Mission to England, tendered him by the President, vice Mr. Buchanan.

Later from Texas.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 29, 1856.

THE steamer Charles Morgan, with Galveston dates to the 28th, has arrived at this port. The wheather continues very severe in the North and Upper Brazos, and the thermometer had fallen as low as one degree below zero, the frost killing a number of cattle.

Affairs of Louisiana.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 30, 1856.

NEW ORLEANS papers of Wednesday and Thursday are received. They contain the message of Governor Herbert, of Louisiana, which treats altogether of local matters, except in the concluding passages, which speak of the aspect of the slavery question, and anticipating continual aggressions, considers the time for compromise as past, and advises preparation for the issue.

Kansas.

A COPY of the following proclamation has been forwarded to Washington from Kansas Territory:

PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, information has been received by me that certain persons will assemble in this city on Tuesday, Jan. 15, A. D. 1856, for the purpose of holding an election, to elect officers for a State government.

And whereas, if such an election should be holden it would, in my judgment, produce great political excitement, disorder and violence in this community—jeopardizing the lives, property and interests of the citizens of this city.

Now, therefore, I, John H. Day, President of the Board of Councilmen, of the city of Leavenworth, and ex officio Mayor of said city, do, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the charter of said city as conservator of the peace, hereby declare and proclaim that no polls for an election shall be opened within the corporate limits of said city upon said 15th day of January, A. D. 1856, for the causes above enumerated. And I do hereby order and empower the City Marshal to enforce this proclamation by summoning a special police force, if necessary.

Given under my hand and the seal of said city, at the Mayor's office, in Leavenworth City, this 12th day of January, A. D. 1856. J. H. DAY, Pres. of the Council.

Attest, SCOTT J. ANTHONY, Register.

We, the undersigned, Councilmen of the city of Leavenworth, have requested that the above proclamation be issued, and do hereby approve the same.

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the trangression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the ufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The fourth is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the 'laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Bien-aimés frères, je désire, en commencant cette publication, vous adresser quelques paroles. Le Seigneur, dans sa bonté et sa miséricorde, a jugé convenable de restaurer au monde l'Evangile primitif, dans toute la simplicité, la beauté et la pureté qu'il avait autrefois, parmi les chrétiens des premiers temps, aux jours de Jésus et de ses Apôtres.

La lumière de la vérité a éclaté au milieu des ténèbres et de la corruption des hommes, en ce temps où le monde est déchiré par mille opinions contradictoires.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Si nous suivons attentivement l'action de Dieu sur le genre humain, nous trouverons que tous ces maux proviennent de ce que les nations et les peuples se sont éloignés de Dieu; et rien moins qu'un retour à lui ne peut arrêter la terrible tempête, calmer la mer furieuse, tranquilliser les passions capricieuses des hommes, et rendre au monde moral, religieux et politique, cet ordre qui règne dans la création physique de Dieu.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui règle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

C'est la religion que vous croyez et que vous enseignez, qui est destinée à restaurer l'homme et la terre; c'est elle qui ramènera les peuples à Dieu, qui les retirera du chaos moral, religieux et politique du monde, et les rassemblera en un peuple qui sera conduit et reconnu de Dieu; qui sera honoré devant les hommes et les nations; et qui aidera à établir et à développer le royaume de Dieu dans ces derniers jours.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaitraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? Ou devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévolleront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaisance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours? Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconque demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Evangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés?" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit?" Nous le faisons aussi. Crurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains par la foi en Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "l'espoir en la résurrection?" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.?" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.?" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous avons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions à son Eglise actuelle.

Nous demanderons ce qu'il y a d'inconséquent en tout cela? Lequel est le plus inconséquent, de croire et de pratiquer les Ecritures, ou de dire, nous les croyons et puis de les nier à notre organisation, à nos doctrines, à nos œuvres.

Mais des visions, des prophèties, des révélations n'ont-elles pas une tendance à conduire à l'enthousiasme et au fanatisme? Oui, les visions humaines et les délusions de Satan l'ont. Mais si le Seigneur eût pensé que ses visions et ses révélations fussent préjudiciables aux hommes, pourquoi les aurait-il données dans les anciens temps? Si elles doivent être préjudiciables de nos jours, certainement elles l'eussent été autrefois. L'enthousiasme, la folie et le fanatisme des hommes est une chose; autre chose est Dieu révélant sa volonté aux peuples pour leur organisation, leur stabilité, leur consolation, leur union, leur savoir, leur édification, et pour l'établissement de son royaume.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaitre Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Les philosophes ont scruté l'homme, la terre, les œuvres de la création pour trouver un vrai système, Ils ont tous eu leur jour. Ils ont introduit beaucoup de bons principes, mais quant à l'amélioration du monde, là, ils ont fait défaut. Leurs systèmes, quelque bons que soient plusieurs d'entre eux, sont bien loin d'embrasser l'objet désiré: "Ils ont été pesés dans la balance, et trouvés trop légers."

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaître que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence, ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les ecès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lasciveté, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votre lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

JOHN TAYLOR.

A Card to the Saints.

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "THE MORMON." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish, you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

THE MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
The Greatest Blessing of the Age for the Cure of Diseases of Man or Beast requiring External Application.
"BRING hither the poor, the halt, the lame and the blind," if you would have them healed of their many infirmities. We boldly and fearlessly assert that the Mustang Liniment will positively cure Rheumatism. Let any who are afflicted with that most painful complaint try it thoroughly according to directions, and if they are not cured we will give them their money back. What more can we say? It will also cure the Piles. Thousands have tried it—and all were cured. Bruises, Sprains, Sores or Eruptions fade away as if touched by the magician's wand. Its application to burn or scald acts like "oil upon the troubled waters." The tempest of pain and agony is soon stifled, and the patient is hushed to quiet and peaceful slumbers. "There is balm for every wound," and that balm is the Mustang Liniment. Everybody that sells medicine keeps it for sale. "Hold your horses," and if they are crippled, galled or sprained, use the Mustang Liniment.

THROUGH BY EXPRESS!!!
This is to certify that the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT has been used quite extensively in the stables of Adams & Co.'s Great Southern, Eastern and Western Expresses, for curing galls, chafes, scrofulas, sprains and bruises, and it has proved very effectual. Many of their men have also used it on themselves and their families, and they all speak of its healing and remedial qualities in the highest terms. One of our ostlers got kicked and badly cut and bruised on his knee; as usual, the Liniment was resorted to, and the soreness and lameness was soon removed, and it was perfectly well in three or four days. We have no hesitation in recommending it as a valuable preparation to be used externally on man or beast.
J. DUNNING,
Foreman of Adams & Co.'s Express Stable, N. Y.
We take pleasure in recommending the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT to all our friends and customers as the best article we have ever used for sores, sprains or galls in horses. We have used it extensively and always effectually. Some of our men have also used it for severe bruises and sores, as well as rheumatic pains, and they all say it acts like magic—we can only say that we have entirely abandoned the use of any other Liniment.

MR. WILLIAM JOHNSON, for the last five years a citizen of Augusta, and now the proprietor of the fine hotel in Savannah, called the Marshall House, has favored us with the following certificate:
The MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT has been used in my family, and on my farm, for a great variety of diseases requiring an external application, and has never failed to give immediate relief and effect a permanent cure. I have cured several cases of rheumatism that had resisted the skill of our best physicians. It has cured ringworms by a single application, chilblains in a few days, toothache, frost bites, cuts, sores and corns by a few applications; nervous headache cured entirely. In fact, I have used it for almost everything, and it has always cured. I consider it the best medicine I have ever used. WILLIAM JOHNSON.

I have used the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT in my stables upon my horses in cases of sprains, bruises, galls and sores of different kinds, incident to a large number of horses. I used it upon a horse that had been saddle galled for nearly a year. I had tried many remedies, and one in particular, that I had been in the habit of using for years, and had generally proved successful. Nothing appeared to give it any relief until I tried the Mustang Liniment, which cured it in a very short time. I consider it an invaluable remedy, and would not be without it. WM. H. HOLMES.
SAVANNAH, Geo., June 25, 1852.
We have also used the MUSTANG LINIMENT extensively in our stable, and we find it to be the best remedy we have ever used for sores or lameness of any kind.
SAWYER, HOLLISTER & CO.
The above are from two of the largest livery stables in the State of Georgia.
B. H. MEEKINS, 189 Walnut street, Cincinnati, was confined to his bed under the treatment of a physician some six weeks, with Neuralgia, of the whole of his right side, leg, arm and face; his sufferings were indescribable, and the only cessation from the most agonizing pain, was while under the influence of opium or morphine. His doctor finally advised him to try the MUSTANG LINIMENT; he did so, and in two days was able to go about his business perfectly cured.
This is to certify that I have used the MUSTANG LINIMENT recently in a very severe case of sprain. The right hip was so badly sprained and bruised that fears were entertained that it was out of joint. I obtained a bottle of Mustang Liniment and used it freely for four days, when the soreness and pain were all gone and the hip joint was well.
I have also used the Liniment for the Piles, with which I have been afflicted for many years. Its effects were wonderful. Free applications night and morning for a week have perfectly cured me. Thousands of persons are suffering with this painful disease, and you are at liberty to make this statement public, that all may learn what will cure them.
My brother also states that he has used the Mustang Liniment with the most perfect success in two cases of severe bruises, at our factory in Williamsburgh, and says he considers it invaluable about an establishment where a large number of men and horses are at work, and constantly liable to serious accidents. EDWIN R. BARRON.

☞ While hundreds are rejoicing in the happy escape from smarting pains, occasioned by Burns, Bruises and Sprains, thousands of others will buy the Mustang Liniment and experience the same happy results.
☞ The popularity of the Mustang Liniment is a "fixed fact," therefore those suffering with Ulcers, Old Sores, Eruptions, and like complaints, need not be reminded of its superiority to give it a trial.
☞ The Ladies will always rejoice at the happy experience of curing eruptions, sore nipples, broken or caked breasts, piles and corns, after a thorough trial of the Mexican Mustang Liniment.
☞ The Mustang Liniment will give the most undoubted satisfaction to any one giving it a trial for stiff joints, stiff neck, or sore throat; it has proved itself efficacious in these complaints in many very stubborn cases.
☞ If you have any ugly, painful corns upon your feet, get a bottle of Mustang Liniment and apply it twice a day for eleven days, and the trouble will be gone.
